Rule by Few Is Denounced By Roosevelt In Texas Talk

He Asks Line of Defense Manned by Average Business Leaders.

Cheered by 50,000 At Bowl in Dallas

'Good Neighbor' Policy Extension Also Plea of Chief Executive.

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., June 12.—President Roosevelt today lunched a vigorous attack on monopoly, and urged extension of his "good neighbor" policy to Mexico and other countries, in a climactic wind-up of his speaking tour of Texas.

In an informal luncheon talk earlier in the day, the President said that while the United States was "world minded," its help to foreign nations beset with dangers would be "merely moral."

Facing a cheering crowd estimated at 50,000 in the Cotton Bowl centennial stadium here, the Chief Executive declared "chiselers" and "prophets of evil" were "still with us" and added that if "labor is to be a commodity," the Nation would find itself one of "boarding houses instead of a Nation of homes."

Freely discussing national questions, he said:

"Today we have restored democracy in Government.

"We are in the process of restoring democracy in opportunity."

The throng sitting in a broiling sun that sent the theremometer to 95 cheered this utterance and applauded again as he asserted:

"In our national life, public and private, the very nature of free government demands that there must be a line of defense held by the yeomanry of business and industry and agriculture.

"Not the generalissimos, but the small men, the average men in business and industry and agriculture—those who have an ownership in their business and a responsibility which gives them stability.

"Any elemental policy, economic or political, which tends to eliminate these dependable defenders of Democratic institutions, and to concentrate control in the hands of a few small, powerful groups, is directly opposed to the stability of government and to democratic government itself."

In his luncheon address to Centennial officials at a downtown hotel, the President praised "national unity" and said:

"We have become not only nation-minded, but world-minded; that is why we are interested in peace."

The President, saying he was worried about dangers abroad, declared he wanted to keep America's "feet on the ground," and extend its policy of friendliness and good will."

He wanted to make it clear, he said, that American help in settlement of foreign troubles would be confined to "moral aid."

He Is Given Ovation.

The President was given an ovation as he entered the sun-baked stadium decorated with green bunting and American flags. Thousands cheered and let loose a torn-paper storm as his open car toured the downtown streets on the way to and from the bowl.

After the luncheon he started by motor for Fort Worth, where he was to spend the night with his son, Elliott.

In his address, the President said he had taken "great happiness in these past three years in the lessening of sectionalism which is apparent on every hand," adding:

"More and more we have been thinking nationally. That in itself is good, but it would not have been good if at the same time we had not come to understand more deeply that the national good-neighbor policy must extend also to those neighbors who lie outside our national boundaries.

"You in Texas, whose boundaries extend for hundreds of miles along those of our sister Republic of Mexico, can well understand what the good-neighbor policy means throughout the Americas.

"We seek to banish war in this hemisphere; we seek to extend those practices of good will and closer friendship upon which peace itself is based."

The President asserted the "prophets of evil who plagued" reforms in Texas "were blood brothers of some who seek to operate on a national scale."

He praised the Lone Star State's efforts to curb "special interests."

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., June 12.—Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and three other passengers were saved from a fiery death today by two daring pilots who raced a flaming monoplane to earth while fire raged in their compartment.

Ed Heffley, of Houston, Tex., the pilot, was seriously burned about the face and arms. Co-pilot Eugene Schacher, Houston, was less seriously injured. Jones helped pull them to safety.

Jones gave them full credit for saving his life and the lives of his fellow passengers, Former Gov. and Mrs. W. P. Hobby and Joe Toomey, Jones' secretary, all of Houston.

All of the four escaped injury except Hobby, who was cut slightly over the right eye.

The blazing monoplane, with the pilot and co-pilot grimly facing the flames in their compartment, dived at a rate estimated by Heffley at 275 miles an hour.

The plane landed in a field on C. Edwards' farm near Ferris, 20 miles south of Dallas, skidding to a smok-

Civil Service Spread Urged On Democrats

Ramspeck Will Call Up Extension Measure in House Monday.

He Seeks to Forestall Republicans and Enact 'Permissive' Bill.

By James D. Secrest.

Seeking to keep the Republican Party from outdoing the Roosevelt Administration by adopting a merit system plank in its platform, Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, next week will call up a bill to extend the civil service system to all executive establishments of the Federal Government.

Ramspeck, author of the measure, reported favorably by the committee May 27, predicted yesterday that the bill will be adopted by the House at least before Congress adjourns.

The Ramspeck bill is permissive in that it authorizes the President by Executive order to extend the classified civil service.

The first section of the measure reads:

"That notwithstandig any provision of law to the contrary, the President is authorized by Executive order to place within the classified service as defined by the act of March 27, 1922, any position or group of positions in the executive branch of the Federal service which may now or may hereafter be exempted by statute from the provisions of the civil service act of January 16, 1883."

Several Thousand Involved.

If enacted into law, the President could bring under civil service all or part of the several thousand employes of the emergency units now outside the merit system.

A section which may arouse objections among Government employes provides that:

"The incumbent of any permanent position which is affected by any executive order which may be issued under authority of this statute, who does not already have a classified status, may acquire such status in his position only upon receiving a new appointment as a result of an open competitive examination held by the Civil Service Commission for filling the position."

Held Reply to Criticism.

This provision, Ramspeck pointed out, would answer any criticism that the Democratic Party is trying to blanket into the civil service all of its patronage appointees.

It is the understandnig of the committee that the President would not take into the merit system any of the New Deal agencies which he does not expect to make permanent.

Explaining that the Attorney General has ruled no authority exists for bringing into the civil service employes of Federal agencies specifically exempted by act of Congress, the committee in its report stated:

"The committee feels that the President should have this authority in order that such of the agencies referred to as may be considered permanent can be brought into the classified civil service by executive order."

Postmaster Bill Doubtful.

Ramspeck said he does not expect to get House action on his companion bill to extend the civil service system to first, second, and third class postmasters at this session, however, because of the opposition of party candidates in the districts where a postmastership is still worthwhile patronage.

Both these proposals are included in the La Follette-O'Mahoney bill introduced last week in the Senate, but the measure will not be acted on at this session.

Ramspeck said he does not hold out much hope that the Celler bill to repeal the "marriage clause" of the economy act will be voted upon in the House before adjournment unless Congress remains in session beyond the Democratic National Convention.

He has applied for a special rule on the measure, but the Rules Committee has so far not granted it.

Landon, Knox Plan to Launch Vigorous Campaign at Once; Hamilton Elected Chairman

Governor Is Outspoken, Looks Fit at Topeka Press Conference.

Kansan Asks Early 'Move on Enemy'

Nominees Trade Wires Recalling 1912 Bolt to Bull Moose.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., June 12.—Vigorously outspoken to reporters, Gov. Alf M. Landon topped his first day as the Republican Presidential nominee by asserting tonight that "I favor an immediate move on the enemy."

Swiftly he dispatched a message of confidence to the Cleveland convention; congratulated Col. Frank Knox, his running mate; outlined by telephone his choice of John D. M. Hamilton to head the national committee, and arranged to meet Knox and others here Monday for a study of strategy.

Casting aside the reticence which characterized his preconvention attitude, he said he and Knox would meet with a sub-committee of the Republican National Committee to "plan for the campaign."

Asked if he expected to move on "the enemy country," Landon smiled and replied:

"Yes—but I'd like a definition of the enemy territory."

"Right now is the right word," the Governor shot back when he was asked if he planned to start the campaign immediately.

"That's why I am asking the subcommittee to come here right away. This is going to be a real campaign from now on."

"Do you plan a front-porch campaign or will you go on a speaking tour?" he was asked.

"I don't know. Those plans will be in the hands of the committee and that is one of the things we will discuss at our meeting Monday."

He indicated he planned to take a very active personal part in the campaign.

"Will Col. Knox do most of the rough riding?" He wa asked.

"No," he answered emphatically. "I'll do my end of it."

The committee, he added, probably will make preparations for the formal notification of his nomination. Both Topeka, the State capital, and Independence, Landon's home town, want to be hosts, and the Governor said he had no idea which city would get the honor.

Tired Expression Gone.

The tired expression Landon took to his office after the tumultous events of last night was missing when he faced more than 25 reporters at an afternoon press conference.

The Governor sat erect in his chair with his elbows resting on his desk, and followed closely the questions asked of him.

"I'm a little hoarse, but otherwise I feel fine," was his description of himself.

He wore a dark gray flannel suit, white shirt and a blue satin tie. His shoes were black.

His reply to many queries which dealt with his campaign plans was a terse "too early."

His program for the evening included his usual horseback ride—then "go to bed as early as possible."

To Col. Knox he telegraphed:

"I welcome the renewal of our comradship in the same great cause for which we fought together under the leadership of Theodore Roosevelt—the cause of 'the larger Americanism.' May we be given the strength and the wisdom to go forward along the trail he so bravely blazed."

Both Aided Bull Moose.

Landon and Knox were participants in the Bull Moose split, which Theodore Roosevelt led from the Republican Party in 1912.

Although he retired at 1 a. m., by 8 a. m. he was posing again for

Knox Named as Landon Mate After Vandenberg Rejects Bid

Chicagoan Is Nominated for Vice President on First Ballot.

By Felix Bruner.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, June 12.—Delegates to the Republican National Convention were hurrying home tonight, eager to organize their States for the campaign which they hope will sweep into the Presidency Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, and into the Vice Presidency Col. Frank Knox, of Illinois.

The Corn-Belt ticket, on which the East failed to gain representation for the third successive time, was completed this afternoon with the unanimous nomination of Knox.

The delegates went into the convention hall confident that Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, would emerge as Landon's running mate. They departed three hours later without a vote having been cast for anyone except the Chicago newspaper publisher.

Delegations conferred in huddles on the floor. Messengers went from one to another. Everyone asked everyone else: "What will Vandenberg do?"

Hamilton, Vandenberg Confer.

In a room in the auditorium building Landon's fiery young manager, John Hamilton, was conferring with the Senator from Michigan. Outside newsboys were waving papers carrying great headlines saying:

"It's Landon and Vandenberg."

Below the headlines were pictures of the Governor and the Senator, side by side, in typical post-convention fashion.

There remained no question that Vandenberg was the choice of the Landon organization. Hamilton was attempting to persuade him to withdraw his statement that he would not accept the nomination.

The opening of the convention

was delayed. It had been called for 10 a. m., but at 11, Chairman Bertrand Snell had made no move to bring it to order.

At 11:10 Hamilton, grim-faced, strode into the hall. He was wearing a hat. That was the prearranged signal to officials and State delegation leaders that Vandenberg did not choose to run. From that moment there was no doubt Knox would be the nominee.

Previously the report had spread that Knox had withdrawn in favor of Vandenberg. This rumor was strengthened by the fact that Knox already was on his way to Chicago and that his headquarters had announced he was not a candidate for

New Sub-Committee, 2 Nominees to Confer Monday in Topeka.

Shake-Up Expected In Party's Officers

All Republican Groups Included Among 17 to See Governor.

By Franklyn Waltman.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, June 12.—John Hamilton, the red-haired, youthful Topeka lawyer who piloted Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas to an unusual victory as his party's Presidential nominee, today was elected chairman of the Republican National Committee.

His selection followed by a few hours the action of the convention in unanimously nominating Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago, as the Republican Vice Presidential candidate, thus giving the party for the second successive time an all-Western ticket—Landon and Knox.

At the same time word came from Topeka that Gov. Landon was determined to launch a vigorous campaign—as he put it, "an immediate move on the enemy."

To that end, the Governor announced he planned to confer with a sub-committee of the new National committee and with Col. Knox at Topeka Monday.

Hamilton immediately after his election presented a resolution naming the sub-committee of 47 members to consult with Gov. Landon regarding the selection of other officers of the party's national organization and to map the campaign. This was adopted without a dissenting voice.

This action was taken as indicative of the intention of Gov. Landon and Hamilton to make a sweeping reorganization of the national committee staff.

Hamilton assumed the chairmanship of the committee without oratory or fanfare. The committee loudly applauded him after his selection, but he went immediately to work calling up motions to set in motion preliminary steps for the Presidential campaign.

He deferred addressng the committee until this work had been completed and his remarks then were brief and concise.

"We are going into a vigorous campaign—a hard campaign," he said. "There are no speeches left in me and I shall not make one. But I do ask one thing.

"There are going to be mistakes and errors of judgment made because we are going to do things. And when you do things you are bound to make mistakes.

"I ask your indulgence for such mistakes that are made, in the hope that we are going to elect a Republican President this year, which I am confident we are going to do."

The special sub-committee which will go to Topeka to confer with Gov. Landon was authorized to arrange notification ceremonies for Gov. Landon and Col. Frank Knox, select all officers of the national committee, except the chairman, and to name the important executive committee. The latter group was authorized to act in the name of the full committee between meetings.

The Landonites in picking the personnel of this special committee gave representation to all factions within the party. Among those named were "Old Guard" members like Charles D. Hilles, of New York; Ralph E. Williams, of Oregon, and Daniel E. Pomeroy, of New Jersey, as well as Ezra Whitla, of Senator William E. Borah's Idaho, and Earl B. Warren, of California, friend of Herbert Hoover.

Fletcher Recognized.

Included as an ex-officio member of the special committee was Henry P. Fletcher, retired chairman of the Republican National Committee. This was regarded as a graceful recognition of the work done by Fletcher during the last two years and as evidence of Gov. Landon's desire to have the former chairman continue to participate actively in party affairs.

Others comprising the special committee are:

Hamilton, George A. Ball, of Indiana; Mrs. Bertha Baur, of Illinois; Robert P. Burroughs, of New Hampshire; R. B. Creager, of Texas; Representative J. Will Taylor, of Tennessee; Mrs. Paul Fitzsimmons, of Rhode Island; Walter S. Hallanan, of West Virginia; Mrs. John E. Hillman, of Colorado; Mrs. H. H. Sayre, of Oklahoma; Mrs. Marion M. Scranton, of Pennsylvania; Harrison E. Spangler, of Iowa, and Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts.

Veteran Bonus Printed by U. S. In Record Time

37,000,000 Certificates Are Run Off in 4-Month Rush Job.

Uncle Sam yesterday completed his largest bond issue in history and last-minute plans were made for Monday night's city-wide distribution of veterans' bonus certificates.

By tomorrow, the last of 37,000,000 bonus bonds will be sent from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing for national distribution by the division of loans and currency, Treasury Department.

Production work at the bureau started last February and for four months, under the supervision of Director Alvin W. Hall, presses have been running full speed to complete the job in record time.

With the job finally done, a number of temporary employes added to the regular bureau force to aid in the bond printing, will probably be dismissed. Director Hall was unable to estimate the number, indicating discharge notices would not be handed out until the bureau is again operating on normal schedule.

Meanwhile, with postal authorities completing final arrangements for first bond deliveries Monday, Treasury Department officials announced that present regulations will cover bonus collections in cases of deceased veterans.

Provisions have been made to allow cash bond redemptions to deceased veterans' heirs or legal representatives of estates.

In order to receive payment, however, the legal representative of a deceased veteran's estate must be duly appointed and sign a request, together with the original bondholder's name and address. This request for payment must be signed in the presence of, and be certified by, an authorized "certifying officer."

Upon receipt of their bonus bonds, veterans yesterday were warned to make a note of the various numbers in case of loss or theft.

At 6 p. m. tonight, over radio station WJSV, Postmaster Vincent Burke will explain final details of postoffice arrangements for bonus bond deliveries.

Pay Alien Bonds In Old Dollars, U.S. Firms Told

Can Not Take Advantage of Devaluated Currency, N Y. Court Holds.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 12.—Supreme Court Justice Samuel H. Hofstadter ruled today that American corporations cannot discharge their obligations to foreign bondholders with the present United States dollar.

Adhering to a previous ruling of the Circuit Court of Appeals, the State court denied the contention of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation that under the gold clause act adopted by Congress June 5, 1933, it could take advantage of the depreciation of the dollar in meeting payments on bond coupons.

It was the first time the question has been raised in the State Supreme Court.

The court granted a summary judgment against the steel corporation, holding the gold clause act could not be applied to aliens and that the company must abide by its agreement to pay $25 on each coupon if presented in New York, 5 pounds in London and 62 guilders in Amsterdam.

The suit was brought by the Nederlandsche Middenstandbank, Joseph Houthakker and Soesman Konijn, all of Amsterdam. They sued to collect interest after the steel corporation had failed to pay in Dutch guilders.

Counsel for the plaintiffs had argued that as the Supreme Court had refused to review the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals it had virtually sustained it.

The court's decision also granted a summary judgment against the Lackawanna Steel Co., Bethlehem subsidiary, in a suit brought by the Zurich General Accident and Liability Insurance Co., Ltd., of Zurich, Switzerland, involving payment in Swiss francs.

'Lucky' Larson and Aid Killed As U. S. Plane Crashes Off Cuba

Lieut. Robert W. Larson, who was nicknamed "Lucky" Larson by his fellow Navy pilots for escaping the Akron and Macon dirigible disasters, was killed when his scout seaplane crashed near Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

Killed with him when the plane dived into the water near the bay entrance shortly after dawn Thursday was his machinist's mate, Sidney L. Harris.

A graduate of the Naval Academy in 1924, Lieut. Larson, 33, was one of the air pilots attached to the dirigible Akron in April, 1933, when the giant airship plunged to disaster, carrying 73 of its crew to death. Larson escaped death by not being aboard the airship—none of the air pilots being carried on the cruise. They were supposed to join the airship in the morning.

Lady Luck smiled on Larson a second time in February, 1935, when the Macon, to which he was transferred after the Akron catastrophe, went down into the Pacific. Larson was one of the 80 enlisted men and officers who were rescued by nearby cruisers.

The cause of the crash in which Larson and Harris were killed was not known, the Navy announcement stated. Officials reported that the plane sank before rescue was possible.

A graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy in 9124, Larson served for three years aboard the U. S. S. Rochester. After qualifying as a naval aviator at the Naval Air Station in Pensacola, he was attached to aircraft squadrons of the battle force. Following his service with the Akron and Macon, last fall, he was shifted to the Memphis.

Thank You, Washington!

THREE YEARS ago today, the first issue of The Washington Post under the ownership of Mr. Eugene Meyer, carried the following statement by the new publisher:

"It will be my aim and purpose steadily to improve The Post and to make it an even better paper than it has been in the past. It will be conducted as an independent paper devoted to the interests of the people of Washington and vicinity, and hopes to have their interest and support."

DURING THE past three years, the promise of that statement has been constantly before those on The Post charged with the responsibility of producing for the community, each day, a steadily improved newspaper. And, during the past three years, the hopes expressed in that statement have been realized . . . for, as evidenced by sturdy circulation growth and steadily increasing advertising linage, The Post, moving to the front rank of great American newspapers, has received the wholehearted and ever increasing support of the community.

ON THE THIRD anniversary of the new Washington Post, the publisher welcomes the opportunity to express appreciation of that support and to renew his pledge.

Borah Declines To Reveal Role In Landon Race

Silence Stirs Conjecture as to Support, Party Bolt or Inaction.

Senator Borah, the most enigmatic figure in the 1936 campaign, now has everyone guessing whether he will support Gov. Alf M. Landon in his race for the Presidency.

Back at his desk in the Senate Office Building yesterday after an all-night train ride from Cleveland, the Idahoan, with the satisfied and secretive smile of the sphinx, blandly told newsmen he has "no statement" to make on the part he will take in the coming campaign, thus leaving the way open for him to support Landon, bolt the Republican Party, or adopt a quiet middle-of-the-road policy.

Those who have observed the political career of the "Lion of the Rockies" expect him to swing into the middle of the road when the campaign actually gets under way.

But yesterday the shaggy-haired Senator from Idaho was playing the role he loves best, that of the disturbing question mark.

There was one issue, however, upon which he left no doubt of his attitude. That was Gov. Landon's telegraphed message to the convention in which he put his own interpretation on Borah's monetary plank. The message was read to the convention 20 minutes after the Idahoan had boarded a train Wednesday night for Washington.

"I am not clear as to what it means," Borah said yesterday. "If it means he is for the gold standard, of course I am wholly in disagreement with that. But he says he is not in favor, as I understand it, of returning to the gold standard 'unless it can be done without penalizing our democratic economy and

None Satisfied To Full Extent By Platform

But G.O.P. Rank and File Deem Planks a Good Compromise.

By Robert C. Albright.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, June 12.—Convention delegates clambered aboard the Republican platform today, gave each plank a try-out, declared some boards weak and some too strong, but, on the whole, decided to take it.

The joists nailed on at the last minute by Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas helped them in making that decision. Bankers and businessmen liked his gold declaration, and labor was pleased at his civil-service position and his stand for a constitutional amendment—if needed—to give the States power to control wages and hours.

No one was completely satisfied. However, the important thing is that the rank and file of delegates, with a few notable exceptions, think it is a good compromise.

One of the most unusual admixtures of liberalism and conservatism ever struck off by a political convention, the platform contains sops to both left and right wingers, and even a handout for the man in the middle. This enabled everyone to say something nice about the platform.

Herman M. Langworth, of Kansas City, Landon follower and chairman of the resolutions committee, said he thinks it is "a forward looking and constructive" document. Senator Borah's friend, Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., of New York, said he thinks "it is an excellent platform with the exception of the gold plank." And Jim Watson, of Indiana, former "conservative," said:

"We are all very well satisfied."

Hamilton's Hat Gives Tip-Off That Vandenberg Meant 'No'

By Sidney Olson.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, June 12.—John Hamilton, his square jaw gripped tight, strode rapidly along the aisle in the press stand toward the platform at 11.15 a. m. today.

He was wearing his hat.

Therefore the convention nominated Col Frank Knox, of Illinois as Vice President.

For that was the signal that Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan was firm in his refusal to be nominated.

Reporters clustered around Hamilton, begging for a tip-off. He declined to comment, but whispered in a newsman's ear that Vandenberg had refused, but would accept if drafted.

A tall, bony, bald-headed man, delegate R. P. Creager, of Texas, broke in to say:

"Let me interrupt for one question, Mr. Hamilton. Are you wearing your hat?"

The question sounded superfluous, as Hamilton was very evidently wearing his hat, a new straw with a bright, blue band.

Hamilton, his face pale and tired after his long and fruitless discussions with Vandenberg, said slowly:

"Yes, I'm wearing my hat."

Creager turned and ran up the steps to the platform to tell Chairman Bertrand Snell, National Committee Chairman Henry P. Fletcher, and the group of bosses, young and was held two hours after the Republican National Convention nominated Col. Knox for the Vice Presidency and adjourned sine die. Originally it was planned to hold the meeting tomorrow, but in an effort to permit members to leave for their homes tonight, it was moved up.

Knox, Landon Plan Campaign Drive at Once

The meeting was called to order by Williams, the Oregon committeeman, vice chairman of the committee and its eldest member in point of service. He announced he had conferred by telephone with Gov. Landon to ascertain his wishes and that the Presidential nominee had proposed Hamilton as the committee chairman and asked that no action be taken regarding other officers until a sub-committee consulted with him.

Hilles, the last of the "Old Guard" to board the Landon bandwagon and reputed at one time to be anxious to block Hamilton's elevation to the committee chairmanship, made the motion nominating the Landon campaign manager.

"It is with a great deal of pleasure that I nominate John D. M. Hamilton, a member of this committee from Kansas, for the chairmanship," Hilles simply said and sat down.

Immediately cries of "second the nomination" came from around the room. A motion was made to close the nominations. Whitla moved that the secretary be instructed to mark the ballot unanimously for Hamilton and this was carried without a dissenting vote.

Receives Applause.

Even though Hamilton was sitting in the front row, but four feet from the presiding officer's desk, a committee of six members was named "to escort him to the chair." He received a round of applause as he arose and mounted the rostrum.

He then laid before the committee a resolution providing for the selection of the committee to visit Gov. Landon. This promptly was adopted, other routine motions followed in quick order. The roll of the new committee was called.

Edward F. Colladay, the District of Columbia committeeman, presented a resolution asking that the national committee recognize the Wilkes group as the authentic Republican State committee in the Capital. This was referred to the executive committee with power to act. Hamilton made his brief speech and the committee was adjourned.

Such will continue to be the efficiency of the new Republican Party, asserted Landonites. Not only will swift and direct-to-the-point meetings of the National Committee be held hereafter, but such attributes will mark the conduct of the entire campaign, it was asserted.

Course Already Mapped.

There is reason to believe that Gov. Landon and his advisers already have mapped out—details, of course, being subject to change—the course of the Landon campaign. For instance, it is reported that tentatively Gov. Landon has decided to launch his campaign at once, not waiting, as is usual, for the end of the summer.

He is said to be prepared to deliver a message on social security legislation to a special session of the Kansas Legislature early in July.

Although this message nominally will be addressed to the Kansas Legislature, it actually will be delivered to the country over national radio hook-ups. Another radio speech a few days later is on the schedule.

Gov. Landon, with his family, then will go to a ranch in Colorado for a vacation of approximately two weeks. During this period he will prepare his acceptance speech, which will be made at Topeka around August 5. This event is planned as a "great typical prairie State" affair and it is expected that tens of thousands of Kansans, Missourians, Oklahomans and Republicans from other Western States will attend.

It has been proposed that shortly after his acceptance speech Gov Landon will make his first campaign trip, journeying to New England for several speeches in that cool climate during the latter part of August. On this trip he may also speak in northern New York. The Landonites assert the Presidential nominee will visit every section of the country in an unceasing drive on the New Deal.

Rail Labor Assails 'States' Rights' Cry

Labor was warned yesterday by six railroad labor unions to beware of the cry of "States' rights."

"American workers should not be deceived by this gesture," the six organizations said in their weekly "Labor." "It comes from the men who applauded the Supreme Court when it slaughtered railroad pensions, farm relief, the NRA and similar progressive legislation which gave American producers something of a square deal."

The cry of "States' rights," the union said, "is exactly the issue the reactionaries raised in 1860 when they were terrified by the prospect that Lincoln and the new-born Republican Party might free the slaves."

The unions—those of the switchmen, locomotive engineers, machinists, electrical workers, railroad telegraphers and the maintenance of way employes—added:

"The Supreme Court must be forced to obey the Constitution and America's economic problems must be settled on a national basis."

Monopoly Plank Uses Language of Commoner

Lincoln, Neb., June 12 (AP).—T. S. Allen, former Nebraska Democratic Party chairman, said today the words in the anti-monopoly plank adopted by the Republican National Convention were first used by William Jennings Bryan 40 years ago.

Allen, brother-in-law of Bryan, said it was "refreshing" to see a Republican convention approve the words: "A private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable."

Bryan was denounced as a dangerous radical and a demagogue when he first used this language, but times have changed," Allen said.

Landon Shows He Will Make Smart, Vigorous Fight; Not Likely to Fumble the Ball.

By Franklyn Waltman

CLEVELAND, June 12.—Sufficient already has happened to indicate rather clearly that Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, will make one of the most vigorous and smartest fights ever conducted by the Republican Party for the Presidency. Those who feared the Kansan would pursue a front-porch campaign from Topeka worried needlessly. Moreover, there will be less pussyfooting than is usual in a Republican Presidential nominee.

WALTMAN.

The best indication of how Gov. Landon will handle himself came last night when he scooped up the opportunity given to him by a compromising party platform to strike out in a straight-forward fashion on views which he regards as fundamental. He got his campaign off to a flying start.

One reason why Democratic leaders are so confident of the outcome of this year's campaign is their firm belief that the Republicans may always be counted on to fumble the ball at a crucial moment. The belief is based on the record of the Republicans for the last eight years and, on that basis, is justified.

But the days of Republican fumbling are over, it would seem. Gov. Landon, with the assistance of a brilliant staff of realistic advisers, appears as good a quarterback as President Roosevelt at his best. Moreover, hereafter when a ball is fumbled it appears that he will be ready to pounce on it.

Take the Republican platform as an illustration. There are some splendid things about that document. But also there are some atrocious things about it. I have not found anyone among the Republican hordes in this city who likes everything in the platform. Nor have I found anyone who cannot find something he likes.

The platform was the result of compromises in an effort to placate, on the one side, the remaining members of the "Old Guard" and, on the other, Senator William E. Borah. The result is contradictory planks and weasel-worded statements in places.

Just as an example, the farm plank contains this pronouncement: "We propose to furnish Government assistance in disposing of surpluses in foreign trade by bargaining for foreign markets selectively by countries both as to exports and imports." Now that is a general description of tariff reciprocity. Next line of the plank asserts: "We strenuously oppose so-called reciprocal treaties which trade off the American farmer."

The latter sentence does not necessarily conflict with the first. It might be taken as a backhanded indorsement of reciprocal treaty agreements. It condemns agreements "which trade off the American farmer." Without doubt so do President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull condemn agreements "which trade off the American farmer."

But when the tariff plank is reached, the platform, after a preamble lauding the protective tariff, asserts that "we will repeal the present reciprocal treaty agreement law. It is futile and dangerous. Its effect on agriculture and industry has been destructive. Its continuation would work to the detriment of the wage-earner and the farmer." The plank goes on to promise restoration of the flexible tariff principle "in order to meet changing economic conditions here and abroad," and asserts "we will adjust tariffs with a view to promoting international trade, the stabilization of currencies and the attainment of a proper balance between agriculture and industry."

Read those quoted excerpts in the last four paragraphs; compare one with the other, and then conclude whether the Republican Party favors the reciprocity principle in dealing with the tariff and foreign trade problems. You can reach a "yes" decision as well as a "no" decision—prove either one.

The climax, however, comes in the plank which pledges the party to "use every effort to collect the war debts due us from foreign countries." It is a totally unrealistic declaration taken in conjunction with the tariff plank. How else can Europe pay those debts, except by shipping goods here?

The same conflicts and inconsistencies could be pointed out in reference to several other planks. But, after all, the written party platform is not important. Few people read or remember it until after the party gets in power and then it is recalled by the opposition to point how the President has broken his platform pledges.

The important thing is what the candidate says. A virile candidate like Gov. Landon makes his own platform. And this he has started to do. The refreshing thing about Gov. Landon's course is that he is doing so openly and above board—not even waiting until he takes the stump. His message to the convention, prior to the nomination, is evidence that candor and forth-right statements can be expected from him.

Had there been any doubt about his nomination, it is entirely possible that his message on the platform would have clinched it for him—so favorable an impression did it make. The point is that the opportunity to take such a forthright stand came to him as a result of the fumbling and blundering of the resolutions committee on the currency plank and that urging State supervision of minimum wages and maximum hours for women and children. And he grabbed the opportunity.

The Landon forces took over the Republican Party organization today by the election of the determined, dynamic but pleasant John Hamilton as chairman of the Republican National Committee. This meeting lasted but 40 minutes, compared to sessions of several hours on similar occasions in the past. The trim Hamilton went immediately to work. His speech was two minutes long. On previous occasions of this kind such meetings have been marked by flamboyant and usually meaningless oratory from "Old Guard" boys. The change in the party organization is as clear as day is from night.

* * * *

Incidentally, two former Washington correspondents served in the preconvention campaign as the idea men and strategists for the two successful Republican candidates. Roy A. Roberts, now managing editor of the Kansas City Star, was the chief adviser to Gov. Landon. Leroy T. Vernon, of the Chicago Daily News, served in a similar capacity to Col. Frank Knox.

If they continue in those roles they will be pitting their ideas this year against those of another former Washington correspondent with whom they once rubbed shoulders—Charles Michelson, Democratic publicity director. All three are members of the Gridiron Club and close friends.

photographs and an hour later made his customary eight-blocks walk from the executive residence to his offices in the Statehouse.

Among the deluge of congratulations were those from former President Herbert Hoover, Knox, later selected as Landon's running mate, and William H. Murray, former Democratic Governor of Oklahoma.

"I send you my heartiest congratulations," said Hoover. "You have a great task for the American people. I pray you will have Divine help."

Gov. Landon said he had no plans to leave Topeka over the week-end, indicating he will be here tomorrow when the Kansas Republican delegation returns from Cleveland to greet him.

Chicago, June 12 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, wired Gov. Alf M. Landon tonight he would be "delighted" to confer with the Presidential nominee in Topeka, Kans., Monday.

The Chicago publisher's telegram, which answered an invitation from his running mate, read:

"We be delighted to come to Topeka next Monday. I left Cleveland by automobile last night and just arrived, hence the delay in acknowledging your gracious message of congratulations.

"We are at Armageddon again and I prize highly the opportunity under your leadership to battle to a victorious conclusion in a far graver crisis than that of 1912.

"Both political and economic conditions call for a display of the same great qualities which endeared us both to Theodore Roosevelt. I know that you have them and I gladly place myself under your orders and will undertake to discharge every assignment you give me with all the vigor and ability I possess. We go forward to victory."

Dawes Sends Message.

Topeka, Kans., June 12 (U.P.).—Gov. Landon today received a message from Charles G. Dawes, Vice President to Calvin Coolidge, saying:

"Your immediate demonstration of the qualities of high leadership was exactly that which was needed to make most effective the party's fight to preserve American principles. As an old Marietta and friend of your friends there I send congratulations."

Landon and Dawes are former residents of Marietta, Ohio.

Storm Shatters Hope Of Scaling Mt. Everest

Darjeeling, India, June 12 (AP).—The last chance that Hugh Ruttledge and his mountain-climbing expedition would be able to scale Mount Everest was believed lost today when a storm developed in Bengal.

Weather reports showed it moving rapidly northward and expected to reach Mount Everest in 36 hours.

(Thus far the expedition, in addition to the usual dangers of snowslides and icy footing, has had to contend with a monsoon and torrential rains in the early stages of the climb.)

G. O. P. Chiefs To Settle Fight Of D.C. Factions

Committee Refers Colladay Recognition Demand to Executive Unit.

By Edward T. Folliard.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, June 12.—The Republican National Convention adjourned here today without definitely settling the row between the two factions in the District of Columbia.

The Republican National Committee met this afternoon in the Cleveland Hotel.

Edward F. Colladay, Republican National Commiteeman, for the District, whose delegates were seated by the convention, made a motion before the national committee that his group be given official recognition.

James Wilkes was elected a month ago by the Colladay group as chairman of the Republican State Committee and Clyde D. Garrett as secretary.

Leo A. Rover, former District Attorney for the National Capital, was State chairman of the Republican State Committee prior to this convention. He and Colladay split a month ago, and each brought his own delegation to Cleveland.

Objects to Motion.

When Colladay arose before the national committee today to move that his officers be recognized, Harrison Spangler, of Iowa, objected, saying Colladay's motion was "out of order."

John Hamilton, Gov. Landon's campaign manager, moved that the case of the District of Columbia be referred to the executive committee.

This committee, in accordance with Hamilton's motion, will have full say in the District contest.

The executive committee probably will be appointed in a week or so. Inasmuch as the national committee, the credentials committee and the convention itself, favored the Colladay group, the executive committee of the Republican National Committee is expected to be favorable also.

National Committeeman Colladay tonight predicted that the Landon-Knox ticket would sweep the country in November.

Both Landon, Knox Joined 1912 Bolt

Cleveland, June 12 (AP).—Both Alf M. Landon and Frank Knox, the Republican 1936 standard bearers, bolted the party to support Theodore Roosevelt for President in 1912.

Again in 1924, the Presidential nominee left the party to support William Allen White in his unsuccessful race for Governor of Kansas.

In 1912, Landon's father was one of Kansas' "big four" delegates to the Republican National Convention. The others were White, Henry J. Allen, and Victor Murdock, all editors.

The four, joined by young Landon, went over to Roosevelt when he left his party. Taft was nominated and defeated by Woodrow Wilson.

Knox is reputed to have had considerable influence in persuading Roosevelt to run as a Progressive. Knox became chairman of the party headquarters in Chicago.

Cadet Graduates Hear Pershing

West Point, N. Y., June 12 (AP).—Gloomy prospects for world peace were pictured by Gen. John J. Pershing today as he warned United States Military Academy graduates that "no one can tell when we shall again need our armies."

The wartime commander of American forces in France, who handed diplomas and commissions to 276 cadets on the fiftieth aniversary of his own graduation from West Point, urged "the selection of safe leaders in government."

Demanding "courageous leadership" to preserve democracy, Gen. Pershing said "the men selected * * * should actually lead their people in thought and guide them in forming their judgments, instead of catering to their every whim in order to remain in office.

"The situation in the world today is far from reassuring," he said. "No one can tell when we shall again need our armies and none can foresee the effect upon us of another world catastrophe. Loyal citizens cannot shut their eyes to the possibility of war. They owe it to all that is sacred to make ample preparation against an evil day."

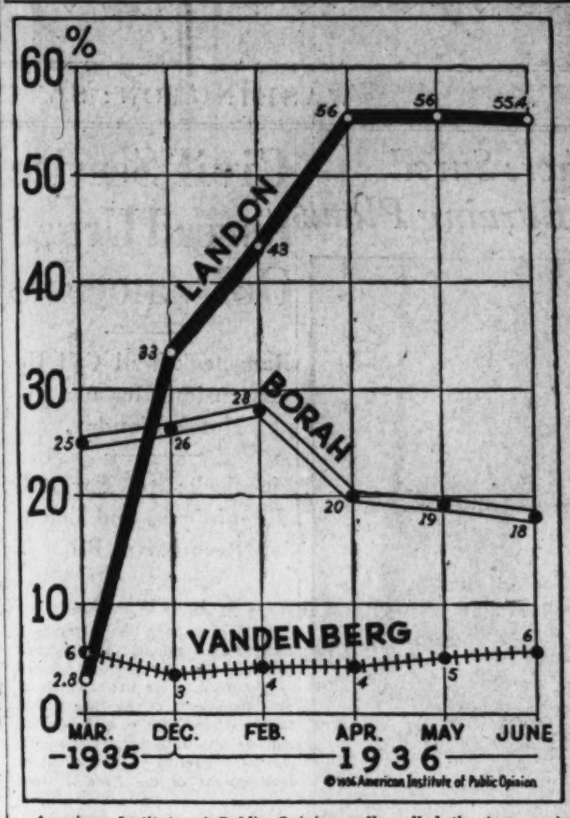
The Landon Skyrocket



American Institute of Public Opinion polls called the turn again by pointing to the nomination of Landon. From 2.8 per cent in March, 1935, Landon zoomed to 33 per cent the following December and to an outright majority in Republican preference by April.

Landon Nomination Foretold In Six Successive Post Polls

By Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, June 12.—The nomination of Alf M. Landon on the first ballot at the G. O. P. convention was not unforeseen.

It has been foreshadowed since December in Nation-wide polls of the American Institute of Public Opinion, published in The Washington Post and more than 70 other newspapers.

Representative Republicans in every State in the Union have voted their preference in six sucessive polls, and the results have shown the same runaway tendency in public opinion that has been demonstrated at Cleveland.

The first poll—conducted in March, 1935—found Landon in ninth place among Republican favorites. Ahead of him ran such familiar stalwarts as Senator Borah, Chief Justice Hughes, Herbert Hoover, Theodore Roosevelt, jr., Senator Hiram Johnson, Senator Vandenberg, Ogden Mills and Senator Norris.

Landon polled only 2.8 per cent of the Republican vote.

But by the following December there had been a wide reversal of skies. Landon was up from ninth to first, with 33 per cent of the popular vote. In his race to the lead, the Kansas Governor had outdistanced not only the stalwarts but also popular newcomers like Col. Frank Knox.

Senator Borah had dropped into second position behind Landon, a position he occupied with diminishing popular support right up to the convention.

By February it was clear that Landon was still "going away" from his rivals. The Institute sampled opinion among Republican voters and found Landon at 43 per cent, with Borah trailing at 28 per cent.

By April Landon had jumped to 56 per cent and an outright majority of the Republican preference vote.

The following table shows how his lead grew during the past six months, with the vote for Borah and Vandenberg included for comparison.

	Landon.	Borah.	Van'berg.
December	33%	28%	3%
February	43	28	4
April	56	20	4
May	56	19	5
June	55.4	18	6

Why do Republican voters choose to support Landon?

From all over the United States—like voices in a giant symposium—Republican voters have submitted their comments to the Institute of Public Opinion. Below are the comments most frequently received, in order.

"He balanced the budget in Kansas."

"He is conservative and will uphold the Constitution."

"He is for the farmer."

"He is a real business man."

"He is a Progressive."

"He is a Westerner."

This Sunday, an Institute poll in The Washington Post will report public opinion on this question:

"Would you favor changing the President's term of office to one tersm of six years?"

Young G. O. P. Elects Officers, Maps Campaign

Bradley Chosen Leader at Cleveland; Group Urged to 'Stop Roosevelt.'

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 12.—A call to "stop Roosevelt" was made at a meeting of the Young Republican National Federation tonight at which its members rounded out their organization for the coming campaign.

J. Kenneth Bradley, 33-year-old Westport, Conn., attorney, was re-elected chairman. Other officers are Katherine Ford, Illinois, co-chairman; Henry Budd, Kansas, first vice chairman; Dorothy E. Paulson, Minnesota, second vice chairman; Lowell Paget, Oregon, third vice chairman; John Y. Wills, Pennsylvania, fourth vice chairman; Walter Swanson, Washington, fifth vice chairman; Mrs. Wilbur P. Davis, Massachusetts, secretary; Mrs. Worth Henderson, North Carolina, treasurer; Tom Ball, Texas, general counsel, and Gordon Allott, Colorado, associate general counsel.

Bradley called the federation to order shortly after adjournment of the Republican National Convention.

"Young Republicans everywhere are pleased with the liberal character of the Republican platform," Bradley said, "and are convinced that the convention gave us a national ticket that can win the election in November."

His remarks produced a demonstration of enthusiasm headed by held aloft an Illinois banner which Harold Halfpenny, Chicago, who he had brought from the convention floor.

Gov. Bridges of New Hampshire, who had been mentioned for the Vice Presidency, and Deely Nice, nephew of Gov. Nice of Maryland, were active at the meeting.

Bridges called upon Young Republicans to "stop Roosevelt."

"I know Mr. Roosevelt personally," Bridges said, "and I have come to the conclusion that he is a dangerous leader. He has no definite program.

"Unless we stop Roosevelt there will fall upon us a staggering burden of debt."

Knox Typifies Party's Rugged Individualism

Devotee of 'T. R.,' Editor Earns High Station as 'Crusader.'

Soldier, business man, political leader and crusading editor, Col. Frank Knox, nominee of the Republican party for Vice President, typifies the rugged individualism of which his party boasts.

A devotee of Col. Theodore Roosevelt when the famous "Teddy" led the Rough Riders up San Juan Hill in the Spanish-American War, Col. Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, one of the Nation's leading newspapers, has fought much of his way through life with his keen wit and his fists.

Typical of the man who will be the running mate of Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, are the high spots of his life, collected at random.

Besides fighting the Spaniards under Theodore Roosevelt in the War with Spain, he struck out, as a crusading young editor, to clean up Saulte Ste. Marie in the old days, when it was a wide-open border-town. "Toughs" shot out the windows of his editorial offices, but he fought ahead, undaunted.

Right-Hand Man.

He saw strenuous activity as one of "T. R.'s" right-hand men in the 1912 Bull Moose campaign.

Pioneering in the field of journalism more than two and a half decades ago, he established successful newspapers at Saulte Ste. Marie and Manchester, N. H.

At one time he directed the entire system of newspapers owned and controlled by William Randolph Hearst. His tenure of responsibility lasted four years, and his salary was $150,000 a year.

During the World War he commanded an ammunition train in the Argonne and at St. Mihiel, after enlisting in the Army as a private.

At the age of 57, he began his career as editor and publisher of the Chicago Daily News.

After service as a party spokesman through his Daily News editorials, he found himself a Republican Presidential prospect, and traveled 25,000 miles around the country as a Republican salesman. Latest high light in the meteoric career of Col. Knox was his nomination for Vice President at the convention in Cleveland yesterday.

Put Over Osborn.

His first political success came when, as a young editor in Sault Ste. Marie, he "put over" the campaign of Chase Osborn for Governor of Michigan.

Col. Knox went to Chicago from Manchester, N. H., where he was co-proprietor of two newspapers, the Leader and the Union.

Although he is 62 years old, Col. Knox, as far as his appearance is concerned, might have found the fountain of youth Ponce de Leon sought.

Stocky and powerful, he is a little more than average height. His face is ruddy. It beams good health. His hair is moderately thick and quite sandy. In his youth it was red.

His youth was spent to a large extent on the athletic field. He was a halfback at Alma, College, Mich., and even today he puts himself through strenuous exercises. His voice is positive and aggressive. In his manner he is hearty and informal.

Typically Successful.

"A typical successful business man," a friend said of him as the 1936 political campaign got under way.

"Frank made his way to the top, from a poor boy's start. Nobody greased the way or gave him a shove up. He was a man of action. He was a fighter."

Back to the Soo go his admirers for tales of his fighting nature—tales that would do credit to many a work of lore and fiction of the gold rush days.

In 1902 the mining town, where copper was brought from the earth in the upper penisular, was a booming, lawless corner of the United States.

Through its streets swarmed sailors from the ore boats, trappers, lumberjacks, floating laborers and construction crews. It was a pioneer town in a pioneer country. In retrospect, Col. Knox recalls there were 100 saloons for 10,000 population.

Immediately, as a publisher, he launched a crusade for law and order in his new "Evening Journal."

But the frontier town was not ready for such a campaign. Strenuous action ensued. As a warning, someone shot the windows out of his office. This time Knox backed his editorials with his fists. He knocked a drunken saloon keeper down his office stairs when the invader stormed in "to get good and even and thrash the editor."

As a result, he won new respect for his "clean-up" campaign.

Born in Boston.

Born in Boston January 1, 1874, Col. Knox was christened William Franklin Knox. He later shortened this to Frank, and now uses that form exclusively.

His ancestry was Scotch-English. His father operated a market. In modest circumstances, the family was hard hit by the depression of 1874, and moved westward, to Grand Rapids, Mich.

It was in Grand Rapids that Frank Knox took his first job at the age of 11, carrying papers. He earned $2.25 a week, and this fund went into the family purse.

He began his newspaper career in Grand Rapids, breaking in on the Herald when he returned from the Spanish-American War. On the same staff was Senator Arthur Vandenberg.

Knox took command of the Hearst papers in Boston while he still held to the two dailies he had acquired in Manchester, N. H. He quit his job with Hearst in 1930.

Persuaded Roosevelt.

Knox, according to most accounts, persuaded Theodore Roosevelt to make the historic "Bull Moose" campaign of 1912, and he became chairman of the Progressive Party's headquarters in Chicago.

Today he speaks of the "Rough Riding" Colonel as his hero.

Returning from the war with Spain in 1898, Knox married Miss Annie Reid, after a romance that started in the days on the campus of Alma College. They began housekeeping on his $12-a-week salary.

They are childless.

Only once before has Col. Knox run for office. In 1924 he sought nomination for Governor of New Hampshire. He was defeated by John C. Winant.

Chicago now is headquarters for Col. Knox. He and Mrs. Knox, however, also maintain an apartment in Washington.

N. C.'s 26 Ballots To Go to Roosevelt

Raleigh, N. C., June 12 (AP).—Democrats of North Carolina today pledged their 26 votes at the national convention to President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner and adopted a platform favoring changes in the sales tax, but saying the levy could not be abolished entirely.

J. Melville Broughton, of Raleigh, the keynoter, painted the record in the Nation of "this inspired and courageous leader," Franklin D. Roosevelt. Almost every reference to Roosevelt and Gov. J. C. B. Ehringhaus brought cheers from the 3,500 persons.

Delegates to the national convention named A. D. (Low) Folger, of Surry County, national committeeman. Miss Beatrice Cobb, of Burke, was re-elected committeewoman.

Gov. Ehringhaus was named chairman of the delegation, Senator J. W. Bailey, of Wake, was placed on the platform committee, Representative R. L. Doughton, of Allegany, on the rules committee, and Charles H. Robertson, of Orange, internal revenue collector for the State, on the credentials committee. Hugh Mitchell, of Statesville, was elected delegation secretary.

4 Runoff Votes Slated In Florida on June 23

Tallahassee, Fla., June 12 (AP).—The State canvassing board called today for a run-off election June 23 in four State-wide contests in which the primary vote failed to give any one candidate a majority.

It ordered Judge W. Raleigh Petteway, of Tampa, and Fred P. Cone, of Lake City, to seek the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Representatives R. A. Green, of Starke, and W. J. Sears, of Jacksonville, will enter the second primary for the congressional nomination in the Second District, and Joe Hendricks, of Deland, and W. J. Steed, of Kissimmee, will do so in the new Fifth District.

The board said State Superintendent of Public Instruction W. S. Cawthon, of Tallahassee, and Colin English, of Ocala, would have to stage a run-off for nomination to Cawthon's office.

Landon 'Just a Good Baby,' Says Nurse Who Attended His Birth

Pennsylvanian, 85, Describes Governor as Easy to Get to Sleep, 'Nice and Plump' as Infant; Expects to Work for His Election.

Editor's note: Mrs. Mary Reed Baird, 85, who, as a nurse attended the birth of Gov. Alfred M. Landon at West Middlesex, Pa., was elated today when informed her "baby" had won the Republican Presidential nomination. Her story of Landon's birth as told to the United Press, follows.

By Mrs. Mary Baird.

By the United Press.

West Middlesex, Pa., June 12.—I'm glad to know that my baby—my Baby Landon—has been nominated. I thank the Lord for it. If he's elected and can take us out of the mess we're in, he's a superman—or in just plain words, a "hummer."

I know you're interested more about "baby's" birth than you are about how I feel about his nomination—and you must excuse me if I call him "baby." You see, that's what we all called him the two months he lived here in West Middlesex before his family moved away.

Baby was born on a Wednesday. I won't forget it. It was during the daytime—between 11 in the morning and 1 o'clock in the afternoon. I think the date was September 9, 1887, but I'm not sure.

Father Was Away.

Anna—she was the Governor's lovely mother, and it's too bad she couldn't have been spared to enjoy the honor conferred on her son—had come to her parents' home to await the arrival of her first born. Mr. Landon, the baby's father, was an oil worker and was working at the time in the fields somewhere in Ohio, I believe.

I was a practical nurse and Mrs. Mossman (Mrs. William Mossman, the Governor's grandmother) and Dr. Livingston were the only ones there at the time Gov. Landon was born.

Oh, no! He wasn't any trouble at all. He was what we call "Just a good baby." He hardly ever cried. And I've been nurse to a good many babies in my time—the twenty-seventh in 1918—but "Baby" Landon was one of the best.

Why, it never entered my mind once when I used to rock him to sleep that I was holding a future President—and I believe that's just what he's going to be, too!

Easy to Put to Sleep.

He wasn't hard to put asleep. We'd just take him in our arms and start rocking him. It didn't even take any cradle songs. He was the strangest baby that way—all you'd ever have to do was be real quiet and pretty soon he'd be fast asleep before you'd know it. He'd never make much fuss—he'd just "squiddle" his head down on my arm and close his eyes.

Who'd ever think that Little Middlesex would be sending out a President?

He was a lovely child, nice and plump. I'd say "baby" weighed a good 9 pounds when he was born—it's been so many years I can't really remember exactly. He was just as healthy as he could be and he certainly was brought up by a good family—you know, his grandfather, Mr. Mossman, was the pastor of the Methodist Church here for years.

I'll never forget the time we took him to Sharon (Pa.) to have his first picture taken. Mr. Mossman, Mrs. Landon and myself made the five-mile trip by train to the photographer.

"Cute in First Picture."

I got one of the pictures later on, but I must have mislaid it somewhere around the house. He was cute in his first picture—I'll find it for you some day.

When "baby" was about 2 months old the father came for the family. I think they went from here to Ohio. Someone told me it was over around Marietta.

I didn't hear much of the Landons until I began noticing in the papers that "baby" was running for Governor out in Kansas. I started saving the pieces out of the papers until now I have three or four books full of clippings about him.

Now that he's a grown man and got the nomination, if it's really his ambition to occupy the White House I will pray that he reaches his goal.

Certainly I'm going to vote for him, even though I can't get out much farther than my gardens anymore. I'm going to talk him up, too, to everyone who comes to see me.

Last February 7—that was my eighty-fifth birthday—Mr. Landon sent me a nice letter congratulating me. And he sent me 25 American Beauty roses, too. I still have some of the petals in my Bible.

Were the Landons glad it was a boy? No, it didn't make any difference to them—they were tickled he was a nice healthy baby.

Knox and Wife Date Romance To College Days

Couple Hears of Victory Together; Home Absorbs Mrs. Landon.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, June 11.—The Michigan girl who in 1898 married her college sweetheart when he was a $12-a-week reporter, today heard, with him that he—Col. Frank Knox—was the Republican Party's choice for the Vice Presidency.

En route from the convention in Cleveland to Chicago they received the news as they motored through Indiana. They had left before the final balloting.

Mrs. Knox, the former Annie Reid, and Col. Knox met when they were students in Alma College in her home town of Alma, Mich. She was a year behind Col. Knox in school.

They were married December 29, 1898, shortly after Col. Knox returned from the Spanish-American War, where he served with Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders. At that time Col. Knox—now the publisher of the Chicago Daily News and co-publisher of two Manchester, N. H., papers—was a reporter on the Grand Rapids Herald.

Of a retiring disposition, Mrs. Knox consistently has side-stepped the spotlight, preferring her garden at the couple's Manchester home, of which she is very proud.

Although heartily in accord with her husband's political views, Mrs. Knox preferred to remain in the background at the Cleveland activities, saying she did not believe wives should plume themselves on what their husbands do.

Topeka, Kan., June 12 (AP).—Duties as mistress of the Kansas Executive Mansion engulfed Mrs. Alf M. Landon tonight as the household settled back to routine out of which the nomination of her husband as Republican Presidential candidate lifted it yesterday.

In one respect, however, condi-tions were not normal—Nancy Jo Landon, 4, and John Cobb, 2, were not pattering about the house, remaining during the day at the home of their grandmother, Mrs. S. E. Cobb. They spent their first night away from home as vociferous admirers thronged the lawn of the Executive Mansion last night.

Refreshed, poised and calm, the attractive Mrs. Landon spent the afternoon answering a three-day accumulation of mail. During the morning she had her first press conference with a group of newspaper women. She said, however, she did not plan regular press conferences.

Of one thing Mrs. Landon was sure—she does not intend to take an active part in the coming campaign.

"My place is not out in front," she said.

Tonight the Landons dined alone, as they did last night—an infrequent occurrence at the mansion, where the Governor has a habit of bringing guests home for dinner.

The date she and the children, together with Peggy Anne Landon and John Landon, the Governor's daughter and father, will go to a ranch in Estes Park, Colo., depends on how hot it becomes in Kansas the next week or two, she said.

Because of her augmented mail, Mrs. Landon has installed Mrs. Mildred Creighton, formerly a stenographer in the Governor's office, at the mansion as her secretary.

Mrs. Landon planned a trip to the dentist tomorrow morning.

Landon's Fight 'Uphill,' Assert British Papers

'Little Known' Candidate's Nomination Is Called Typical of U. S.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 13 (aSturday).—The "hybrid program" of Gov. Alfred W. Landon of Kansas, Republican nominee for the Presidency, will need a big landslide to bring him into the White House, the London Post commented today on his selection.

Only three o fthe nine morning papers commented on the Kansan's nomination, and The Times described him as "remarkably reticent" for an aspirant fo rthe Presidency. But it contended the fact he is little known in national political politics is al lto his credit.

"Between now and November," The Times commented, "he has to make himself accepted by the country as a real rival of the President with a definite personality and a definite policy. It will be an uphill task."

The Telegraph said:

"This sudden emergence of a compartively unknown is characteristic of the ways of American political parties, which prefer not to take a further chance with a beaten leader."

French Reaction.

Paris, June 12.—Nomination of Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas as Republican candidate for the Presidency of the United States, and the party's keynote speech have revealed the Republicans in a veritable quandary, two French newspapers observed here tonight.

The authoritative and conservative Le Temps insisted there was "nothing new or clarifying in the candidacy of Gov. Landon."

L'Information, leading financial organ, said the nomination was a "compromise, in which the Republicans have realized they must oppose something to Roosevelt interventionist policies other than the outmoded prospect of a return to the 'good old times' of a few years back."

"The regime to which the Republicans appear to be rallying in theory is that of rigorous application of antitrust laws guaranteeing open competition as against the reign of the big monopolies."

This view, however, appears contrary to the Republicans' own theories of mass production, L'Information said.

The newspaper also observed there were inconsistencies in the Republican program for free agricultural production concurrent with a regime of protective tariffs.

"Just how will Landon be able to impose the necessary social reforms on his party?" the newspaper asked. "It is obvious that economic evolution has shattered all the old political beliefs and has disproved established theories."

"Some of the principles enunciated in the program always have been in the party's platform," Le Temps said, "but one seeks in vain to find by what constructive effort the Republicans wish to replace what Roosevelt has achieved.

"From all appearances they desired to find a new man whose modesty pleases the large public and who yesterday was virtually unknown. That the New Deal is to be condemned by the spirit of the American Constitution cannot be disputed. Certain decisions of the Supreme Court prove it sufficiently.

"But one does not discern very clearly what constructive policy the Republicans oppose to Rooseveltism. Much has been said in the last few months of the rejuvenation of the Republican Party and its reorganization with a view to energetic action. In the program, adopted unanimously at Cleveland, one sees nothing of the sort."

Knox Named on First Ballot

the nomination. But there was no announcement he would not accept the nomination.

With the appearance of Hamilton in the hall, Snell rapped for order. Hamilton strode to the speaker's stand.

"For three months," he said, "it has been my privilege to be actively engaged in behalf of the candidacy of the man you nominated for President last night. He will be elected in November. Your votes last night represented the untrammeled decision of the Republican voters.

"It is the wish of your candidate that you choose his running mate under the same circumstances."

Hamilton told the convention that if the name of more than one candidate was placed in nomination, Kansas wanted the privilege of voting last, so as not to prejudice the convention.

Almost immediately the roll call for nominations began. Alabama yielded to New Hampshire and youthful Gov. H. Styles Bridges put the name of Knox in nomination. The Vice Presidential candidate is a native of New Hampshire.

The roll call went on. Arkansas yielded to New Jersey and Senator Barbour, of that State, nominated Walter E. Edge, former Senator and former Ambassador to France.

When the name of Florida was reached, Judge A. E. Galloway seconded the Knox nomination. Both the nominating and seconding speeches for Knox were greeted with applause and shouts.

Everyone knew that Maryland had a candidate in the person of Gov. Harry W. Nice, but the name of Maryland was called three times before there was a response. Then J. Cookman Boyd, of Baltimore, responded with a long speech during which the audience grew so restless and noisy that Snell had to appeal for order. He finally reached the point and placed Nice's name in nomination.

A roar went up from the crowd as the name of Michigan was called. Vandenberg's name had not been placed in nomination, but a voice coming through the loud speaker from the Michigan delegation said:

"Michigan is going to cast 38 votes for Senator Arthur Vandenberg."

Snell stopped the applause with the pounding of his gavel and announced he had a statement from Vandenberg. The statement, addressed to Snell, said:

"If my name is proposed for Vice President, please say to the convention that I wish it to be withdrawn. This is conclusive. I am deeply convinced that I can serve more effectively and in far more needful capacity on the floor of the Senate during the Landon Administration. Meanwhile, I can and will serve just as loyally and vigorously and effectively in the campaign itself. With great appreciation of the suggestion I request that my name be withdrawn."

It was obvious that every effort was being made to avoid a contest for the Vice Presidency. There was a desire not to mar a feeling of harmony that resulted in the almost unanimous nomination of Landon. It is probable that some of the Illinois and some of the Pennsylvania votes could not have been swung to the Michigan Senator.

The convention continued with nearly a dozen speeches seconding the Knox nomination. When Wyoming was called the name of Col. Arthur W. Little, of New York, was placed in nomination, Little, who was actively campaigning for the Presidency, was commander of a Negro regiment in the World War. This ended the nominations.

With the end of the roll call for nominations, Edge came to the platform and announced that in the name of unity and harmony he wished to withdraw his name. Nice followed with a plea to the Maryland delegation to vote for Knox. Snell said he had been authorized to say that Little would withdraw his name.

The balloting began and was soon over. Knox was the unanimous choice and the harmony of the convention was unbroken.

Snell announced he had a telegram from Landon. Landon said he had been moved deeply by the nomination.

"Your declaration of principles is a charter of political freedom," he said. "It keeps faith with the cherished belief of our people that the future will be better than the present of the past."

He said he placed his faith in the fitness of the American people to govern themselves.

Former Senator Henry J. Allen of Kansas told the convention Landon invited all the delegates to visit him in Topeka and urged that as many as could go home by way of the Kansas Capital.

A resolution naming Snell as chairman of the committee to notify Landon of his nomination and Senator Steiwer of Oregon as chairman of the committee to notify Knox was adopted. Routine resolutions were read and adopted perfunctorily.

The convention adjourned to meet again in 1940. The Republican campaign was officially under way.

Landon's Daughter Leaves for Topeka

By the United Press.

Cleveland, June 12.—Peggy Anne Landon's part in her father's Presidential campaign will be "whatever Daddy wants me to do."

She was en route home to Topeka, Kan., tonight to find out what that part would be.

"Whatever Daddy says goes," 19-year-old Peggy Anne explained. She came to see the Republican National Convention nominate her father for the Presidency and had intended to visit relatives in Oil City, Pa., and perhaps take in the sights of New York. But today she talked by telephone with "Daddy" and took the next train for Topeka.

Her biggest disappointment of the convention, she said, was that she couldn't yell the way she wanted to when her father was nominated.

"I wanted to yell," she said, "but so many people were looking at me, and every time I started to do anything somebody made a picture. So I just couldn't holler like I felt like doing."

Gov. Landon's Telegram

Cleveland, June 12.—The following telegram was received by the Republican National Convention from Gov. Alf. M. Landon today in response to a message telling him of his nomination:

"The message conveyed by the telegram from the convention moves me deeply. When the summons of which it tells is duly delivered I shall respond and, humbly relying upon Him in whom is the source of all true strength, I shall take the responsibility. You have given me heart to face this responsibility by the splendid work you have done in your convention.

"Your deliberations are the living proof that there are men and women able enough and brave enough to see the facts of our national problems and to meet them in the American way.

"This is the spirit inherent in our party name. The Republican Party of Thomas Jefferson was dedicated to establish the rights and institutions of free men upon this continent. The Republican Party of Abraham Lincoln was dedicated to the maintenance of a government of the people, by the people and for the people. You have dedicated the Republican Party of today to giving new life and reality to these eternal principles in the light of changing needs and conditions.

"Let us accept all of the obligations of this legacy and unite to make it serve as noble a purpose in our time as ever it served in the times out of which the earlier Republican parties were born.

"We shall succeed by bringing to our task the same devotion to human welfare and the common good which inspired those in whose steps we now follow.

"Your declaration of principles is a charter of political freedom and economic justice. It keeps faith with the cherished belief of our people in a future that will be better than the present or the past.

"Let us put our trust in the courage and the common sense of the American people, in their love of liberty and of justice—never doubting their firm resolve to repossess themselves of their Government under a leadership worthy to serve the cause of our beloved country. And to prove our faith in the fitness of the American people to govern themselves, under a Constitution of their own making let us go forward to meet the issue in the example of Mr. Lincoln, who 'always addressed the intelligency of men, never their prejudice, their passion or their ignorance.' This is the road to duty well and bravely done, as I believe—the road that leads to the victory for which we fight, and pray we may deserve.

Happy to Serve As First Mate, Knox Declares

Learns of His Nomination En Route to Chicago; Praises Platform.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 12.—Back home from the Republican National Convention which made him its Vice Presidential nominee by unanimous vote, Col. Frank Knox said tonight:

"I am happy to serve as first mate; I am proud to serve my party as its candidate for Vice President."

In the publisher's office of his newspaper, the Chicago Daily News, the one-time "rough-rider" of the Spanish-American War met interviewers later in the afternoon to make his first formal statement on his selection as campaign-partner for Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, the Presidential candidate.

"Don't forget," he told the gathering of newsmen, "that the big news of the convention was the nomination of Gov. Landon. The Governor is on the bridge as captain of the ship.

Happy to Serve.

"I am happy to serve as first mate.

"Naturally, I feel a deep sense of appreciation for the compliment paid me in the nomination for Vice President by unanimous vote.

"As a matter of fact, the unanimity with which both places were filled is not only unprecedented but is highly significant of Republican unity as the party enters upon the most crucial campaign fought in this country since 1864.

"I am proud to serve my party as its candidate for Vice President under the leadership of the strong, efficient Governor of Kansas.

"His nomination came to him from the freest, least-controlled convention in Republican history.

"Reflecting Desires."

"More than that, in very large measure, the unanimity of the delegates had its spring in their belief that they were accurately reflecting the desires of the people who sent them to the convention to choose a standard bearer.

"It was because of the unmistakable evidence that the Landon sentiment came from the very grass roots that other Republican aspirants for the Presidential nomination withdrew.

"Naturally, I am proud of the fact that my nomination was characterized by the same unanimity."

The platform he termed "a splendid, clear cut, well-drafted set of principles to meet the various situations created by the New Deal."

In Complete Accord.

"I want to go on record," he added, "as being in complete accord with the telegram of Gov. Landon, which was read at the beginning of John Hamilton's speech nominating Gov. Landon."

(In the telegram referred to, Gov. Landon expressed his favor for a currency linked to gold under certain conditions and a constitutional amendment, if necessary, to promulgate minimum wage and hour regulation for women and children.)

"I not only concur in the questions of principles enunciated in the telegram," Knox continued, "but I have a great admiration of the quality of the courage and frankness which are typified by the tone of the message and its reading before the nomination was made.

"That act in itself by Gov. Landon puts the entire campaign on a high plane of sincerity and courage."

The publisher learned of his nomination, shortly after it was completed by the convention, at a hotel in Michigan City, Ind., where he and his party, which included Mrs. Knox and his secretary, John O'Keefe, stopped for an hour or so.

They had left Cleveland at 3 a. m. by automobile, believing, the Vice Presidential nominee said, "that my task" there was "completely finished and my participation all over." Last night he had joined the other Presidential candidates in withdrawing in favor of Gov. Landon.

The Knox party was miles out of Cleveland when the swing to the Chicagoan for second place got under way.

Then by radio and long distance telephone from Chicago, he learned of the sweep of the deleagtes to his standard. Pausing only to say there that he was "profoundly grateful" he hurried on to his Lake Shore Drive home here and then returned to his office to give out his formal statement.

Manchester, N. H., June 12 (AP).—There was joy in the city room of the Manchester Union and Leader today when the news came from Cleveland that the Republican National Convention had chosen "the chief" to be its Vice Presidential nominee.

The chief is Col. Frank Knox, whose acquisition a few years ago of the Chicago News has not lessened his interest in his two Manchester papers.

From Office Boy Billy Thornton to Managing Editor Robert M. Blood came expressions of glee.

Perhaps the most pleased of the "colonel's gang" in the city room, as the boys like to call themselves, was young Billy.

"Gee, that's great," he cried. "Landon will go to town with him."

"I've played with him, worked for him, and camped with him," said Edmund F. Jewell, assistant publisher of the two papers.

"He'll be successful at anything he is willing to undertake."

Said Managing Editor Blood: "Knox is not only a fine executive but a splendid man."

Cornelius Dekker, business manager, described him "possessed of an extra sense that motivates him to quick, accurate judgment."

Landon's Ranch Home Is in Roosevelt Forest

Estes Park, Colo., June 12 (AP).—The ranch Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee, has leased for the summer is in Roosevelt National Forest.

However, it was named "for the late Teddy Roosevelt and not for Franklin D." forest officials said. Landon followed Theodore Roosevelt in the Bull Moose split from the Republican Party in 1912.

Herbert Hoover named Roosevelt Forest.

Grandma, 96, Curls Her Hair, Goes to Indiana 'to Vote for Alf'

Mrs. Mary Ann Hall, 'All Spruced Up' With a Permanent Shirley Temple Wave, Leaves District by Train to Cast Ballot for Landon.

Her short, gray hair fluffed through a new permanent wave into a Shirley Temple curl, 96-year-old Mrs. Mary Ann Hall set out last night from Washington for her legal residence, South Bend, Ind., so she'll "be on hand in plenty of time to vote for Alf."

The matriarch was accompanied by a daughter, Mrs. C. L. Vermillion, 3115 Hiatt place, with whom she has been living for the last three years. The journey was made by train, although Mrs. Hall said yesterday afternoon she thinks "this air business" is the most thrilling change she has witnessed in her lifetime.

Her enthusiasm for airplanes, however, does not include riding in them.

Why I wouldn't get in one if I had to, dead or alive," she declared as she rocked comfortably on the front porch of the Vermillion home.

The permanent wave was the biggest event yesterday—even more important than starting the trip for Indiana. Mrs. Hall has taken long rides before, but yesterday was the first time she's had a lasting kink put in her hair.

"I got tired of doing it up on curlers and wearing a cap every night," she explained. "The girls at the beauty shop asked me if I was getting fixed up for a boy friend. I said, 'sure, four or five of them.'"

Mrs. Hall, a great-grandmother, spends several hours each day reading the newspapers and is convinced Landon is going to be elected.

"I used to live in Kansas. That's why I call him Alf," she smiled.

With the exception of scientific inventions she thinks that the world has not improved much in the last 96 years.

"In fact," she said, "often I think it hasn't improved at all. I had a good time when I was a girl. I'm still having a good time. This world is a beautiful place, I hate to think of leaving it."

In preparation for the trip to Indiana, Mrs. Hall packed her own luggage—two trunks and a couple of bags. She is interested in clothes, likes to go shopping and was pleased when her daughter pinned a tiger-lily at the neckline of her traveling dress yesterday.

"Now I'm all fixed up," she sighed as she patted her tight little gray curls.

Party Ticket, Both Nominees Please Hoover

Election of Landon Next Step in His 'Crusade,' Says Ex-President.

New York, June 12.—Herbert Hoover, former President of the United States, boarded a train for the West tonight with a statement that "the ticket and the platform adopted by the Republican Party suit me perfectly."

For ten minutes the usually taciturn Hoover grinned, chuckled, talked politics and said that "the momentous question of where I'm going fishing" would have to be decided within 24 hours.

Asked to comment on the Republicans' choice of Col. Frank Knox for the Vice Presidency, he said:

"I think my remark that the ticket suits me perfectly answers that question."

He said he had made no definite plans to "stump" for Gov. Landon.

"That's up to the National Committee, Gov. Landon and several other people," he said, smiling.

"Engaged in Crusade."

"For a year and a half I have been engaged in a crusade most vital to the American people," the former President said, standing on a station platform, hands in pockets.

"The purpose of that crusade is to regenerate real individual freedom in the United States.

"The election of Gov. Landon is the next step in the attainment of that purpose.

"I think if you go over my speeches of the last nine months, you will find practically every recommendation I made in those speeches is in the platform.

"There were one or two items that have been settled."

Lowden Pledges Support.

Oregon, Ill., June 12 (AP).—Full support of Alf M. Landon, the Republican Presidential nominee, was promised today by Frank O. Lowden, the party's elder statesman.

"I'll support him," the former Governor of Illinois stated at his Sinnissippi farm.

He telegraphed this message to the Governor of Kansas last night:

"I congratulate you with all my heart and earnestly wish the greatest success for you in November."

Informed of the nomination of Col. Frank Knox for Vice President, Lowden commented:

"The convention has named an excellent ticket. While I have not had an opportunity to study the platform carefully, my first impressions are altogether favorable. I know there is nothing in it which will prevent me from whole-heartedly supporting the ticket."

Vandenberg "Satisfied."

Cleveland, June 12 (AP).—After refusing the Republican Vice Presidential nomination and seeing it go to Col. Frank Knox, Senator Arthur Vandenberg today dictated a statement to reporters saying he was "completely satisfied" with the nominations and that he would support the "sturdy ticket" with all his resources. He felt, he said, that he could do more for the Landon campaign and "the Landon Administration" on the Senate floor than he could on the Senate rostrum.

"I am happy over the result," he concluded. "Now let us proceed to battle into victory."

Murray Indorses Landon.

Broken Bow, Okla., June 12 (AP). William H. Murray, 1932 candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination, today indorsed Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, 1936 Republican nominee.

Wife Is Happy At Withdrawal Of Vandenberg

She Believes His Place Is In Senate to Support G. O. P. Program.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 12.—Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg was the happiest person in the whole convention hall when her husband's "conclusive" message withdrawing his name from the race for Vice President was read.

The worried look went off her face. She beamed. She waved to friends. She talked gaily to reporters clambering up to the rail in front of where she sat with Mrs. Bertrand Snell, wife of the convention's permanent chairman.

"I told you so—and I hadn't seen him since yesterday!" she jubilated.

Hazel Vandenberg, who didn't want her husband to be a candidate, could even contemplate cheerfully the next family happening.

Nineteenth Anniversary.

Sunday will be their nineteenth wedding anniversary. But tomorrow, he has to go back to Washington. She's going on to their summer home in Michigan, with the rest of the family.

"We're never together on our anniversary," she mourned. "There's always been something happening to separate us."

From her background of seven years' living in Washington and getting "the general picture" she gave her reasons for not wanting Vandenberg in the running—both personal and "for the good of the party."

Desires Leisure.

"Either on of those jobs, President or Vice President, is honestly the last thing I'd want to have happen to my husband, for our peace, and for the future happiness of our lives," she said. "We aren't quite in our graves yet. We could have a lot of fun yet.

"And I honestly want him where he is. I don't think it would be fair to drag him out of a Senate such as we have now, just to fill the ticket. And awfully short-sighted.

"If a President doesn't have the Senate with him, he doesn't function effectively at all. There are not so many Republicans up for re-election. Take out three or four, and what would have left? He is such a fighter for what he thinks is right, to shut him up would be all wrong."

old. They all wagged their heads mournfully.

The one real ovation of the morning came when the Michigan spokesman clutched his microphone and said:

"Michigan is prepared to cast 38 votes for Vandenberg."

The name of Vandenberg, a great personal favorite in the galleries, was cheered resoundingly for several minutes and it was noticeable that a great deal of the applause came from the galleries, which have in general been apathetic at this convention.

The one ray of hilarity to break the steady routine dullness that ended the convention came with the speech by J. Cookman Boyd, of Baltimore, in nominating Gov. Harry Nice of his State for the Vice Presidency.

Boyd, a stoutish, belligerent white-haired man, bellowed violently for more than five minutes without naming his candidate and without indicating that it was Nice. Much of his time was consumed in describing his own career of 40 years as a Republican. The delegates and galleries, impatient, began shouting "who is he?" And "time's up."

Boyd suddenly broke off and shouted to one side:

"Aw, keep quiet! I'm making this speech and I'm gonna make it!"

The convention laughed as a whole. Then, as Boyd was about to go on, he appeared to swallow something he was chewing, choked, and muttered several words that carried clearly to the press. A glass of water was rushed to him, he gulped half of it, and then threw the rest on the platform floor, spraying it over a half-dozen newsmen.

Has "Right to Glory."

From that point on he was constantly harassed by the audience and he answered in kind. Chairman Snell had to rap for order repeatedly and finally was forced to admonish the listeners that Boyd had a right to what Snell called "his place in the sun at this convention."

But so intense was the audience's disapproval that the name of Nice at the end of the speech was barely audible in the wave of relieved applause as Boyd finished. It was in this fashion that the final chance of Harry Nice for the Vice Presidential nomination vanished. A little later, Nice, in person, made a gallant little speech releasing the delegation to Knox.

A number of delegates along with the sideline bigwigs had already left this banner-littered and sunflower-strewn town last night. This afternoon all roads led to the station and the airport, as reporters polished up new versions of "the tumult and the shouting dies, the captains and the kings depart."

With the memory of what has occurred here already swiftly fading, it is clearer than ever that the great personal tribute with which the Republican Party paid off its long-standing debt to Herbert Hoover was by far the most dramatic and memorable occurrence of the meet. It seemed a perfect gesture on both sides, closing Hoover's political career as a candidate possibility pleasantly, and relieving the internal situation to such an extent that all factions could easily join behind what so many speakers have prated of here, this week—a "united front."

The convention formally adjourned at 1:40 p. m.

At 1:30 p. m., as reporters, after a last look around at the emptying indoor stadium, strolled out for luncheon, this conversation was overheard on the curb just outside hall where so much had happened

"Listen, Mugg, Louis will knock Schmeling nuts in the first minute of the first round!"

Senator Borah Returns to Capital

Borah Silent on Poll Plans

without injury to our producers of agricultural products.'"

"But it cannot be done without doing both," the Idahoan continued. "There can be no greater threat to the producers of this country than a pledge to return to the gold standard. There ought not to be any doubt about that matter and there isn't any doubt about it so far as I am concerned."

Borah seemed to be bearing his own defeat for the Presidential nomination in good humor and said there was no "soreness" concerning the outcome and that "the action of the convention in that respect will have no bearing whatever upon by position on public questions."

He said he "has no objection" to Col. Knox as a running mate for Landon, but refused to prophesy the number of States the Republicans will carry in November.

A question concerning Roosevelt's chances for re-election brought the broadest smile of the press conference to the Idahoan's face.

"We'll wait and see how things develop," he drawled.

Asked for whom he would vote, he squinted keen eyes beneath brush-like brows and said:

"We have the Australian (secret) ballot in my State."

He declared he had made no assurances to the Landon forces about his attitude in the forthcoming campaign and that he has no intention of asking for a clarification of Landon's message to the convention.

Comments on Old Guard.

The Idahoan chuckled at a question concerning the routing of the "Old Guard" at the convention.

"Well," he finally said, "I thought I saw a few of them falling along the way."

Only future developments, he added, will tell whether the party has been revitalized sufficiently to conform with his views. He declined to say whether he will run for re-election to the Senate from Idaho but indicated that after he looks over conditions in his home State he may issue a statement concerning his activities in the forthcoming Presidential campaign.

Declaring he had little to say on the convention's platform because he had "not had time to study it as a whole," he admitted he is entirely satisfied with the foreign policy plank—"We've at last got that the way it should be"—and that he approved of the stand on monopolies, but had hoped for a "more specific statement, defining conditions and terms upon which interstate commerce can be regulated in regard to holding companies, price-fixing, price cutting, and interlocking directorates."

When he left the convention Wednesday night, Borah was in a conciliatory mood. He had had his way with the three planks in the platform in which he was most interested, foreign relations, monopolies and the monetary policy. Then, when his train reached Akron, Ohio, he was shown a newspaper report of Landon's surprise telegram to the convention, advocating "a currency expressed in terms of gold and convertible into gold."

Upset by Message.

The Senator from Idaho was incredulous. When he alighted from the train in the Capital he clutched the paper and, pointing to the paragraph on currency, asked:

"What the hell does he mean by that?"

Landon's sponsorship of a constitutional amendment to permit the States to adopt legislation for regulating the wages and hours of women and children is also at variance with Borah's views. The Idahoan holds that it would be dangerous to open the question of constitutional amendments and believes that the constitution already provides enough leeway for the enactment of such legislation.

But it was the gold plank, one of Borah's specialties, that alienated the Idaho senator, at least temporarily, from the Republican Presidential nominee. He now has left himself open to follow the course he pursued in 1932, when he took no active part in the campaign.

Socialists Strike At Both Parties

The Socialist Party yesterday struck at the campaign of the two major parties and urged American workers to declare "a plague on both your houses."

In a statement issued by their National Affairs Committee, the Socialists accused Senator Frederick Steiwer, Republican keynoter at the Cleveland convention, with using "cheap rhetoric." Former President Herbert Hoover was assailed for having "nothing constructive to offer" and the convention described as having "achieved a new low record for political hypocrisy."

Turning on President Roosevelt's recent speech at Little Rock, Ark., the Socialists charged he had offered no promise to better conditions of Southern share-croppers.

"After listening these last few days to the loud declamations of the old party statesmen," said the statement, "American workers and their families can say with conviction, 'A plague on both your houses.'"

New Hampshire Clinches Knox, Landon Victories

Cleveland, June 12 (AP).—In the official way of speaking, little New Hampshire not only placed Frank Knox in nomination for the Vice Presidency, but also nominated him.

When the State was reached in the roll call he had 498 votes. The nomination required 502. After New Hampshire had her 11, he had 509.

In the same way it was New Hampshire which clinched the Landon nomination last night.

Virginia Chief Asserts G. O. P. May Win State

Anderson Says Dominion Will Be 'Doubtful' in November.

Cleveland, June 12.—Virginia will be a "doubtful State" in the November election, Col. Henry W. Anderson, of Richmond, said late today after the Republican National Convention had completed its slate of Landon and Knox.

The 17 delegates of the Old Dominion cheered Col. Anderson's statement.

"Behind that prediction," said Col. Anderson, "is the knowledge that Virginia, perhaps more than most States, appreciates a man who believes 2 and 2 make 4, like Landon, and because citizens of the Old Dominion are sick and tired of government on brain-truster theories."

The Virginia delegation cast a solid vote for Col. Frank Knox, of Illinois, for Vice President. There had been a lot of sentiment for Knox for the Presidential nomination in the Virginia delegation, and one of the Chicago publisher's supporters, Senator Thomas Wilson, of Clifton Forge, was given the honor of naming Knox for a second place on the ticket.

After Senator Wilson had announced Virginia's decision, Maj. Henry A. Wise, the newly elected national committeeman from Virginia, went to the speaker's platform to further the cause of the Chicago publisher.

Maj. Wise revealed that he had served in two wars with Col. Knox—the War With Spain and the World War.

The Virginia delegation earlier had agreed to vote for Col. Anderson for the Vice Presidential nomination.

Col. Anderson, sensing the Knox sentiment, released the delegation early today.

The agriculture plank contains concessions to the prairie States. Gov. Landon's gold statement pays deference to the East. And the Kansan's statement on a State wage and hour amendment to the Constitution may prod the Democrats into seeking both a Federal and State amendment at Philadelphia, which many here think will not do the Democrats any good.

Labor's Success Tempered.

Labor received much that it asked for, and much that it did not, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, left Cleveland without comment. Labor's success in obtaining a collective bargaining plank was somewhat tempered by addition of the phrase "without interference from any source." Some labor spokesmen contend such language, if applied to such legislation as the Wagner labor act, might enable employers to protect company unions by invoking the law against union organizers.

Green had other reasons for dissatisfaction. His suggestions for indorsement of the child labor amendment, and an amendment requiring a two-thirds Supreme Court vote to declare an act of Congress unconstitutional, were tossed away.

Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, was jubilant over the combined civil service planks, particularly the Landon pronouncement for extending the civil service nearly to the rank of Cabinet officer. Some members of the resolutions committee were reluctant to go that far.

"We didn't want to freeze the Government full of Democrats," one of them said.

Youngsters Elated.

Young Guardsmen were elated at Landon's supplement to the platform on three major points at issue, feeling it exhibited courage and leadership. Old Guardsmen were a trifle disgruntled at being routed from the victory gained when the resolutions committee excluded a minimum wage constitutional amendment, and modified Gov. Landon's all-inclusive civil service plank.

Farm groups were moderately satisfied, although the platform was a far cry from what some of the more liberal farm groups asked for.

The following comment by L. J. Taber, of the National Grange, was typical.

"I think it's a pretty good platform."

Here is a broad cross-section of convention comment:

William Allen White, Kansas editor—"Do you mean the original platform, or as amended? I think it is fine as it is. I got licked on the three things the Governor stood by me on."

Representative Joseph Martin, of Massachusetts, Landon floor leader—"I think the platform is one that all members of the party can accept with enthusiasm."

Former Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut, vice chairman of the resolutions committee—"It was such a remarkable display of courage, (the Landon telegram) before the nomination came that I was taken aback. It was such a wide departure from established precedent that it occurred to me that we had a different kind of candidate than the Democrats, who accepted their platform 100 per cent, and proved to be for it only 3.2 per cent, repeal being the only thing he gave us. Our candidate accepts the platform, but tells us he may want to go further. He is an honest candidate, who can be trusted."

Representative Fish—"I consider the Governor's gold statement a tragic political blunder because it won't make a vote in the East and will raise unnecessary issues in the West. Outside of a few bankers, it would benefit no one."

Taber Voices Satisfaction.

Representative Edward Taber, of New York—"I am perfectly well satisfied with the platform. I think it states clearly and succinctly the spirit of the party that is going to win in November. I am particularly well pleased with the declaration for curtailed spending and the balancing the budget."

Representative Robert Bacon, of New York—"I think it exemplies perfectly the new spirit of the Republican Party, which has had its rebirth in the Middle West. It shows we are going forward as a new party, with young men in control."

Senator Jesse Metcalf, Rhode Island—"I like the platform, I like the candidates, and I think we can win in November."

Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas—"It is a good platform, especially its stand in opposition to the reciprocal tariff agreements, which have opened American markets to foreign competitors of the farmer. This will make a strong appeal to the farm vote. The monetary plank I regard as particularly strong and forceful."

Colladay Gives Views.

Edward F. Colladay, Republican National Committeeman for the District of Columbia—"I think the platform is an able and sincere statement of policies. It is one on which the candidate can stand without any further qualifying interpretations. There is nothing here that will have to be sidestepped or glossed over. The party need have no fear in discussing the issues with the people."

Harrison Spangler, of Iowa, Western director of the party—"It is a splendid platform, especially in view of the interpretations Gov. Landon has put upon it. The platform is a liberal one, and it represents a constructive cross-section of American thought."

"Door Open" on Silver.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 12.—Delegates from three Western States emerged from a nafternoon conference today with Roy Roberts and Lacy Haynes, of the Landon camp, declaring they were assured Gov. Landon had "left the door open" to consideration of silver in his monetary proposals.

eHading the delegation were E. G. Bennett, Utah banker, and former Senator John Thomas, of Idaho, spokesman for Senator Borah on the Republican platform committee. Wyoming delegates also were present.

An early exchange of views between the Westerners and Senator Borah was forecast with a view to determining whether inclusion of silver within the framework of the monetary program advocated by Landon would allay the Idahoan's evident concern at the Kansan's post-platform gold message.

Members of the delegation said Roberts and Haynes assured them Landon would consider proposals to use silver as part of a metallic base for the "convertible" currency he advocated in his surprise telegram read last night to the convention.

Nye Is Disappointed.

Senator Nye, North Dakota Republican said the platform "is a keen disappointment to progressives."

His statement added that "before the ink was dry, Gov. Landon found it necessary to amend the document, but its omissions and defects have not been cured."

The Senator said "scrapping of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Seaway and power project is a symbol of the trend."

A. O. Moreaux, of Minnesota, executive committee member of the National Seaway Council, said failure to include a St. Lawrence plank "will be received with dismay and bitter disappointment in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, northern New York, throughout the grain belt and other sections which depend upon the seaway for their economic prosperity and future development."

In Washington, Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, criticized the convention's action as demonstrating "very clearly that the reactionaries are still in control." He said the demonstration given Hoover, among other things, showed this. Further, he predicted the re-election of President Roosevelt.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, said:

"What does Gov. Landon mean when he says 'if it is necessary' he will recommend a constitutional amendment giving the right to legislate for the protection of wages and for labor? Has not the Supreme Court said that the States have not the power? To what tribunal would he go to find out whether or not the Supreme Court was correct?"

School System Mourns Death Of Dr. Kramer

Classes Will Be Suspended in District on Monday, Day of Funeral.

Dr. Stephen Elliott Kramer, first assistant superintendent of schools, died of heart attack late Thursday night. He was one of Washington's veteran and most beloved educators, and his death left the school system in a state of deep mourning yesterday.

Declaring the loss of Dr. Kramer's services "irreparable," Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou yesterday obtained permission of the board of education to close all public schools Monday, the day of the funeral.

Dr. Kramer, with members of his family at the bedside, died at Emergency Hospital, where he was taken following a heart attack Wednesday night as he attended the George Washington University commencement in Constitution Hall. He was 64, and had spent 46 years of his life as a teacher, principal and administrator in the public schools of the District of Columbia.

Funeral services will be at 2 p. m. Monday in St. Stephen's and Incarnation Episcopal Church. The Rev. George Fiske Dudley, rector, will officiate. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Pallbearers Listed.

Several of Dr. Kramer's colleagues in the field of eduaction will pay their last respects to him as honorary pallbearers. These were named yesterday: Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of George Washington University; Dr. Ballou; Jere J. Crane, Robert L. Haycock, Dr. G. C. Wilkinson and A. K. Savoy, assistant superintendents; Col. W. M. Craigie, professor of military science and tactics; Dr. E. C. Higbie, president of Wilson Teachers' College; Dr. H. A. Smith, principal of Central High School; Charles A. Hart, principal of Eastern High School; F. C. Daniel, principal of McKinley High School; Allan Davis, principal of Central High School; Dr. E. S. Newton, principal of Western High School; N. J. Nelson, principal of Woodrow Wilson High School; W. F. Smith, principal of Abbot Vocational School; E. D. Reed, principal of Lenox-French Vocational School; Henry W. Draper and S. M. Ely, supervising principals of first and fifth divisions, respectively; ten junior high school principals, including Dr. C. W. Holmes, Anacostia; F. A. Woodward, Gordon; Dr. H. E. Warner, Hine; H. S. Smith, Jefferson; J. P. Collins, Langley; H. P. Safford, Macfarland; L. J. Cantrell, Paul; L. T. Walter, Powell; R. W. Strawbridge, Stuart, and Harry Baker, jr., Taft, and James R. Reilly, a teacher.

A cadet officer from each of the six white senior high schools will be named to serve as an active pallbearer.

Stayed at Post.

School officials were shocked at the news of their co-worker's sudden death. While Dr. Kramer had been suffering from heart disease for the last year, he had been at his post most of the time. He was present at the school board's meeting Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, president of the board, said: "His devotion to duty undoubtedly hastened his death. He would never rest, even when physicians told him he was a very sick man."

In a formal statement Dr. Ballou said:

"In the passing of Dr. Kramer the citizens of Washington have lost one of its outstanding public officials; the host of persons who have come in contact with him during his long period of educational service have lost a true friend, and his associates in the school family who worked with him daily for so many years have lost a wise educational counselor whose opinions were always respected and valued, and a colleague whose loss to them is irreparable."

Flags over all school buildings in the city have been ordered to fly at half staff after the day of the funeral. The Franklin Administration Building flag will be lowered to half staff for a 30-day period.

Born in Atlanta, Ga., on August 11, 1871, Stephen E. Kramer was brought to Washington by his parents when he was two. He lived in this city ever since, his most recent residence being at 1215 Holly street northwest.

He graduated from Central High School, where he was later principal, attended Washington Normal School (now Wilson Teachers' College). Then began his teaching career in 1890 at Eastern High School, the year it was established. He taught English.

Professional advancements made him principal of the Smallwood, Force and Franklin schools, in the order named. Then he was made supervising principal of the sixth division in Northeast Washington. His next promotion made him director of intermediate instructors; then he was supervising principal of the third district, located in the Northwest section of the city, and in 1914, he was made assistant superintendent.

Held Post 9 Years.

He had been in this last position for nine years when Robert A. Maurer, now a member of the Board of Education, resigned as principal of Central High School. Although it meant lowering his rank, Dr. Kramer applied for the job. He wanted to be closer to the boys and girls, in whose problems he was more interested than anything else. He was given the job.

One year later, however, a new post was created in the school system—that of first assistant superintendent in charge of secondary schools (junior and senior high schools). Dr. Kramer was chosen as the man best fitted to fill the position. Educators prevailed upon him, and while he wished to stay at Central for sentimental reasons, he became once more a school executive.

He occupied this position for the last 12 years.

Dr. Kramer, because of his affiliations and his writing, was known throughout the country. Several magazines published his educational articles, and he is the author of a book, "Great Cities of the United States."

For several years he gave lectures at George Washington University, and at the time of his death was a member of the university's board of trustees. He belonged to the Washington Board of Trade, the National Education Association, the Federal Schoolmen's Club, the Sons of the American Revolution, the Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens Association, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Torch Club, the Diocesan Executive Committee of the Episcopal Church, and served as treasurer of the missionary department and of the diocesan fund.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sarah Louise Kramer; three daughters, Katherine L., Sarah Louise and Edith Constance; and a son, Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, jr., all of whom were at his bedside at the time of his death. He also is survived by two sisters, Mrs. A. E. T. Hansman and Mrs. E. C. Sasnett, both of Washington, and a brother, H. B. Kramer, of California.

Dr. Prettyman Speaks at Fete Of M. E. Home

Tells Audience Humanitarian Trend Prevails; Debt Is Slashed $22,260.

Humanitarianism is the trend of the present age, the Rev. Forest J. Prettyman declared at the tenth anniversary celebration of the Southern Methodist Home for the Aged, at Gaithersburg, Md., Thursday. He traced the trends of other ages in his talk.

Dr. Prettyman was one of the original committee of three appointed by the annual conference to plan for the home, which cares for the aged of the Baltimore Conference, embracing Washington, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

The exercises were held on the lawn of the home. More than 2,000 persons attended. The Rev. Herman M. Wilson, superintendent, announced gifts of $22,260 reducing the debt on the building to $50,000.

The Rev. Charles C. Jarrell, former secretary of the General Hospital Board of the church, also spoke. The invocation was given by the Rev. John C. Copenhaver, presiding elder of the Roanoke District and member of the board of trustees, and the benediction by the Rev. W. Angie Smith, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, Washington.

Mrs. A. W. Mears, president of the Baltimore Conference Home Guild, read the Scripture lesson. The welcome was given by Mayor William McBain, of Gaithersburg, and the Rev. Frank A. Tyler, pastor of the Gaithersburg Church. The gifts were accepted by W. F. Hummer, treasurer. Solos were sung by Miss Phoebe Stiner and Ralph Shure.

A garden party was held in the afternoon, under auspices of the Baltimore Conference Home Guild, Mrs. Ida R. Groover, chairman.

A program in the chapel by the 70 guests of the home and moving pictures, provided by Dr. J. Arthur York, member of the board of trustees, completed the program last night. The program and moving pictures had to be repeated at a second show because of the large crowd.

Polish Massacre News Blamed in N. Y. Death

New York, June 12 (AP).—Reports of massacre last March in far-off Poland were held indirectly responsible today for the death in a Brooklyn Hebrew home of Isaac Leib Stein, 110.

"Papa" Stein, who had 80 living descendants and was the oldest man in the home, died of heart disease after news accounts of the massacre had been read to him. Friends said he recognized the names of some of the children of his boyhood friends as being among the victims.

Three Are Arrested In Gambling Raid

Members of the vice squad raided an alleged gambling house in the 2200 block of Fourteenth street northwest yesterday and arrested two men and a woman.

When brought to headquarters they gave their names as Ralph O. Fowler, 43, 3238 Walnut street northeast; George M. Douglas, 29, 1438 Fairmont street northwest, and Mrs. Martha A. Burnet, 20, 1408 Florida avenue northwest. All were released on $2,000 bail.

Gude, Famous Prince Georges Farmer, Is Dead

Financier and Churchman Was in Failing Health for Three Years.

Alexander Gude, 71, prominent farmer, financier and churchman, and resident of the Chillum section of Prince Georges County, Md., since childhood died Thursday at his home at Queens Chapel road and University drive. He had been in failing health for three years and his condition had been serious for several months.

Mr. Gude was born in Knoxville, Tenn., March 10, 1865, but his family moved to the Chillum section when he was only 3 years old. He had resided at Queens Chapel road and University drive for 41 years.

On June 7, 1927, Mr. Gude was awarded a certificate by the University of Maryland for being the "best farmer in Prince Georges County." He was vice president of the Vansville Farmers' Club, one of the oldest organizations of its kind in this section of the country. Although for many years he was a member of this club, he had not missed a single meeting until a few weeks ago. He also was a past master of Eureka Grange of Chillum and of the Prince Georges County Pomona Grange.

Mr. Gude was vice persident of the Hyattsville Building Association and a member of its appraisal committee. He was director of the Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co. of Hyattsville and Mount Rainier. He was a past master of Chillum Castle Masonic Lodge.

Surviving Mr. Gude are two daughters, Mrs. T. Ray Stanton, of University Park, Md. and Mrs. Carl H. Frey, who resides at the family home. His wife, Mrs Nellie Joy Gude, died three years ago He also leaves a brother William F Gude, prominent Washington and Laurel (Md.) florist, and three grandchildren.

Dr. M. R. James, Noted Biblical Scholar, Dead

Provost of Eton College, Holder of Many Honors, Succumbs at 73.

By the Associated Press.

Eton, England, June 12.—Dr. Montague Rhodes James, provost of Eton College for 18 years and noted Biblical scholar, died today. He was 73 years old.

Dr. James' prolific writings ranged from profound researches into Biblical, ancient and medieval writings and times, to ghost stories brought from the dim past.

In 1926, he announced the discovery in the library of Hereford Cathedral of new passages of a gospel credited to St. Peter, which had been neglected for six centuries.

This document gave the first description of Symeon, believed to be the son of Joseph, husband of the Virgin Mary, and threw new light on the Three Wise Men from the East, who brought gold, frankinsense and myrrh to the baby Jesus.

Dr. James was a trustee of the British museum, a member of the royal commissions on public records, on the Universities of Cambridge and Oxford, and on historical monuments, an officer de l'instruction publique, a commander of the Order of Leopold and had the gold medal of the royal Bibliographical Society in 1929.

From 1905 to 1918 he was provost of King's College, Cambridge.

Completing The Ticket.

With the nomination of Col. Frank Knox as the Republican Vice Presidential candidate, the Cleveland convention ended on the same note which was dominant at its beginning. That note is unity within the party in the interest of defeating the New Deal.

The convention was almost unanimous in its choice of Gov. Landon for first place on the ticket. Prolonged bickering and opening fighting over the platform was avoided, although many compromises were necessary. Then in the choice of the Vice Presidential candidate the convention acted without a dissenting vote. Former Senator Edge, Gov. Nice and Col. Little quickly stepped aside to permit unanimous nomination of the strongest available candidate.

Senator Vandenberg was clearly the first choice of the convention and would have been nominated if he had not insisted upon the withdrawal of his name. But the Senator is firmly convinced that he can be of greater service on the floor of the Senate than he could be as Vice President presiding over that body. In view of the poverty of Republican talents in the Senate, there is real substance to his argument.

Republicans who are disappointed in Mr. Vandenberg's refusal to accept second place on the ticket will find a good deal of comfort in his positive indorsement of Gov. Landon and his determination to campaign vigorously for the G. O. P. nominees. If the Senator had been nominated, Col. Knox would not likely have become a formidable influence in the campaign. As matters now stand, both will throw the full strength of their leadership behind the ticket. From the viewpoint of G. O. P. strategy this may prove to be a gain.

The addition of Col. Knox to the ticket still further accentuates the dominance of Middle Western leadership in the regenerated Republican Party. Under ordinary circumstances party chieftains try desperately to give their ticket geographic balance. In this case the choice was left entirely to the convention. However, the Middle Western States, from which both the candidates have been chosen, are conceded to be the chief battleground of the 1936 campaign.

Personalities as well as geographic considerations were played down at Cleveland. The chief significance of the convention is that it brought into being a virile movement against the excesses of the New Deal. In accord with the platform declaration for "a government of laws as against the autocratic perils of a government of men," the country may expect principles to be placed ahead of personalities throughout the campaign.

Decibels In Politics.

It may well be, as the nursery wisdom holds, that a noisy noise annoys an oyster—but never a politician. In fact, since the Cleveland innovation of an applause meter, noise has become the standard measure of political success. Thus when our only living former President suggested that Americans should "thank Almighty God" for the Constitution and the Supreme Court, and the applause meter hit a record peak of 75 decibels, he left the auditorium acknowledged on every hand to be the grand old man of the Grand Old Party.

The effects of this new device should be seriously contemplated. Will it not radically change the complexion of future conventions? Instead of party rank and prestige, barrel lungs and a deep voice may become the principal recommendation for a delegate's election. Not wheelhorses but champion hog-callers and experienced train announcers would then make up the bulk of 1940's political gatherings. Joe Humphries seems to have been born 30 years too soon.

It goes without saying that the Democrats will have an applause meter in Philadelphia, and one chief objective of that august assemblage may become the shattering of Mr. Hoover's 75 decibel record. In this respect the Republicans seem to have played directly into the hand of our thunder-making Postmaster General.

The G. O. P. may yet regret taking silence off the golden standard.

The Republican Platform.

Political conditions at the Cleveland convention reflecting the world-wide confusion of the times made a certain amount of compromise in the Republican Party platform inevitable. This was not only because the convention marked the interim period between the displacement of traditional leadership and the establishment of a new command. Compromise was also necessitated by the fundamental determination to create a firmly united front, essential to enable the opposition party to fulfill the duty so clearly defined for it during this critical period of national history.

Moreover, in a two-party system of government, a measure of compromise is always inevitable, in either camp. The mechanical advantages of grouping the great majority of the electorate into two clear-cut divisions are obvious. But they must be balanced against the fact that the great variety of human emotions and human thought cannot be aligned with equal simplicity.

Some democracies have chosen to have a large number of parties, each of which starts with a rigidly uncompromising program but must thereafter exhibit a great deal of compromise in associating with other groups to form a government. The French system is of that character. Americans, since the birth of the Nation, have chosen to compromise in party platforms rather than in parliamentary procedure. Only with the Roosevelt Administration has a third, and most distasteful, form of compromise been introduced: That of securing a mandate to govern on a clear-cut set of conditions, and then paying no attention to them.

When these essential considerations are kept in mind, the platform worked out at Cleveland must be defined as an able and convincing document. It has unquestionable deficiencies, both of commission and omission. But for the most part these are in matters of detail. In the more vital field of principles it is both sound and forward-looking. It achieves the difficult synthesis of the idealistic and the practical. Most significant, it offers few serious restraints to the policy of a competent and level-headed leader, such as the Republican Party has now obtained in the person of Gov. Landon.

The platform unequivocally establishes three vital principles as the creed for which the Republican Party will campaign, and in which it will operate if Gov. Landon is given a popular mandate to form a Government.

One of these is in the field of law: The maintenance of our form of constitutional government with its traditional system of checks and balances. A second principle embodies the philosophy of the party: Equality of opportunity with encouragement to the individual to develop his capacities in the interest of both personal and social well-being. The third principle established is that of basic governmental procedure: Insistence upon living within income, upon paying for reforms as they are made, upon avoiding either dissipation of the national heritage or mortgaging the national expectations on the spacious plea that neither past nor future, but only the present moment, is vital in the story of national existence.

It is a sign of the slipshod thinking of the times that such doctrine can be regarded in some quarters as undesirably conservative. For the first duty of any responsible democratic government is to regard itself not as the dictatorial arbiter of national destinies, but as the temporary trustee of a continuous national tradition.

Within the limitations of the trustee function it is not merely the right but the duty of a democratic government to be progressive, to strive unceasingly for lasting improvement in the material, mental and spiritual status of its citizenry. But such improvement, in this country, is to be achieved only by building on the foundations of the past. The Republican Party, while it has revolutionized itself, sees no necessity of revolution for the Nation.

It does, however, clearly see the need for progress. "We assume," says the platform, "the obligations and duties imposed upon government by modern conditions." And to show that this is not mere phrase the document particularizes at many points. The assumption of national responsibility for the provision of the necessities of life "for the needy" is a significant innovation for Republican policy. So is wholehearted acceptance of the principles of unemployment insurance and old-age pensions.

It could be wished that the platform had come out roundly for development of the good start which has been made in building a Nation-wide system of public employment offices. Here is a practical and economical agency of unemployment relief which clearly falls among those obligations imposed upon government by modern conditions. But progess in this line is perhaps intimated by the pledge of "a prompt determination of the facts concerning relief and unemployment."

On the whole, the platform avoids the mistake of being too specific, properly concentrating on principles. Indeed it is exactly where the pet idiosyncrasy or phobia of some individual has been inserted into the platform that it becomes ambiguous. There are not infrequent conflicts between an excellent generality and a stupid particularization.

Thus the tariff section gives as its impeccable objectives "promoting international trade, the stabilization of currencies and the attainment of a proper balance between agriculture and industry." This principle should of course take precedence over the rather hysterical attack on the Administration's reciprocal tariff policy, just as the clear-cut pledge to balance the budget should take precedence over the flirtation with direct Federal subsidies apparent in the farm plank.

Where there is a direct inconsistency between principle and detail it will, of course, be the duty of the Republican nominee, so clearly the popular leader of his party, to reconcile the conflict in the interest of the major promise. This Gov. Landon can obviously be relied upon to do.

His striking message to the convention, sent after studying the party platform, but before his nomination had been voted, was a clear indication of his intention to interpret that platform, wherever it is ambiguous, in a courageous and liberal manner. By approving his nomination unanimously, after hearing this message, the convention put the seal of its approval upon Mr. Landon's attitude.

The Republican Party has thus assured its standard bearer of the freedom of action, within a framework of principle, which a competent leader must be allowed. This gives an auspicious start to a campaign already promising because of the character of the opposition's standard bearer.

Toward Democracy In Russia.

If the new constitution for Russia which the Central Executive Committee has just approved may be literally interpreted, the Soviet regime will be the first dictatorship in history voluntarily to democratize itself.

Since the November revolution of 1917 the Soviet government has been, nominally, a dictatorship of the proletariat. Actually, as more than one critic has pointed out, it has been a dictatorship exercised on behalf of the proletariat by the Communist Party and, more particularly, by the inner circle of that party, whose dominant figure for the past 10 or 12 years has been Josef Stalin.

It was this inner circle, most of whose members also held high places in the government, which overshadowed and to a very great extent dominated the All-Union Congress of Soviets, presumably the supreme organ of authority in the U. S. S. R.

Whether this dual system of control will continue under the new constitution is not clear. The presumption is, however, that the Communist Party will remain the only one legally permitted to exist and that it will continue to serve as the watchdog of collectivist control over the economic life of the nation. To that extent, certainly, the new regime in Russia would differ markedly from the democracies of the West.

Yet the reports from Moscow do seem to indicate that the proposed Russian Parliament will be more than a rubber stamp. It will be elected by secret ballot, itself a guarantee against domination of the voters by the regime, and the franchise will be extended to all regardless of social origin, race or religion. At the very least the ballot could be used by the people to express their disapproval of unpopular officials and unpopular measures.

But what is even more important than the proposed change in the political framework is the promise it holds out of a wider measure of individual freedom. Henceforth, if the contemplated reforms are put into effect, the individual will no longer be a cipher, subject to the arbitrary whims of the constituted authorities, but endowed with civil rights that neither the police nor the courts will be permitted to infringe.

What all this will mean in practice remains to be seen. Certainly in theory it marks a laudable step toward freedom in Russia. At any rate, the impression which these proposed reforms create is that the Soviet regime is settling down, that it is getting out of the panic mood which characterized its early years of revolution, civil war and foreign intervention, and, therefore, can afford the luxury of moderation.

Part of the Civilizing Process.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

It is altogether safe to assume that the massacre of 30 Italian soldiers by Ethiopian tribesmen will not go down in the records as an isolated instance. There will be others; probably many others. The Italians may assert that the Ethiopian surrender is complete, that the country is fully pacified, but when enough warriors are left in the field with sufficient weapons to exterminate a military escort for a column of trucks, it is plain that a larger task awaits the conquerors.

It makes no difference whether the attackers are inspired by patriotism, by hatred of foreigners or by desire for loot. The Italians will find themselves beset by more guerilla raids of this sort. It is the experience of all countries that undertake conquest. Years probably will be required to put down resistance in Ethiopia, and even thereafter, sporadic uprisings over the country are sure to occur.

It is part of the process known as civilizing Africa, or assuming the white man's burden, or bringing the blessings of European culture to the benighted Ethiopians.

Mr. Huddleston's Defeat.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The press reports that George Huddleston, 22 years in Congress from Alabama, has been defeated for renomination by Luther Patrick. This is, indeed, a disheartening commentary upon the intelligence of the voters of that district, and is indicative of the utterly demoralizing effect the New Deal has had upon them.

Huddleston is one of the few men in Congress of the so-called Democratic Party who has shown any intelligence and independence, and who refused to be subservient to the demands of Roosevelt.

He opposed the bill, which was the product of stupidity and vindictiveness, to destroy the holding company utilities in which millions of the people have their money invested. His conduct throughout the present Congress has shown that he was a patriot, who put right, justice, and country above slavish subservience to party rule. For this he is punished by a bigoted, narrow-minded constituency, who evidently prefer a demagogue to an honest, manly, and independent representative.

Patrick charged that Huddleston was disloyal to the New Deal. Well, he was at least loyal to his conscience and to his country, which should commend him to every right-thinking person. The inference from Patrick's charge is that if he is elected he would be the slavish henchman and rubber stamp of Roosevelt in supporting policies that are a repudiation of everything for which the South has stood for and fought for throughout its entire history.

This case is the answer to the question, "Why cannot we get high-class and representative men in public life?" Simply because good men of character and independence will not, as a rule, offer for public office, knowing full well that the masses, in contradistinction to the remnant of intelligent classes, prefer the time-server and the demagogue. Cheers For Mediocrity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of June 11 a reader hails the excellent record of Mr. Roosevelt and commiserates the mediocrity of Mr. Landon. Viewing the fiscal hiatus of Government, budget unbalance, monumental debt, business blocked on every hand by Government meddling with no dependable promise of reform, we're grateful for a new formula for excellence.

After four years of the headlong presumption of the spectacular showman, gone riot in an orgy of Government by half-baked panaceas I, as a Roosevelt voter who fell for it in '32, would say three cheers and a tiger for mediocrity. Yea, a big helping of it if it would help Landon undo some of the mess in four short years.

The "smear Landon" campaign of belittlement set in motion by the spoilsmaster-in-chief, Mr. Farley, should be a strong factor in making the coming fight close if not victorious. All of us who've got past the third reader have long since learned to take Mr. Farley—in reverse; even the recipients of spoils and N. D. handouts. DAN MILLER.

Advice To Veterans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the trying times in the background America will again awake with new ideals, new modern comforts, new slants on living, because of the $2,000,000,000 bonus now moving into the hands of thousands of Americans.

Picture, if you will, the average life savings of a responsible American and you will observe that the savings of a lifetime will hardly amount to the bonus which many individuals will receive. Many will class their windfalls as wealth.

This new wealth should be safeguarded from vultures who plan to descend on the recipients with schemes that usually result in losses. Only once in a lifetime can such deserving wealth be accumulated. Guard it! Invest—buy what you need, but buy from concerns in whom you can put your trust. Think, if you ever did, before you spend or invest your new wealth! SAM MELNICOVE.

"Words, Words, Words."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to radio and press reports, the "All-American Stampede"—election time—is now in progress. This is aptly characterized by the keynote speech of the Republican Party. Unhappily enough but true, too much emotion and not enough mediation is employed in the election of the highest public officials.

The more I hear such speeches as that made by Steiwer, the more I am convinced that a certain behavioristic psychologist was right when he contended that in the final analysis complete freedom of speech should be granted to only one and that is the parrot. This feathered fellow merely talks for the fun of it or at best what he has heard. He (the parrot) does not attempt to urge any one else to do something he is unable to do himself.

A Representative from that noble State of Massachusetts said in a speech a few days ago, "Let us make America American." The parrot does that type of talking. But what I should like to know was "America American" in 1932 when banks throughout the country were closing overnight? We have such short memories! Words, words, words! CLAUDE D. BLACK.

Washington, June 10.

The G. O. P.'s Key.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If Mr. Steiwer's keynote speech is to be taken as the key to the house beautiful which the G. O. P. offers to the American people, then these people will want to know what became of the golden key of 1929, the boom period of Republican prosperity. The magic key of 1929 was unluckily mislaid that year, and all the king's horses and men could not bring it back again.

Now the Grand Guardian of the G. O. P. golden key has radioed the country that he knows who mislaid the key and that it now can be found. What will the new found G. O. P. key unlock for the American people? Will it produce a new born babe, very anemic, due to three long years of allegedly contaminated air, lack of sustenance and reckless treatment from being around the barn of the Donkey?

The prescriptions ordered by the G. O. P. physician will take a long time to resuscitate the unhappy babe as his remedies do not conform with the present Administration's pure food and drug law. God have mercy on the baby! MUGWUMP.

Three Earlier Years.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The great masses of the people, seeking information in this election year, heard the keynote speech of Senator Steiwer in the Republican National Convention at Cleveland, over a nation-wide radio program. The Senator gave a vivid description of the events of "Three Long Years," following the advent of the present Administration.

As a matter of information (a grim reminder), may we hear something of the events of another "Three Long Years," preceding the advent of this Administration?

Since the keynote at Cleveland has so generously furnished the key, "Three Long Years," let it be used vigorously from now until election day to unlock the memory of millions of the people, lest they forget those previous "Three Long Years." J. HOWARD JONES.

Airport Locations.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I flew to Cleveland yesterday. I left Washington at 3:35, Pittsburgh 5:05, Akron 5:45, arrived Cleveland Airport 6 p. m. Reached hotel district through traffic at 6:40. Thus it took nearly as long to get to the hotel from the airport as it did to fly from Pittsburgh to Cleveland.

A Congressional committee is getting ready to select a location for a Washington airport. It is to be hoped that they will not permit false economy to lead them to select a site so distant from the business district of Washington as to largely nullify the advantages of fast plane schedules. Pegler And Prisons.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apparently Westbrook Pegler's head has been turned by the recent laudatory article about him which appeared in a national news weekly, for he now rises to appoint himself as a one-man inspection committee for institutions of the Federal Government.

He should know that provision is made for adequate inspection of prisons, not by ex-soda jerkers getting by on their line of the old substance which is sliced, both thick and thin, but by regularly delegated authorities whose interest is in inspection, as such, rather than in a source of lurid copy.

Pegler should have stuck to his fizz-water, for still water runs deep, and he has little depth. A. O. D.

Washington, June 8.

Webster's Chowder.

The Massachusetts Law Quarterly turns, in its April issue, from its customery learned discussions of nice legal points to a matter that the layman can favor, namely, Daniel Webster's favorite recipe for fish chowder. It runs as follows: "Four teaspoonfuls of onions, fried with pork, one quart of boiled potatoes, well mashed, one and one-half pounds of ship biscuit, broken, one-half bottle of mushroom catsup, one teaspoonful of thyme, one bottle of port or claret, one-half a nutmeg, greated a few cloves, mace, allspice and slices of lemon and some black pepper, 6 pounds of blue or white fish, cut in slices, 25 oysters. The whole to be put in a pot, covered with an inch of water, cooked slowly and stirred gently."

It is dangerous to comment on a recipe before one has tried it. None the less, Webster's comes strangely from one who so proudly boasted, "Thank God, I—I also—am an American." For generations, the American tradition of chowder, be it fish, clam or corn, has been one of stern denial. Onion, salt and a bit of pepper have provided all the seasoning that was permitted. To be sure, a watery substance containing, among other things, tomato, thyme and even sage, is sometimes called chowder, but it has no more right to the name than has ordinary molasses to the proud title of sugar-house drip.

So, at least, one had supposed, until Daniel Webster's recipe was published. But now one's faith in the stern virtues of chowder is weakened. To think of the great Daniel not only spicing his chowders, but spiking them into the bargain, and that with bottles of port or claret, is almost to lose one's faith in the New England virtues. Massachusetts can stand firm on ordinary chowder, but a chowder containing spices, lemon and wine is something else again. Though it be cooked as slowly as progress and stirred as gently as the dew falls, it isn't the chowder that made New England what it is.

No Hat Law!

Few will dispute the right and propriety of a man wearing his hat in what is as much a public conveyance as a subway train. Yet many have felt uncomfortable in doing so, and have often been made the subject of unfavorable remark. This exaggerated form of politeness is now seldom seen in New York, at any rate, where elevators are more numerous than anywhere else in the world. Perhaps it will be just as well, however, if an expression of public opinion is evoked on the subject. But no law, please!

(New York Herald Tribune.)

Roses and Ragweed

If William Cullen Bryant had been a hay-feverite his "melancholy days, the saddest of the year" would have had nothing to do with "wailing winds and naked woods and meadows brown and sere;" but, instead, would be the days when the "ragweed rags the sneezer's nose and handkerchiefs appear."

Pray do not think there is any attempt here to rush the season in which (false rumor has it) there is goldenrod in pickle for the unfortunates with sensitive membranes; a season in which Dame Nature provides the music (a pollen-haze, in which a quaver follows a crotchet with a sneeze on the final beat) for their feverish dance.

Nay. Far more kindly is this scribe's design. This is Rose Fever month. It gives a hint of what comes later; a gentle hint. Though eyes be inflamed, the rose fever sufferer may yet be pleasurably thrilled by the titillating rose-odor that excites it. It is not so during August's Preliminary Wheezes or September's Reign of Terror; for then the woods are splashed with glorious color which the eyes are too bunged up to see and appreciate; and the air is filled with the joyous scents of ripening fruit which the congested nose but faintly senses and never really knows.

And what Rose Fever says to ears that are properly attuned is "Cut weeds." This is the month in which weeds are most effectively destroyed.

Cut weeds. If you ask, "What weeds" and receive the obvious answer, "All weeds" the question then suggests itself "How can you tell 'em from plants that are not weeds?" And there trouble begins.

Weeds are plants out of place. The morning glory is a weed in a vegetable garden. A dandelion is a beautiful little flower and a valuable plant, but it is a weed on a lawn. Honeysuckle, at once beautiful and fragrant and lovingly cultivated in parts of the country where it grows sparingly, is a pestilential weed farther south, a mischievous wanderer in the fields and woods, ruining lawns and killing trees, a pest everywhere except on steep banks it keeps from crumbling.

All the lovely wild flowers, including buttercups and daisies and rosemary and goldenrod, are weeds; and the last, so sweet and attractive that it has been advocated as the national flower, and is already the State flower of Alabama, Nebraska and North Carolina, was held until recently by all Hay Feverites as Public Enemy No. 1.

It was Thomas A. Edison, after he had picked the goldenrod as a possible base for a substitute for rubber, who declared the flower was guiltless of causing hay fever since its pollen was not light enough to float in the air and thus be inhaled. It wasn't wholly a clean bill for the goldenrod, but it helped.

But, anyhow, it becomes manifest that "All weeds" is a poor answer to a fateful question. Though all flowering plants are more or less under suspicion those that cause discomfort to most hay fever sufferers are in a relatively small group.

But the one straight fact that stands erect in a field of uncertain data is that ragweed straight and in combination causes more hay fever than any other plant. So it might be well to concentrate on ragweed.

It is at this point that the asthmatic reader begins to smile tolerantly; for in the matter of respiratory acrobatics hay fever is to asthma what tiddleywinks is to chess.

There are more fantastic ways of acquiring asthma than a statistician could possibly crowd on a newspaper page. For a taste: I know a man who is malificently affected by the smell of paint or the smell of a broiled beefsteak; and another who is sent to bed by a whiff of buckwheat cakes but finds the smell of paint a certain relief for what ails him. The mere presence of horses, dogs or cats will bring about a constriction in some cases that the burning of kerosene, creosote, tobacco or saltpeter and stinkweed may relieve.

An asthmatic has to laugh at himself as he fights for breath. One physician, himself a sufferer, thus describes it: "It is as though a giant held you aloft on the edge of a precipice, threatening every moment to throw you over. But he never does. The asthmatic gets over his spasm and knows the joy of breathing. Nobody in the world knows the superlative joy of breathing, as does the asthmatic. And he has the consolation of knowing that when he dies he will suffer no more than he has already suffered. Dying is the easiest thing we do."

We are not getting so far afield from rose fever and hay fever as you may suppose. As all men are alike in thinking they are different, so all men are tarred with the one stick in being tarred with so many sticks. If it isn't rose fever, hay fever, asthma, is strawberry rash, ivy poisoning, and a thousand and one phobias, some of them so trifling as to be hardly noticeable.

This is the time when we should turn in and help one batch of unfortunates. Cut down the weeds! Kill ragweed wherever and whenever found. It hasn't any friends—except, of course, a few hogs. If you feed it to the hogs you may save your bacon.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Sad Event.

Cleveland:

It is easy enough to ridicule the Republican convention, but the proceedings here these last three days have been pretty sad and fit to make your heart bleed for the Republican Party—and the United States. It is easy enough to make merry at the expense of a big, earnest futility standing before a mechanical gadget in a crowded hall the size of a football field trying to breathe life into a wounded and fast-expiring ideal.

I am thinking of Herbert Hoover and his speech to the party Wednesday night. Mr. Hoover was a flop, and the so-called demonstration that you have been reading about was a mechanical fake which could have been shut off at any moment.

The fake mechanical demonstration is no innovation in national conventions. The greatest demonstration of them all, the one in the Chicago Auditorium in 1912, which attempted to stampede such tough and cyical campaigners as Elihu Root and Jim Watson, was strictly phony, and the cry of "We want Teddy!" was just so much noise to them.

• • • •

We had a similar demonstration one night in Madison Square Garden on behalf of Harry Wills, the coffee-colored Negro prize fighter who wanted a bout with Jack Dempsey at the time when Gene Tunney's lobby was conducting a quiet under-cover campaign for the same commercial opportunity. The Wills party planted about a hundred stooges—or stiffs, as they called them then—at strategic points around the Garden, and when Dempsey came down to the ring to take a bow at some routine prize fight the stiffs cued off a great clamor of hostility and contempt.

And when Wills came down the same aisle a few minutes later, knowing that he would be barred from the ring, the stiffs set up a terrific holler on behalf of the solemn cargo handler who claimed to be the uncrowned champion. They damned near blew the roof off Madison Square Garden for an outlay of $100.

Mike Jacobs, the promoter of the impending fight between Joe Louis and Max Schmeling, got his start in the show business promoting demonstrations for David Belasco on behalf of a road show which had done rather badly in New York. He would scatter a few dozen tickets around town, each ticket accompanied by a dollar bill and instructions to watch the head stiff—or the big stiff, as you might call him—for cues. Mr. Jacobs was the big stiff.

I could tell you the name of an actress now grown elderly whose reputation was made on that tour, starting with a great demonstration cued off by Mr. Jacobs, but she still lives and stands in need of a dollar and might get some busted shyster to sue for blighting her career. But you may be certain that most great demonstrations of popular acclaim are store goods. Mr. Jacobs could have put on a Hoover stampede in Cleveland if anyone had had the foresight to pay him his hire and put him to work. He has been heard to claim that he could put on a great, spontaneous demonstration for household whisky at a W. C. T. U. convention if the price were right. He may be overboasting in that, but he could start a small beer movement, I am sure.

The demonstration for Mr. Hoover wasn't even a good fake, but, such as it was, it was better than the man and the party deserved. But the principles of his speech were worth fighting for. He had a good oration, wherever he got it—and there are some who claim he rolled his own. But when it came time for the retiring leader of the Republican party, the great engineer, the man who was President four years, to deliver an address in simple language to a lot of simple, true-believing Americans he hadn't even the intelligence to stand in proper relation to the microphone. He was aimed and coaxed and even shoved, but after all his years in public life this man had so little knack, so little flexibility and knowledge of his times and the mechanics thereof that he couldn't adjust himself to a gadget as commonplace as the electric toaster.

He would have put you in mind of the old-time phonograph record of Hiram on the telephone or Hiram and the electric light.

Not only that, but he mumbled and muttered and chewed his words, and the force of a declaration which could have had tremendous meaning to the country was completely wasted in an incoherent mutter. The speech was powerful on paper, but there isn't one voter in ten who will read a speech intelligently in type, and Hoover balled up the Republican Party's greatest opportunity to start a patriotic rebellion against the nut element, the Nazi and Fascist and Communist influences in the Roosevelt Administration.

In the batting order of the Presidents, Hoover will rank down with Chester A. Arthur and Rutherford B. Hayes, and this was a time when he came up as an old pinch hitter with the bases loaded and hit nothing more than a loud foul.

He was as bad as that, and his own crowd quit cold on him. But then, they had been stifled for 40 minutes by the mushy mutilation of a first class statement of a first class peril to their freedom.

It isn't pleasant to see the Republican Party die of political sickness. Nobody in the Democratic Party has anything to say about the freedom of the individual, the approach of despotism, the cynical, leering, ignorant recklessness of Farleyism in Washington.

If the Republicans don't keep their health and voice and holler about these things the country will be a pushover for the bad men in the New Deal and for Roosevelt's airy political futurism.

That is why this convention has been a sad event for all of us.

Convention Observer Describes Enthusiasm At Cleveland As Resembling A Religious Crusade Presaging Unusual Campaign.

By Hilding Sivertsen.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Cleveland.

"THAT WAS a good Republican prayer," was the comment of one of the listeners at the Republican National Convention Thursday, after the invocation. And the chaplain was applauded as if he had made a real politicl speech. Maybe he had, at that.

It begins to look like politics and religion were going to be pretty generally mingled between now and November 3. In fact there is only one good way of explaining the Landon phenomenon which has burst into full flower as this is written. That explanation is that the Landon shouters are animated by a crusading spirit which will take the form of religious fervor.

Landon has been nominated, and the next thing is to anticipate what kind of a campaign his nomination will bring forth.

Last night I was in a group which included well-known politicians from Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, all of whom were enthusiastically for Landon. So far as I know, not a single one of them knows Landon, or had ever met him.

"He appeals to the imagination of all Americans," said the New Yorker. "Simplicity, sincerity, homespun honesty and the common touch of humanity—those are the qualities that have the universal appeal. Nobody thinks he is a great statesman in the usual sense. They know he doesn't make much of a speech. He has no ballyhoo or sophistication or cynicism about him—just good common sense and honesty. And that is what we need more than anything else in this campaign."

Republican Convention Likened To Skyrocket.

AND SO the Republican national convention of 1936 has gone off like a high-arching skyrocket, on one of those unaccountable emotional sprees—and paradoxically the emotionalism is lavished upon a man who knows little about political dramatics and whose utterances are as crowded with emotional exhibitionism as the reports of the United States Geodetic Survey.

It is one of the strangest phenomena that could be imagined. Nobody can predict what kind of a shoot it's going to take. Being so unusual, it may very conceivably catch the Roosevelt phalanx off its guard and throw it badly off balance. The New Deal tactics are based upon familiar time-honored principles of defensive warfare. Doubtless its strategy is well prepared for attacks upon extravagance, taxation, unconstitutional government, relief administration, spoils politics and the other familiar issues. But it could not be prepared for the interpretation of these things in terms of a religion or a deeply stirred emotional conviction.

Beneath the waves of the Republican turmoil at Cleveland were slow-moving currents of profound significance. These currents are of far more importance than oratory, surface excitement, political strategy. They reach down into depths of human motivations which are not usually touched by political campaigns. As usual there is a lot of claptrap, a lot of hogwash, a lot of convivial whop-te-do and childish horseplay. There is the usual amount of unreasonable partisanship. But if the Roosevelt generals think that the attack on the New Deal positions is to be merely partisan and typically political, they are likely to be greatly surprised before November. This is going to be distinctly a different kind of a campaign. Nothing has ever started out this way before. By the usual standards of political campaigns, it just doesn't make sense.

No Candidate Remembered To Have Won Such Support.

WITHOUT CONSULTING statistics or political history, I think it is safe to say that no new Presidential candidate, however magnetic, forceful and dramatic, has ever swept a convention off its feet without even being seen or heard, as Landon has swept this one. And it is, of course, even safer to say that no one of Landon's unique type has ever accomplished such a remarkable performance. That is why one is forced to the conclusion that something far deeper and more fundamental and more mysterious than customary political psychology is back of the Landon phenomenon.

It must be that the people of the United States are craving the ministry of one who is definitely opposed to ballyhoo, political trickery, insincerity, outward veneer and high-powered dramatics. In other words, there seems to be a very definite and deep-seated conviction among Republican voters that this campaign of 1936 involves a set of real, sub-utaneous moral issues. Hence the crusade. And if the campaign develops along the lines indicated, the psychology is going to be a mighty tough and baffling one for the Roosevelt-Farley strategy to cope with.

The Landon headquarters at the Hollenden Hotel resembled nothing so much as the Jayhawk or Kansan Hotel of Topeka on Kansas Day. One who has attended such Kansas jamborees had to pinch himself to make sure he was in Cleveland. There were the same sunflower badges, the same newspapermen, the same politicians, the same crowd. It is said that 1,200 Kansans made the trek to Cleveland to witness Landon's nomination, and that isn't at all unlikely. Euclid avenue looks like Kansas avenue and the auditorium might well be the green-domed Kansas Statehouse.

The Kansans seem to have put over their demonstration in such a diplomatic way that they have taken their Midwestern neighbors along with them, and the total result was that there was a most decided flavor of all the typical prairie States in all the goings-on. Even the blase New Yorkers and Pennsylvanians broke out in a rash of sunflowers. In fact the convention was so completely under the leadership of the Middle Western progressive Republicans that one often wondered what had become of the standpatters.

New Force Detected In American Politics.

LIKE A BREEZE from the now-revived and rain-soaked high plains of Kansas, where the buffalo sod stretches for many hundreds of miles, there has come a new force in American politics. For the first time in its history, Kansas has produced a Presidential nominee. Will the Roosevelt-Farley generals know how to meet the new psychology thus created?

Perhaps Mr. Farley had already furnished the answer when he spoke slightingly of the Governor of "a typical prairie State." The typical prairie States belong to what some of the intelligentisa have sneeringly called the "Bible Belt." But perhaps the country will be so deeply stirred that the Bible Belt will include the Bronx and Hollywood and Snohomish and the rest of the places.

The typical prairie States have been known to generate prairie fires. They did so back in the nineties, as every old politician can remember. This time it will be a different kind of prairie fire, but it may turn the heat on some of the newly entrenched exponents of a new conception of autocratic power—who knows?

In the nineties commentators referred to the uprising as "a Pentecost of Politics." Possibly the year 1936 will demonstrate a modern version of such a pentecost. Anyhow it all looks mighty mysterious and baffling. There is something going on in the hearts of the people and it isn't going to be an ordinary campaign.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Baccalaureate.

Gentlemen of the Graduation Class: For the first time in seven years we are graduating a class, the members of which do not constitute merely another group of perplexed young men destined to establish new records within revolving doors. Business is good, the big corporations of America are paying some attention to personnel again, a good education is being restored slowly but surely to its position of importance as a commodity, and it looks as if a bright boy with the right equipment might now make same progress not wholly dependent upon his thumb.

• • • •

The Nation is still in a period of intellectual confusion, but sound thinking is triumphing over loose talk once more and a good mind again looms like a wart on a screen beauty's cheek. For the past seven years college graduates have been suffering from a condition under which only the politicians were supposed to have the right answers. For almost a decade boys with streamline thinking apparatus have been going forth into a world where the fellow with the loudest voice was always right and where every debate was marred by the high quality of ignorance shown both by speakers and audience.

• • • •

Graduation has meant facing realities and finding them tougher than the most melancholy warnings. It has meant leaving the campus for a world where anybody with a book was regarded with suspicion and no small amount of fear. It has seemed a lot like a world made up almost wholly of Zionchecks, quintuplets, WPA foremen, boon-doggiers and squirrel hunters. But things are looking better.

• • • •

Industrialists are now looking over their staffs and deciding a little young blood wouldn't do them any harm. Employers everywhere have now become so accustomed to wading through the tax blanks that they are able to take time out now and then for a little attention to business. There is a distinct call at last for young men with the courage and fresh viewpoint of citizens who are yet to face an income tax, be placed under Federal control or declared unconstitutional.

• • • •

Unless I am badly mistaken you need not leave the campus this year in the firm conviction that the thing to do is grab the first job available as a life-guard, piano player or office boy with an advertising firm. You have a fair chance of landing something with a future, even if your parents are Republicans.

And so, my message is: Be brave! Be confident. The world beckons . . . and this time it won't greet you with the anti-climatic message, "Gotta match?"

Somebody suggested Col. Lindbergh for Vice President. Possibly on the ground that he doesn't mind being alone.

Pilots Save 4 in Burning Plane

ing halt after the landing gear had been torn off.

At the time it caught fire it was at an altitude of about 7,000 feet, the pilots said.

Jones and his fellow passengers tore open the door of the fiery pilots' compartment and dragged Heffly and Schacher to safety. A few moments later the plane was destroyed by the blaze.

Schacher said he and Heffley smelled a gasoline leak, cut off the motor and began a gradual descent. A moment later, he said, there was a backfire and a flash of flame.

As fire began to eat at the single-motored ship, Heffley put it into a dive.

"Pilot Heffley told me to go back and tell the passengers what had happened," Schacher said.

"I told them to fasten their safety belts, that the plane was on fire and that he would land in a hurry. They did not show any alarm, but quietly did as I told them."

Jones said Schacher then rejoined Heffley in the pilots' compartment, tightly closing the door to the passenger cabin.

"If they had not stuck to their posts," he asserted, "we all would have been killed.

"With the plane ablaze, the pilot made a quick, forced landing—a beautiful piece of work—in a field near Ferris. The plane hit hard and we scrambled out, pulling the pilots from the flaming compartment."

Jones said he did not have time to be frightened.

"We came down so fast that we didn't have time to think," he said.

Pilot Tells Version.

Heffley tonight told his verison of the fire and crash from the hospital.

"We were paying no attention to anything in particular—when it (the fire) came all at once," he said.

"We smelled gasoline. I cut the switches and put the ship into a dive.

"Maybe the motor backfired; maybe gas dripped on the hot manifolds. I don't know exactly, but there was a flash and we were on fire.

"I told Schacher to warn the passengers.

"Thatfi rst flash burned us a little.

"While the ship was diving I squirmed back into the cabin, out of the pilot's compartment, and reached through to the controls. That's why my arms were burned so much more than any other part of me.

"Eugene said the passengers were all calm.

Passengers Calm.

"I told Eugene to get back with the passengers, but he wouldn't.

"We were getting close to the ground and I couldn't land the ship just reaching my arms through, so I climbed back into the compartment. Eugene climbed right after me and sat there trying to put out the fire.

"We hit hard—hard enough to knock the motor out.

"Mr. Jones met me at the door of the pilot compartment and pulled me through. He helped Eugene out, too. The ship was burning fiercely. The wings were loaded with gasoline and it wasn't safe to stay near."

First Aid Treatment.

The plane landed about three miles west of Ferris. Ambulances took the pilots and passengers to Ferris for first aid treatment. Then they came here.

Jones came in a private car and the other members of the party in ambulances. His shirt splattered with blood, Jones helped attendants wheel the injured men to an emergency operating room. He insisted he was not hurt, but continually held his hand to his breastbone. After telephoning Houston, he was taken to a room and put to bed.

Jones was en route home after speaking at the dedication of the statue of Robert E. Lee here in connection with the centennial celebration. He had attended numerous functions in connection with the centennial and with President Franklin D. Roosevelt, of whose party he was a member.

The plane was owned by the United Gas Co.

Text of Speech By Roosevelt Before Texans

Monopolies Are Assailed; Good Neighbor Policy Extension Urged.

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., June 12.—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's Texas Centennial speech here today:

I have come here to bear the tribute of the Nation to you on your hundredth birthday; you are 100 years young. I am here also because I conceive it to be one of the duties and the privileges of the Presidency to visit, from time to time, every part of the United States. When I was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Navy by President Wilson in 1913, I had visited, as I recall, only about 20 States, but during the next few years I had the fortunate opportunity of going into all the others. Seeing things at first hand is a good habit. I have been fortunate indeed, for as a result of personal contacts with every part of the United States during many years past I have tried honestly to visualize the problems of every part of the land in their relationships to every other part, and to the unity of the whole. This great centennial exposition is not for Texans alone; it is for the people of all the other 47 States as well. I hope that they will take full advantage of it. During the past three years, with the return of confidence and the great increase in prosperity, the excellent custom of getting acquainted with the United States has asserted itself. We see a great tide of travel by rail, by plane, by ship and by automobile. We are indeed seeing things at first hand—may the habit spread.

Recalls State History.

Coincident with the return of better days, we have witnessed three great expositions: The Century of Progress in Chicago, so popular that it was kept open for a second year; the California International Exposition in San Diego, which is open today in its second successful year, and the third is this fine exposition commemorating the Century of the Independence of Texas. May you have all the good luck you so well deserve. It is not mere acres that count in this world. It is, rather, the character of the people who dwell upon them. You, the people of Texas, have been tried by fire in these hundred years. You have commenced a war for independence. You have been apparently defeated, and then you have won out. You have gone through the difficult days of the War Between the States and the trials of reconstruction. You have had to fight against oppressors from within and without.

Your farmers were among the first to rebel against exploitation by the railroads. In a period of monopoly, combinations, over-capitalization, high rates, poor service and discrimination against the small shipper, you established a landmark in the regulation of public utilities for the good of their users.

Later, when industrial development came to Texas, you were confronted by corporations that got out of hand. Here again you called into play the old Texas spirit of freedom for the individual, and out of it came your antitrust laws, preceded by only one other State in the Union.

It is, as I recall my history, a fact that during this period there were many prophets of evil who foretold the ruin of Texas by the enactment of legislation to curb these abuses. Yet it is a matter of record that several years later an authoritative survey reported this:

Cites Monopoly Fight.

"No part of the Union is more prosperous, no other State has so sympathetically pursued a policy of corporation regulation, and no other State is so free from the domination of special interests."

Why did the people of Texas do this more than a generation ago? They believed in democracy in government, but they discovered that democracy in government could not exist unless, at the same time, there was democracy in opportunity.

You found that certain forms of monopoly, the combinations of public utilities and other businesses which sought their own ends were undemocratic because they were bearing down heavily on their smaller competitors, and on the people they served. Because of this they were taking away opportunity.

Today we have restored democracy in government.

We are in process of restoring democracy in opportunity.

In our national life, public and private, the very nature of free government demands that there must be a line of defense held by the yeomanry of business and industry and agriculture, not the generalissimos, but the small men, the average men in business and industry and agriculture, those who have an ownership in their business and a responsibility which gives them stability. Any elemental policy, economic or political, which tends to eliminate these dependable defenders of democratic institutions and to concentrate control in the hands of a few small, powerful groups, is directly opposed to the stability of government and to democratic government itself. If the tendency in the dozen years following the World War had been permitted to continue, the inevitable consequence would have been the destruction of the base of our form of government. For its splendid structure there would have been substituted, as a natural result, an autocratic form of government.

Recalls Federal Action.

I have spoken of the prophets of evil who plagued your great reforms in Texas. They were blood brothers of some who seek to operate on a national scale. After you in Texas had done so much to restore democracy in opportunity you found, as we in other States found, that the evils we had sought to eradicate had merely jumped over the boundary into some other State. The old abuses of the railroads were finally curbed only after teeth were put into the interstate commerce law and a Nation-wide regulation was made effective. Banking reforms were tried in many States but here again reform became effective only when the Federal Government was enabled to operate throughout the Union, first by the Federal reserve act, and finally by means of the splendid legislation of the past three years. Individual States attempted courageously to regulate the sale of securities or the control of exchanges, but you and I know that from the point of view of the Nation as a whole, the effective curbing of abuses was made possible only when the Congress of the United States took a hand by passing the securities act and the stock exchange act.

So it goes with the constructive reforms of many other abuses which, in the past have limited or prevented democracy in opportunity. The more progressive of the States may do their share, but unless the action of the States is substantially uniform and simultaneous, the effectiveness of reform is nullified, crippled by the chiselers, who, like many other evildoers, are still with us.

The net result of monopoly, the net result of economic and financial control in the hands of the few, has meant the ownership of labor as a commodity. If labor is to be a commodity in the United States, in the final analysis it means that we shall become a Nation of boarding houses instead of a nation of homes. If our people ever submit to that, they will have said good-by to their historic freedom. Men do not fight for boarding houses. They will fight for their homes.

Co-operation Held Key.

I have spoken of the interest which all the country should take in this great exposition. I mean this as a symbol for the concern which every locality should have in every other locality in every other State. The prosperity which has come to Texas through the products of its farms and ranches, the products of its mines, the products of its oil fields, and the products of its factories, has been made possible chiefly because other parts of the Nation were in possession of the buying power, the consuming power, to use what you have produced. On the other side of the picture, thousands of factories and thousands of farms in the North and in the East have been enabled more greatly to sell their wares because of the prosperity of you, the people of Texas. I have spoken not once but a dozen times of the necessity of interdependence of each State on every other State. It is a lesson which cannot be driven home or preached too often.

I have taken great happiness in these past three years in the lessening of sectionalism, which is apparent on every hand. More and more we have been thinking nationally. That in itself is good, but it would not have been good if at the same time we had not come to understand more deeply that the national good-neighbor policy must extend also to those neighbors who lie outside of our national boundaries. You in Texas, whose boundaries extend for hundreds of miles along those of our sister republic of Mexico, can well understand what the good-neighbor policy means throughout the Americas. We seek to banish war in this hemisphere, we seek to extend those practices of good will and closer friendship upon which peace itself is based.

I salute the Empire of Texas."

Roosevelt

but said where evils jump State lines, only national action by the Federal Government could effect a cure.

In this respect, he mentioned the interstate commerce act, the Federal Reserve law, the New Deal banking reforms, and the securities and stock exchange laws.

Looking back over the years since the war in leading up to his anti-monopoly theme, he asserted:

"If the tendency in the dozen years following the World War had been permitted to continue, the inevitable consequence would have been the destruction of the base of our form of government.

"For its splendid structure there would have been substituted as a natural result, an antocratic form of government."

Constructive reforms of many economic abuses was essential, he said.

"The more progressive of the States may do their share," he added, "but unless the action of the States is substantially uniform and simultaneous, the effectiveness of reform is nullified—crippled by the chiselers who, like many other evildoers, are, alas, still with us."

Given Record Ovation.

Dallas, Tex., June 12 (AP).—Four miles of Texans let out cowboy yells in a welcome to President Roosevelt today that transcended any ovation this city ever has known.

Here for a 5-hour visit in the $25,000,000 Texas Centennial Exposition city, the President sweltered—but smiled—under a blazing sun.

Police estimated that 400,000 persons applauded the President from the moment he stepped from his train until he arrived in the Cotton Bowl stadium on the exposition grounds—there to be greeted by 50,000 more.

A visit from his son, Elliott, and Gov. Guy B. Park, of Missouri, and Gov. Richard Leche, of Louisiana, kept the President and Mrs. Roosevelt aboard their train 30 minutes after their arrival.

He entered his automobile—a bright red fire chief's car hastily painted black for the occasion—and started for the exposition grounds.

As he passed the county jail, where hundreds of inmates shouted wildly at him, the President waved his hat and smiled broadly.

Ticker tape fluttered about his bare head and throngs screamed incessant "yipees." At the Cotton Bowl, the massed thousands, seated for hours in 95-degree heat, rose as a unit as the Presidential automobile arrived.

Gov. James V. Allred received a tremendous ovation as he introduced the President. Bare-headed and gripping the speaker's rostrum, the President spoke for 25 minutes.

Mrs. Roosevelt received thunderous applause when she accepted a hugh bouquet of red roses, nestled in a white, ten-gallon hat, which Miss Frances Nalle, Texas' blue bonnet girl, handed her.

Corporate Tax Study Is Begun By Conferees

Senate and House Members Mull Over Most Controversial Phase.

After reading a statement yesterday by the United States Chamber of Commerce that provisions of the new tax bill "would obstruct industrial growth and the progress of recovery," Senate and House tax conferees began to consider the most controversial section of the bill—the graduated levy on undistributed corporate profits.

The conferees, who met early, are under pressure to report a tax bill by Monday. They continued their gag rule, and little of the procedings leaked out.

"We are ready to work morning, afternoon and night, if necessary, to complete our work on the bill," said Representative Fred Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, Senate chairman, reiterated hs statement of Thursday that "we are still deaf, dumb and blind."

The attack by the Chamber of Commerce was contained in a letter sent to its entire membership by the president, Harper Sibley.

Sibley aimed his criticism particularly against the House measure, which would provide a graduate levy up to 42½ per cent against undistriubted corporate profits. He said the Senate bill, which provides for a flat 7 per cent tax on corporate profits, was to be "preferred, although it also imposes penalties upon reasonable retention of earnings needed for business purposes."

"Under the House bill," Sibley said, "the highest rate of tax falls upon a corporation which has an income of $18,000 or more and which is so situated that it must retain 57½ per cent of its earnings."

So insistent has the Administration become that the principle of the House bill be retained that it virtually has been conceded that the Senate conferees will be forced to give way in a measure to hign corporate profit taxes. That they will not be as high as those in the House bill is certain, but the exact figure is still a matter for speculation.

The only progress the conferees have reported is a tentative agreement on the 80 per cent windfall or "unjust enrichment" tax on unpaid and refunded AAA processing taxes. There still are several administrative features to be agreed upon.

The tariff provisions contained in the 289 amendments added by the Senate have not been considered yet.

2 Men Electrocuted As Tree Breaks Wire

Bloomington, Ind., June 12 (AP).—Two men were electrocuted near here today when a falling tree brought a high tension electric line down in the midst of a gang working on a road.

The dead were Joseph Kerr, 57, Bloomington contractor, and Merrill Wykoff, 21, a farmer. Kerr was killed when he came into contact with the wire while attempting to aid Wykoff, former Bloomington High School star athlete.

ICC Permits Rails 6 Months For High Rates

Emergency Freight Levies Extended; Roads Lose Permanency Plea.

By the Associated Press.

A six-month extension in the Nation-wide system of increased "emergency" freight rates—with some exceptions—was granted to railroads yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Railroads had asked that the increased rates, due to expire at the end of this month after more than 14 months' operation, be continued indefinitely. The carriers contended the rates had increased the income of a financially distressed transportation system more than $100,000,000 in a year.

The Federal regulatory body refused this request.

Included in the modifications to the general six-month extension order were emergency charges on coal and iron ore. A 15 per cent surcharge on each ton of coal and coke was cut to 10 cents. The maximum surcharge on iron ore was lowered from 10 to 8 cents per ton.

Emergency charges on unmanufactured tobacco, flaxseed screenings, woods and ores and concentrates were removed and those on iron pyrites, stone, pig iron, raw peanuts and other products were reduced.

A "Part Victory."

Spokesmen for major railroads here said yesterday's order was a victory, although only in part.

Members of the commission agreed that the decision left the railroad's major problems unsolved.

Co-ordination suggestions of Joseph B. Eastman, Federal transportation co-ordinator, were submitted as a move towards permanent rehabilitation of the railroad industry. Eastman earlier in the day advanced a series of proposals for improvement of passenger income of the railroads.

The majority of the commission members in allowing the six-month extension, said they "were not convinced that the emergency charges constitute an undue burden upon the traffic upon which they are imposed or upon the shippers or receivers of such traffic."

They said the former increase had "not prevented a material expansion in freight traffic" and that "to continue them for a comparatively short period will add materially to the net revenues of the railroads without placing an undue burden on the shipping public."

The carriers were told "these charges cannot be regarded as a permanent remedy."

Aitchison Opposed Rule.

Commissioner Aitchison, joined by Porter and Tate, termed the extension "counter to the mandates of the interstate commerce act." Aitchison contended that the increase even "if lawful will defeat its own purpose by making the rail carriers more vulnerable to competition without even temporarily bettering their real position."

The minority termed the claimed increase of $100,000,000 revenue "wholly illusory," saying there had been definite evidence the higher rates drove business from the railroads to competing agencies of transportation.

"The longer the surcharges go on," it added, "the greater is the certainty that an increasing proportion of the traffic will leave the rails."

The dissent termed the extension "abdication of the duties and powers of the commission under the law" to protect the public.

Church to Observe 70th Anniversary

West Washington Baptist Church will begin celebrating its seventieth anniversary tomorrow.

A special feature of the morning service will be the presentation of a flag in honor of soldiers of the Civil War who laid the foundations of the church.

At 8 p. m. a sermon will be preached on the text used by the Rev. W. S. O. Thomas in 1899.

The anniversary celebration will continue through the week. Wednesday evening the Ladies' Aid Society will meet. Thursday will be homecoming night—an evening which will be devoted to reminisences and retrospection.

Friday is the seventieth birthday of the church. Robert L. Haycock will preside at an anniversary dinner at 6:30 o'clock and the address of the evening will be delivered by the Rev. W. R. Flanagan, former pastor of the church.

Episcopal Festival Starts Thursday

Bands, parades and colorful booths are some of the features of the June festival to be given Thursday and Friday on the grounds of Transfiguration Episcopal Church, 1415-19 Gallatin street northwest. One of the chief events of the carnival is the dinner to be held on the rectory lawn Thursday night.

Officers in charge of the festival are J. O'Shaughnessy, chairman, and William C. Bowman, jr., vice chairman and treasurer.

Some of the other events on the program are the Elks Boys' Band, directed by James L. Kidwell; the Metropolitan Police Boys Band, under direction of Clinton Brown, jr.; motion pictures, Reuben Ford in charge; Daughters of Job drill; the Bethany Chapter Women's Novelty Band, and the De Molay Boys who are expected to perform.

The Men's Club in charge of the games. The committee assisting the chairman, Weldon W. Price, is as follows: Ulysses Butler, Reuben Ford, J. L. Harmon, William C. Bowman, jr., R. N. Jefferson, Frank Lightfoot, J. G. Staack, Herman J. Galloway, F. N. Holmes, A. C. Benzler, Luther Iager, Theodore Mullican, George R. Wellington, Robert Vanderlip, Paul Rice, J. O'Shaughnessy, P. N. Woodson.

Tupper to Fill First Baptist Church Pulpit

Takoma Park Congregation to Hold Joint Service; Griffin to Preach.

Dr. Kerr Boyce Tupper, Richmond, Va., will occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist Church tomorrow, speaking at the morning services at 11 o'clock on "The Most Beautiful Portrait of the Christ," and in the evening on "The Highest Type of Aristocracy."

Dr. Tupper is a brother of the late Dr. Henry Allen Tupper, former pastor of the First Baptist Church, and has served as pastor in Philadelphia and Denver churches. The father of the two brothers was for more than 25 years secretary of the foreign mission board of the Southern Baptist Convention.

The Lord's Supper will be celebrated at the morning service.

Children's Day will be observed in Sunday School departments, with members of the children's classes participating in the program.

In observance of Children's Day, the Takoma Park Baptist Church will hold a combination service tomorrow morning of both the Sunday school and church. The services will begin at 10:30 a. m. A special program will be presented in which many children have parts. At the evening services the young people of the church will have charge of the program.

The Rev. Leo W. Griffin, pastor, will preach tomorrow morning on "Taking a Long Look at Jesus," at the Bethesda Baptist Church. In the evening his subject will be "Lesson From the Summer Sermon."

The pastor of the First Baptist Church of Hyattsville, Md., will preach tomorrow morning on "Why Become a Christian?" Services will begin at 11 a. m. In the evening a symposium will be held, followed by a short talk by the pastor.

The Rev. J. L. S. Holloman, president of Washington Baptist Seminary, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon tomorrow afternoon to the graduates of the school at services held at the Second Baptist Church. It is the seminary's tenth annual commencement.

The Chevy Chase Baptist Church will observe Children's Day tomorrow with a combined service of Sunday school and church beginning at 10:30 a. m. Mrs. Frank H. Jackson will be in charge of the program. In the evening the Rev. Edward O. Clark, pastor, will speak on "Salt of the Earth." The services will begin at 8 p. m.

A special program will be presented tomorrow morning at the Metropolitan Baptist Church by departments of the church Bible school. The pastor, the Rev. John Compton Ball, will preach on "Which Headrest for You—The Lap of Delilah or the Bosom Christ," at the evening service.

'Man's Preserver' Scientists' Topic

"God the Preserver of Man" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Isaiah 41:10: "Fear thou not, for I am with thee: be not dismayed; for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness."

Among the citations which compose the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "O love the Lord, all ye His saints; for the Lord preserveth the faithful, and plentifully rewardeth the proud doer. Be of good courage, and He shall strengthen your heart, all ye that hope in the Lord." (Psalms 31:23,24).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Nothing is more disheartening than to believe that there is a power opposite to God, or good, and that God endows this opposing power with strength to be used against Himself, against life, health, harmony!"

Edgar Priest Memorial Tablet Will Be Unveiled at Cathedral

Dr. DeVries to Conduct Service Today; Rev. Bohanan to Be in Charge of Rock Creek Parish Programs.

A memorial tablet to Edgar Priest, first organist and choirmaster of Washington Cathedral, will be unveiled at 5 p. m. today at a special service to be held in the south aisle of the Nave Crypt. The Rev. Dr. William L. DeVries, precentor of the Cathedral and colleague of Mr. Priest for many years, will conduct the service.

The Rev. Dr. ZeBarney T. Phillips, rector of Epiphany Parish, will deliver the address as chaplain of the District chapter of the American Guild of Organists, which is sponsoring presentation of the tablet. It bears the following inscription: "The Lord is my strength and my song and has become my salvation." Friends of Mr. Priest, and particularly former members of the Cathedral choir, are cordially invited to be present.

The Right Rev. H. P. Almon Abbott, D. D., bishop of Lexington, Ky., will deliver the sermons at both the celebration of the Holy Communion at 11 a. m. and the Choral Evensong Service at 4 p. m. in the great choir of the Cathedral tomorrow. The graduating class of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School will attend the Evensong Service as their baccalaureate. Friends of the graduates and the general public are invited to attend these and other services held in the cathedral.

The Holy Communion will be celebrated at 7:30 a. m. in the Chapel of the Resurrection tomorrow.

Group pilgrimages for out of town worshippers and others interested will be held immediately following the 11 a. m. and 4 p.m. services. There will be a special pilgrimage at 2:30 p. m. beginning at the children's chapel for members of Miss Alice Hutchins Drake's class at the Young Women's Christian Association.

The Rock Creek Parish Episcopal Church. The Rev. F. J. Bohanan will conduct both morning services tomorrow. There will be Holy Communion at the 8:30 a. m. service and morning prayer and worship at 11 a. m.

All Saints Episcopal Church. The rector, the Rev. Henry Teller Cocke, will speak on "Summer" at the 11 o'clock service on Sunday. There will be Holy Communion at the early service at 7:30. The closing exercises of the Sunday School will be held at 9:30 Sunday, with awards to children for the work of the last year.

Dr. J. T. Stone Will Address Presbyterians

To Be Guest Preacher at N. Y. Ave. Church at Both Services.

Dr. John Timothy Stone, president of the Chicago Theological Seminary, will be guest preacher at both services of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church tomorrow.

Dr. Stone, who is a former moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, was a member of the Synod of Baltimore during his pastorate at Brown Memorial Church.

The Christian Endeavor Society, led by Edward Knapp, will meet at 6:45 p. m. tomorrow to discuss "The Rainbow Flag."

The Covenant-First Presbyterian Church: The Rev. Samuel Robinson Allison will speak at the Sunday morning service on "Reconciliation."

The Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church: The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed at the morning service.

Sixth Presbyterian Church: Dr. J. Herbert Garner, pastor, will preach a special Children's Day sermon at 11 a. m.

A Children's Day vesper service will be held in the church at 4 p. m.

Metropolitan Presbyterian Church: "Jesus and the Children" will be the topic of Dr. Freely Rohrer's sermon at 11 a. m. Vesper services will be held at 6 p. m.

Central Presbyterian Church: Dr. James H. Taylor, the pastor, will be in Leaksville, N. C., preaching for the Rev. Wade Allison. The pulpit will be filled by Robert McFerren Crowe, a graduate of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond.

Last Service Set By French Group

The French congregation which meets at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church will hold its last service of the season at 4 p. m. tomorrow when the pastor, the Rev. Andre Frank Liotard, will preach on "Une Annee Ecoule."

At the close of the service there will be a farewell tea. As usual, the French services will be suspended for the summer but will be resumed in the fall.

At a recent business meeting the congregation voted unanimously to continue Mr. Liotard as pastor for another year. The present executive committee also was continued. The treasurer, William J. Wallis, submitted a report indicating the balancing of the budget. A proposal was launched for celebrating next spring the tenth anniversary of the founding of the French services by Dr. Florian Vurpillot.

Sunday School Group To Hold Conference

A week-end conference of Sunday school workers at Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md., was announced by the District of Columbia Sunday School Association yesterday.

Date of the conference was fixed for June 19, 20 and 21. Simultaneously a conference of young people and administrative officers and teachers will be held.

W. W. Everett, jr., is chairman of the first conference and William S. Jones of the latter.

United Brethren Church Observes Children's Day

A special Children's Day program, to be held at 10 a. m., will feature services tomorrow at the Memorial United Brethren Church.

A pageant will be presented at the services. Evensong and vesper services will be held at 7:30 p. m. with a brief message by the Rev. Simpson B. Daugherty, pastor.

Conference Opens.

The sixth conference of young people representing Congregational churches of Washington and vicinity, held at Kamp Kahlert, Md., opened last night, with more than 100 delegates in attendance. The address was given by Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, of Mount Pleasant Church. He spoke on "Living a Co-operative Life." The delegates will meet today in study groups, and the conference will close tomorrow afternoon with a communion service.

'Everlasting Yea' Is Pierce's Topic

The Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, pastor of All Soul's Unitarian Church, will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "The Everlasting Yea."

The services tomorrow will end the season for the church. For the next three months no services will be held at All Soul's, but members of the congregation will unite with the Mount Pleasant Congregational and the Universalist Memorial churches for the annual series of summer Union Services.

A tea in honor of those who have joined the church during the year will be held in the Court of the Founders on tomorrow afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock.

Closing services of the church school will be held at 9:45 a. m.

Dr. R. J. Clinchy To End Season At Mt. Pleasant

Topic of Final Sermon Will Be on 'Peace;' Sunday Program Suspended.

In his final sermon of the season, Dr. Russell J. Clinchy will speak to his congregation at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church tomorrow morning on "Peace Amidst Agitation." After tomorrow's service the church will suspend its regular Sunday pogram until September 13.

Beginning June 21, Mount Pleasant Church will co-operate with the National Universalist Memorial and All Souls' Unitarian Churches in a series of 12 union summer services.

The First Congregational Church. The children and young people will conduct the worship services tomorrow in an observance of Children's Day.

The Cleveland Park Community Church. The church school will hold its graduation exercises at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

The Lincoln Congregational Temple. Dr. R. W. Brooks will speak tomorrow morning on "Belief in Jesus and Our Modern Problems."

On the Air Today

Everything is quiet again along the political front. Broadcasting company employes can go home to bed at usual hours without wondering whether corrections will pop up at midnight changing the entire order of things for the next day.

The greatest tribute is due the networks for their sacrifice of revenue in the interests of maintaining a complete account of events transpiring at Cleveland after a session once got started.

Now we have a vacation from oratory until Philadelphia and the Democratic convention.

• • • •

Tentatively set for broadcasting yesterday morning was an address by Franklin D. Roosevelt. He's on a mid-western tour this week. Usually he gets precedence over anything else conceivable on the air. But the commitment of Columbia covering the airing of the Republican convention prevented Mr. Roosevelt's address yesterday from being carried. Things certainly have come to a pretty pass!

Feature note: It took a little time for the air barons to capitalize on the mess of locusts we are battling this year—but N. B. C. rises to the occasion this morning with a program titled "The Song of the Cicada," to be presided over by Dr. Ernest N. Cory, professor of entomology, University of Maryland. A promise is made to the effect that much will be revealed as to how the cicadas communicate with each other inasmuch as the males. (or is it the females?) are deaf. WMAL, at 9:45 a. m.

Features today:

"Meet McBride:" Beginning a new series of dramatized detective stories, WJSV, at 7:30. (This series is "Gun Thunder," originally scheduled for Sunday nights over C. B. S.)

Cupid's night: National Barn Dance tunes to wedding and June themes, with "Why Did I Kiss That Girl?" "Haste to the Wedding," "The Bride Comes Home," "You Are My Lucky Star" and others. And just to be different the quartet sings "No, No, a Thousand Times No." WMAL, at 8:30.

"Professor Quiz:" And another group of contestants trying to answer the question in his "Brain-Busters" half-hour, WJSV, at 8:30. (Guests are admitted for this show, Willard Room, Willard Hotel.)

Swing session: Lee Wiley starred in new series glorifying "swing" music. Guests' band tonight, the original Mound City Blue Blowers, reunited for the occasion, WJSV, at 7.

Chateau: Features Alice Faye, movie actress, and George Jessel, WRC, at 8:30.

Detroit Derby: Descriptions by Clem McCarthy, WMAL, at 5:35. Princeton invitation track meet, WMAL, at 4.

Interfraternity sing: From University of Chicago, WMAL, at 9:35. Sigma Chi leads off.

Hits of yesterday: Meredith Willson plays own distinctive arrangements of such tunes as "Were You Sincere?" "Poor Butterfly," "Melancholy Baby," "Stay as Sweet as You Are," "Little White Gardenia," WRC, at 7:30.

Boston Pop Concert: With the humorous wedding march from Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Coq d'Or," WMAL, at 7:30. J. H. H.

Culbertson on Bridge

Shading or Shattering?

The glib term "shaded bid" is heard in every sort of bridge circle. Unfortunately, many players use it as an alibi to justify bids that have shattered rather than shaded conventional requirements. Only the most seasoned judgment can determine the precise degree to which honor tricks may be shaded without undermining the solid structure of partnership understanding.

Take-out doubles, particularly, cannot stand much in the line of "shading." The opponents of Dr. John Rogers and Mr. Sam O'Connell, of Springfield, Mass., must have discovered ruefully the truth of that principle from the following hand in a recent tournament.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The biddding:

South	West	North	East
1 no trp.	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	Redouble	Pass
Pass	Pass

East's double of one no trump probably was "based" on a combination of factors. He may have reasoned that with North passing to a strong bid, West must have a fair hand, and he himself had three suits stopped. Whether or not this was his reasoning, the fact remains that he had no earthly right to "shade" the requirements for a take-out double to such a dangerous extent.

West was completely guiltless in passing both to the take-out double and to the subsequent redouble. From his point of view, his diamond suit should account for at least five tricks, certainly more than his share.

Dr. Rogers' (North) redouble was a model of shrewdness. He had correctly refused to raise one no trump, realizing that a game was extremely remote with his meager assistance, but he was quite willing to play for seven tricks if that number, by virtue of a redouble, would offer chance for game.

East was in a bad spot after the redouble. He had set out in a leaky canoe without knowing how to swim. Now, he didn't know what to do except to cling to the sinking craft. He was pretty certain that whatever he did would be wrong, but preferred to stand pat rather than risk an enormous penalty by rescuing the redouble in one of his four card suits. (Another bad decision, I believe.)

West opened the seven of diamonds. Declarer won, and knocked out the heart ace. East put his partner back on lead with a diamond, but, after that suit had been run off, declarer claimed the rest of the tricks with high cards alone.

Thus, one no trump redoubled was made without even a finesse, for game and rubber.

Today's Question.

Question: The bidding was:

North	South
1 spade	1 no trump
2 spades	2 no trump
3 no trump	Pass

West, my partner, led out the ace of clubs. I held the queen and three spot of clubs. Which should I have played?

Answer: The queen. The ace lead called for your highest.

Louise McNeil, Francis Keyes To Be Married

New Hampshire Senator's Son to Wed Massachusetts Girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. McNeil, of Chestnut Hill, Mass., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Louise McNeil, to Mr. Francis Keyes, son of Senator and Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, of Washington and Haverhill, N. H.

The news is of interest, both in Boston, where Miss McNeil's family is prominent in business and social circles, and in the Capital, where Senator and Mrs. Keyes have resided since the former Governor of New Hampshire was elected to the Senate in 1918. Mr. Keyes has been away from Washington the greater part of the time for the last eight years, as he attended Milton Academy in Milton, Mass., and Harvard University, from which he will be graduated. He is a member of the Hasty Pudding, Institute of 1770 Delta Kappa Epsilon and Delphic Club.

Miss McNeil attended Miss May's School in Boston, the Warrenton Country School at Warrenton, Va., and completed her education at La Petite Ecole Florentine in Florence, Italy. She was presented to Boston society in the season of 1933-34. She is a younger sister of Mrs. Dudley Coonley, of Boston, and Lake Sunapee, N. H., the former Virginia McNeil.

Senator Keyes, who also attended Harvard, has gone to Cambridge, Mass., to attend his son's graduation. Mrs. Keyes, well known as a writer under the name of Frances Parkinson Keyes, has closed her home in Alexandria and gone to Europe for the summer. The author of "Letters of a Senator's Wife," and at one time associate editor of a nationally known magazine, Mrs. Keyes also recently published a book of poetry, "The Happy Wanderer," inspired by her travels in foreign lands.

Senator Keyes wil return to Washington for the closing sessions of Congress before going to his home at Haverhill for the summer.

Charles Sykes Returns Today

Counsel of PWA Visited Parents and Spent Few Days at Beach.

Charles Scott Sykes will return to Washington today from Virginia Beach, Va., where he spent several days at the Chalfonte. Mr. Sykes went to Virginia Beach following a visit of a week with his parents, Judge and Mrs. Eugene O. Sykes.

Mr. Sykes will remain in Washington about two weeks before returning by motor to Little Rock, Ark., where he is chief counsel for PWA.

He will be accompanied on his return by his cousin, Miss Charles Scott Henning, of Memphis, Tenn. Mr. Sykes and Miss Henning were both named for their grandfather. Miss Henning is a member of the Junior League of Memphis.

Mr. and Mrs. Courtland W. Page, of Washington also have been spending several days in Virginia Beach at the Chalfonte Hotel.

Mrs. John C. Miller, of Washington, and her daughter, who are motoring through Virginia, are spending the week-end at Virginia Beach, before continuing on their trip to visit Jamestown, Yorktown and Williamsburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Millar Black, of Washington, are among those who are spending an early vacation at Virginia Beach and are stopping at the Avalon. They expect to return to the Capital the early part of next week.

Waterses Give Party Tonight

Fete in Wesley Heights Will Honor Miss Reed, Who Plans European Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. John Waters will give a bon voyage party at their home in Wesley Heights this evening for Miss Daisy Reed, who will sail with Mrs. Waters on the Queen Mary June 24 for a three months' tour of Europe.

Deck chairs will be placed on the terraced porches, each bearing the name of a guest. A gangplank will be swung from the porch to the gardens, where a buffet supper will be served and food will be suggestive of various countries on the itinerary, with each table in charge of a costumed hostess. Girls in sailor suits will act as guides conducting the guests from one "country" to another.

Among those who will attend are Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. John Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gasch, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Peterson, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. George Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. John Shew, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hare, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Everhart, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Lybrand, Miss Marjorie Webster, Miss Ella Werner, Miss Gene Bearmore, Miss Lilly Tyser, Miss Grace Goodpasture, Miss Ruth Baker, Miss Mary Burke, Miss Mattie Gibson, Miss Ruby Neal, Miss Estelle Zirkin, Miss Emma Buechele, Miss Helen Barnhart, Miss Sallie Dillard, Dr. Elizabeth Sohon, Mrs. Caroline Stephen, Mrs. Jewel Downs, Mrs. Lorraine Goode, Mrs. Frances Northcross, Mrs. Mary Chmylko, Mrs. Charlotte LaFond, Mrs. Marie Tedlow, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron D. Newman.

Catherine Q. Mitchell Leaves for St. Louis

Miss Catherine Quentin Mitchell, who has been the guest of Miss Mildred T. Hill since her graduation from Sweet Briar College, has left for St. Louis, Mo., where she will visit Mr. and Mrs. William T. Ravenscroft before going to her home in Denver, Colo.

Miss Mitchell's mother, Mrs. Clark G. Mitchell, has recently announced her engagement to Mr. Kent Ravenscroft, of St. Louis. Miss Mitchell is the daughter of the late Mr. Clark G. Mitchell, of Denver. Miss Hill plans to attend the wedding, which will take place in Denver in September.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Normal Human Being Is Mentally as Well as Physically Responsive to Opposite Sex, Man Writes.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I find myself more and more interested in the heated discussion going on in your column concerning the relative merits of men and women in their relationships with each other. Having spent the better part of my 21 years observing these relationships, from both the personal and detached viewpoints, I have decided to join the foray.

• • • •

It seems the majority of persons who have discussed this question have led very one-sided, incomplete lives, or else have become embittered by one or two unpleasant experiences. Perhaps this is an exaggeration, but at least the gist of their letters is: "Men are all rotten," or "No woman is decent," or "You can't trust any woman," or "Men are just out for all they can get," etc.

• • • •

I am sure a great many men have written you saying they have lost faith in women and no longer trust them, yet they contradict themselves the moment they write to you! Of course, the truth of the matter is that there are decent men, there are indecent men, there are moral women and immoral women; their are men who are murderers and men who are kings; women who are prostitutes and women who are queens. And a great many whose characteristics would place them in between.

• • • •

Each of your correspondents bases his or her conclusions on personal experience and observation and therefore, intelligence and common sense granted, each is right in his own particular sphere! But if anything is to be decided, why not find out how far that sphere extends? But what a multitude of things must be taken into consideration!

• • • •

We see one girl: she is beautiful, voluptuous, inviting. Her attraction is obviously physical. She knows it and makes the most of it. Someone whispers, "the eternal feminine." A man concludes, as he starts out after her, "Woman was made to be loved and believe me, I am going to do my part.' And, we assume, he does his part. This is perfectly normal and natural and to be expected. In fact, I might ask: what else would you have him do? It is an integral part of his nature and he can no more deny it than deny the desire to eat.

• • • •

On the other hand, the same man meets another girl—shall we make it the next day?—who is intelligent and charming. She may be gay and loquacious, or timid and reserved; she may be a swimmer, an artist's model, a writer, a secretary, a movie actress, a cat fancier, a clothespin designer or anything else, yet to him her appeal rests entirely above her shoulders. In his association with her it may never even occur to him to attempt to kiss her. Not that she is unattractive, but she attracts another side of his nature.

• • • •

For an example of two different schools of attraction, I might mention Mae West and Janet Gaynor as two very appealing women. I believe the contrast is obvious. And to apply the same principle the other way around, let's mention Clark Gable and Leslie Howard for contrasting types of masculine appeal. In other words, the kind of response depends directly on the kind of appeal. I have occasionally seen attempts made to cross them up, usually by a man who is selfish or else too stupid to appreciate any attraction but the purely physical.

• • • •

Yes, I have seen girls insulted by men making improper and unsolicited advances, but I think it is only fair to state that I have seen them insulted because the men didn't make any advances at all! (Only recently a society girl of Washington complained to me very violently about her boy friend, who, it seems, had not understood when she told him her parents were away for the week-end. He spent the evening reading Emerson to her and left at 11 o'clock!

• • • •

So what we arrive at is this: all people entertain in varying proportions desires both physical and mental, which must be satisfied. You may add the spiritual to that, but for simplicity, let us include that in the "mental" side. Physically, man is essentially an animal. But he has the advantage of intelligence and reason to lift him above that and put him on the road to progress. It is the sensible combination of the two components which does that. No man is complete who subdues his physical potentialities to the point where his responses can be said to be purely mental. By the same token, no man is complete whose physical responsiveness completely overshadows his mental and spiritual responses.

• • • •

If all women were the type portrayed by the Mae West roles, a man's life would not be fulfilled and he would have a constant thirst for intellectual and spiritual stimulation and satisfaction—and vice versa. And if all men were the purely intellectual type who never touched a girl—well, the girls would just eat up that respect and distant adoration for a little while! And then they would be in a heluva state! I really know of nothing more tragic and foolish than the young innocent newlyweds, neither of whom has ever had any experience with the opposite sex, who find themselves alone and helpless on their marriage night, afraid, not knowing what to do.

• • • •

Isn't it wiser to avoid that? We can, very easily, by just remembering that we are all human.

A MAN.

A Collector and Her Prize Possession

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. LOUIS SCHAPIRO

collects prehistoric pottery, brocades and rare Siamese and Chinese objects of art. But her favorite possession is none of these. Shown above, it is the bronze head of an infant who is obviously annoyed with the world.

Washington Woman Boasts Unusual Collection Of Art Objects From Far Corners of the Globe

Widow of Doctor Sees Link Between the East and West.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

SHE PROBABLY has more collections than any woman in Washington, yet Mrs. Louis Schapiro frankly admits that most of her rare objects of art are "an accumulation rather than a conscious effort at collecting."

"In most cases, the first piece in any group was a gift to my husband," she said yesterday in her attractive apartment, which brings to Washington a bit of the Philippines, Costa Rica, Panama and Siam. "Then, from time to time, we added other pieces until there were many."

As a result, she has an unusual assemblage of Buddhas, bric-a-brac, brocades, busts and prints from Siam. Her magnificent carved chairs, tables, a screen and rugs were brought from China. Her statuettes and procelain are from all parts of the world; while her collection of pre-historic pottery was acquired in Central America.

The 92 earthenware pieces include dateless ceremonial altars, lava vases, a stone tomahawk-head and a series of statuettes representing some pre-historic god. Mrs. Schapiro sees in this collection numerous indications of racial origin and a definite connection between the aborigines of two continents.

Collection Brings Memories.

"Here, for example, is a vase I got in Costa Rica," she said, as she picked up a small bowl supported by fish with horns jutting from the tops of their heads. "A number of years later, when we were living in Siam, I learned the story of the 'fish with the horn' from a Siamese princess. Doesn't that indicate there must have been some connection between the early inhabitants of America and Asia?"

Costa Rica, Philippines, Siam, China, All Are Represented.

Her "collections with collections" also serve as a memory book to Mrs. Schapiro. The years roll away, she said, as she looks at a statuette, a Ming porcelain cup or a jade ceremonial tree and remembers the story of how she and her physician-husband got it. "This statue, for example," she said, pointing to a nude wooden figure with holes for eyes, fantastic ear-rings and legs doubled up close to the body, "was a present given to my husband by the head-hunting Igorots the year we lived in the Philippines."

That was the first year of their marriage, she said. "And it marked the first of many years we were to live in strangely fascinating countries." Connected with the Rockefeller Foundation, Dr. Schapiro next went to live in Costa Rica and Panama, taking with him his young Spanish-German wife and their young son, Mark M. Eventually, they moved to Siam, where he was medical adviser to the government of King Prajadhipok, Siam's last absolute monarch.

A resident of Washington since 1932, Mrs. Schapiro came here after the death of her husband so that her son could attend the George Washington Medical School, from which Dr. Schapiro was graduated.

Much of her time is occupied now with a hobby that interests her as much as collecting. It is book binding, and some of the volumes in her library, covered with hand-tooled leather and exquisitely decorated, prove her skill in this work and her ability as an artist. She first became interested in this work in Siam, where she was the only woman student in the school of arts and crafts in Bangkok.

Learned to Love Art.

It was there she also learned to appreciate many of the pieces in her many collections; for example, the two low, teak-wood chairs with carvings that recount stories from the Ramayana; the Tibetan prints in exquisite frames decorated with hand-drawn designs and covered with 150 coats of lacquer and gold leaf; the bronze Siamese Buddhas, carved Peking dogs of the Ming period and a bronze head of the age that gave to Indo-China its temple of Angkor Wat.

"But one of my favorite possessions has no period and no special significance," she commented as she paused near a handsome Chinese desk and picked up a bronze head of an infant whose wrinkled face and open mouth showed he was plainly annoyed with the world. "This came from Italy and belongs to no collection," she said. Then she added with a chuckle, "But did you ever see a better representation of a bawling baby?"

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

SYNOPSIS.

Though her childhood sweetheart, faithful George Dwight, pleads with her to come home to America and marry him, Ruth Starling insists on staying in London and using her recently inherited wealth to go on the stage. Her London lawyer, Mr. Singleton, and Mrs. Singleton, arrange for Ruth and George to have dinner with Capt. Philip Trefane and his wife, Iris. Capt. Trefane is interested in theatricals, though short of capital. His aunt, the Marchioness of Cicester, is loaning the Trefanes her old Cornwall castle for the summer and Mr. Singleton suggests they might take Ruth as a paying guest, though he warns her to leave financial arrangements in his hands. Ruth at Capt. Trefane's suggestion agrees to lease a theater and make him the manager.

CHAPTER THREE.

"I HAVEN'T FIXED upon any definite sum—" she hesitated. "It's difficult, too, for me to think in pounds, but I soon will."

"You can talk in dollars to me, Miss Starling."

"If I buy the lease of this theater I suppose I should have to risk——" again she waited, remembering the kind of sums which had been mentioned in her hearing in New York. She hadn't learned much there, but she had learned something of the way in which money melts in unsuccessful theatrical productions. "I suppose," she said doubtfully, "that I ought to be prepared to risk a loss, if the worst came to the worst, of——"

"Yes?"

He bent forward; he found it almost impossible to conceal his mingled suspense and exultation. "Would you say $200,000 or, maybe, rather more than that, Capt. Trefane, if the worst came to the worst?"

"I don't think there's any chance of your losing as much as that in one season."

She did not see that the hand with which he was now lighting his second cigarette was shaking, while in his heart he was saying to himself: "Forty thousand pounds or maybe, rather more than that?" Why, if she had been serious, this girl must be made of money. What a brute the old lawyer had been not to tell him the truth about her!

Confides Her Ambitions.

"I have wanted to be an actress ever since I was a child," she said and her voice took on a pleading tone, but Philip Trefane scarcely heard what she said, as he observed: "There is a real opening in London for an actress of your type; the ingenue is coming back to the stage."

Poor Ruth! She had no intention

Mr. Singleton turned to the American girl. "I trust you remember what I told you. Leave all the financial side of the affair in my hands."

of acting the kind of "sweet young thing" part she believed the ingenue type has to play. But she kept her thoughts to herself.

Then suddenly her new friend exclaimed: "From a word said by Mr. Singleton this morning, I gather you want to spend a few weeks during the dead theatrical season somewhere in the country, or by the sea? My aunt, the Marchioness of Cicester, has lent us a famous old castle on the Cornish coast, and my wife and I would be delighted if you would come to us. The place is called Perranuth Castle. We spent two months, there two years ago, and my wife, who is clever at that sort of thing, made some of the rooms charming. We should lead the simple life, but I can't help thinking you wouldn't mind that. Also, and that's an important point, you and I would have plenty of time to plan out your autumn campaign."

Leave for Ballroom.

Ruth drew a long breath. "I shall be delighted to come to you, I feel" —she added impulsively—"as if we were old friends already!"

"So do I."

He held out his right hand and took hers in a firm grasp. But as he did so she felt a curious sudden sensation of—not fear, but distaste. His touch was so dry and hot.

As he withdrew his hand, he said quickly: "And now I think we must go down to the ballroom, for I know the Singletons won't stay long and, after all, I'm their host tonight."

As they got up, Ruth gave a swift look around. Where they had been sitting was a lounge which might have been the kitchen of an old Breton farmhouse, for it had a huge wide chimney, now filled with ferns, dark oak tables, and red tiled floor, strong naked beams supported the vaulted roof.

But as they went downstairs, the girl was surprised and amused at the difference between the upper and the lower floor of the Dragon Club. The walls of the dancing room were lined with multitudes of tiny squares of looking glass, which strangely distorted the faces and figures of the dancers as they glided round the space which had been kept free in the middle of the vast room. The lighting, clear but subdued, was diffused from upturned bowls on high stands.

The newcomers soon found the rest of their party. George Dwight had already had two or three turns with Mrs. Trefane, whom he sincerely thought the most beautiful woman he had ever seen.

As Ruth and Capt. Trefane sat down, she heard him say in a low voice, "Iris—darling?" Then he stood up, and a moment or two later husband and wife were dancing together, looking by far the most striking couple there. The sight of them in each other's arms, he smiling down into her upturned face, moved Ruth strangely. She told herself it must be wonderful to care for another human being as those two evidently cared for one another.

Mr. Singleton turned to the American girl: "I hope your talk with Capt. Trefane was satisfactory?" and he gazed searchingly into her flushed face and shining eyes. "I trust you remembered what I told you?" And, as she looked puzzled: "Leave all the financial side of the affair in my hands."

"Of course I will." But she felt sorry this old lawyer, who was so kind to her, didn't like or trust her new friend as well as she already liked and trusted him.

"Was anything said about your going to Perranuth castle as a paying guest?"

"Yes," she said eagerly. "Capt. Trefane asked me if I would like to stay with them there. It must be a delightful place!"

"It is very interesting and curious medieval stronghold, but there isn't even one bathroom, and no electric light or gas."

"I shan't mind that at all!"

As the two who had been dancing joined them again, a dark vivacious looking girl suddenly glided up and tapped Iris Trefane on the shoulder. "I shall be eternally grateful to you," she exclaimed, for taking me to that fortune teller, Mrs. Trefane! But for her I should never have had the courage to break off my engagement to Reggie! Thanks to her—and you—I gave him the chuck, and now I'm as happy as happy can be, and going to be married next Tuesday!"

Then gaily she turned away and slid into the arms of "Reggie's" successor.

News of a Fortune Teller.

Iris turned to Mrs. Singleton. "I took that girl to my favorite fortune teller, and the woman told her she hadn't a hope of being happy with the man to whom she was then engaged," and then she added. "But I don't suppose you believe in fortune tellers."

Mrs. Singleton looked slightly uncomfortable. "I do believe in them," she said hesitatingly. "At least I know I had to believe in a woman I was taken to see a good many years ago now, for everything she said was going to happen came true."

"Oh, how I should love to go to a fortune teller!" exclaimed Ruth.

Iris Trefane turned and looked at her. "I'll take you to this Mrs. Shipton, as she calls herself, whenever you like. She used to be quite cheap, but she's raised her fee, ever since it got out that she told the prince some months before he was married that he wasn't going to get the English girl he was in love with then, but would marry a beautiful foreign girl of his own sort. He said nothing would induce him to give up the English girl, or induce him to marry a foreigner. Yet old Mother Shipton proved right after all. The prince only paid her 5 shillings, but now she charges a guinea, and gets it, too."

"That must come rather expensive, if you go to her often," said Mrs. Singleton, dryly.

To Be Continued.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Summer Complaint.

The summer season is at hand and intestinal infections in babies and children will increase in frequency—that is, unless proper precautions are observed. The symptom is four times as common in those who are artificially fed and has been found to be due (in most instances) to contamination of the milk supply with bacteria. We need not be concerned unduly about the number of bacteria that the milk may contain, but we must make certain that it shall not carry vicious types of organisms likely to bring on inflammation within the digestive tract. Perishable food that has been kept without proper refrigeration should not be used.

Thousands of cases can be avoided in hot weather if we will make certain that children take no food except at home; that the material is reasonably fresh, well cooked, and proper for the ages represented. Sanitary conditions, of course, play an important role. Is the milk fresh? Is it pasteurized? Has it been kept thoroughly protected from dirt, air, insects, household pets, etc.? Has it been kept cool

Ulcers May Form.

Just what part of the intestine is affected? Usually the colon and the lower portion of the small intestine. In mild cases there is rarely more than a simple, catarrhal inflammation characterized by the pouring out of an increased amount of mucus. In severe cases, however, ulcers may form in the wall of the intestine and become coated with bacterial growth that somewhat resembles a membrane. Because of the sharp drop in resistance, pneumonia, infection of the kidneys, or even middle ear disease sometimes occur.

Infectious diarrhea is nearly always associated with the presence of blood and pus, and the organisms responsible are generally those identified with the salmonella or paratyphoid group. The streptococcus is often guilty.

Regardless of the cause of diarrhea its very existence may occasion a serious situation. The loss of fluid may lead to marked drying of the tissues and the development of acidosis. The younger the patient the more quickly will these symptoms appear. Prolonged vomiting has the same effect. In other words, the alkalis of the body have been reduced to so low a level that life is in danger.

Whatever the cause, acidosis must be combated without delay. Large quantities of water will be required and it may be necessary to inject this under the skin or, if the rectum is not too irritable, it may be administered a drop at a time into the lower bowel. In very severe cases a solution of glucose may be given directly into a vein. Alkalis will also be required in relatively large amounts. The picture may change abruptly for the better after the use of alkalis and water.

Castor Oil Clears System.

A fairly good rule at the onset of an intestinal infection is to clear the entire digestive tract by means of castor oil. Many physicians prefer this to small doses of calomel, although the latter is used. Care must be taken to differentiate the condition from a possible appendicitis, in which case any laxative is just the wrong thing.

During the acute attack no food should be given by mouth for at least 24 hours, although water, slightly salted, may be administered freely. Many physicians advocate the use of boiled, skimmed milk, at first a small amount, later increasing the quantity as the symptoms recede. Thick wheat gruels may then be added cautiously.

During the coming warm months more caution than usual will need to be exercised about food. Large quantities will not be required and it is far wiser to have a hungry child, who is well, than one who is more than satisfied, but who may be ill in consequence.

German Child Taught to Obey

American children are treated much more as persons deserving respect than are German children, says Dr. Kurt Lewin, a German psychologist now residing in the United States. Dr. Lewin, whose specialty is the study of forces which develop personality, records his reactions to educational systems in America and Germany in the international psychological quarterly, Character and Personality, for June.

"In America the lack of servility of the young child toward adults or of the student toward his professor is striking," he says. "But it is the ideal of German education that the child should obey blindly and absolutely, not from reason, but from belief or love."

The American ideal of making the child help itself as much as possible is also the contrast to the German.

But while the American child is treated more as a respected person, his freedom of movement in some respects is less than the German child's. For instance, in American schools much more emphasis is placed on promptness and the maintenance of a rigorous time schedule. A student in Germany will frequently forget time and carry on what he is doing without regard to the clock.

Golden Eyelids for Milady Newest Make-up Trick Decree

CHICAGO, June 8 (AP).—Eyelids shadowed with gold are the newest feminine make-up trick.

They're intended for daytime wear, they're not iridescent like last winter's style. They become both blondes and brunettes and harmonize nicely with tan.

Eyes will not be entirely on the gold standard during the hot months, however. Vivid colors will be on show—yellowish green for blondes and deeper green for brunettes and redheads. There's also a sharp new blue.

Some make-up experts advocate two eye-shadow colors: A blue or green, for example, used close to the lash-line and blended into gold higher up on the lid.

Eyebrows are groomed of stray hairs, but left natural in line for it is now thought that an artificially accented arch makes the eye appear smaller—and eyes, like lips, are large, full and expressive this season.

Tanning still is the vogue, but the season's shade is toned down from last year's deep brown to a honey color.

Many women who keep up with new ideas, and especially those who go in for summer sports, have laid aside the powder puff in the daytime. Instead, they use a liquid foundation that subdues shiny noses.

Rouge's optional, but eyes and lips are decidedly made-up. The newest lip-stick shade—becoming to blondes and brunettes—is a sharp Chinese red that has much yellow in it.

Pure Glycerin Advantageous In Cake Baking

Teaspoon of the Oily Liquid Will Keep Pastries Fresh and Moist.

THE HOUSEWIFE who likes to do her own baking often can learn a trick or two from the professional bakers who cater to the great American sweet-tooth for cakes and cookies.

It is interesting to note that Joseph Lambeth, author of the book "Lambeth Method of Cake Decorating and Practical Pastries," utilizes the advantages of pure glycerin as an essential ingredient in two of his recipes—namely, macaroons and cookies.

The advantages of glycerin in baking have long been known abroad. English bakers in particular have used this wholesome product for years, claiming it ensures cakes remaining moist and fresh to the last crumbs and keeps icing from becoming dry and brittle. American bakeries are beginning to make more and more use of the English experience.

Baking test work is also being done for home baking, in an effort to enable the housewife in her own kitchen to avail herself of the various commercially recognized values of glycerin as a baking adjunct.

In the course of this work a number of professional baking recipes are being translated into practical terms for individual home use. Two of these recipes, one for cookies and one for a white cake to which a jelly icing can be added, are given below:

New England Cookies

1 cup butter (or shortening)
1½ cups brown sugar
3 eggs
1 teaspoon glycerin
1 teaspoon soda
2 tablespoons boiling water
3¼ cups flour
¾ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¾ teaspoon cloves
⅛ teaspoon mace
1 cup walnut meats, broken
½ cup currants
½ cup seeded and shredded raisins.

Rub currants and raisins with ¾ teaspoon of the glycerin and allow to stand at least a half hour.

Cream the butter until light and add sugar gradually and continue creaming. Beat eggs remaining glycerine until light. Add to butter mixture. Dissolve soda in boiling water and add to first mixture. Mix well. Sift flour, salt and spices together and beat into creamed mixture. Beat constantly until ingredients are well blended. Add fruit and nuts and blend well. Drop from the tip of a spoon in small piles on a well greased cookie sheet and bake in a moderate oven (375 F.) for about 15 minutes, depending on size of cookies. The addition of glycerin aids in keeping the cookies moist and fresh and the fruit will stand out fresh looking when baked.

White Cake

¾ cup shortening
2 cups sugar
4 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 cups sifted flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon glycerin

Cream shortening until light and fluffy. Add 1½ cups of the sugar gradually, beating until light. Separate eggs and beat yolks until thick and light colored. Beat into creamed mixture. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Add vanilla to milk. Add dry ingredients alternately with milk to first mixture. Beat well between each addition. Combine egg whites and glycerin and beat until stiff. Fold in remaining ½ cup sugar. Cut and fold lightly into batter. Bake in well-greased cake pan lined with wax paper in oven of 375 F. for about 25 minutes.

Salads for Summer

REDUCE with delicious salads! That's the happy thought for overweights in summer time.

Crisp, crunchy vegetables, luscious cooling fruits will keep up your energy but are low in calories. Use them in main-dish salads and grow slim this summer!

Just think of it, two heads of lettuce, a great big bunch of celery, two big cucumbers or two bouncing big tomatoes rate about 100 calories each. A cup and one-third strawberries, a cup of orange juice, a 4½-inch cantaloupe, a cup of cherries, two good-sized peaches, one big pear, one five-inch banana—these are each 100-calorie portions.

When you are keeping to a diet of 1,000 to 1,200 calories a day, isn't it grand to sit down to a dish which is tasty, filling, pretty, and non-fattening!

Make it a salad summer. Lose ten pounds. Gain a fresh complexion and put pep in your step!

Our 40-page illustrated booklet, Salads and Their Accessories, is full of the most tempting, cool, crisp, novel summery salads and interesting dressings. Don't be tricky and drown them in big piles of mayonnaise, of course! You know better. Fix plates for the rest of the family as they prefer. Yours you prepare with just a wee bit of French dressing or a dab of mayonnaise.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, Salads and Their Accessories, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

For Good Coffee—Scrub the Pot Daily

IF YOU have been of the opinion that a thorough washing of the coffee pot doesn't make a difference in the taste of the next cup of coffee, you are wrong—try it and see for yourself. This is given as the reason for that strange flavor "reminiscent of old shoe leather" that sometimes characterizes the breakfast coffee. Rinsing is reallly not enough! A coffee pot liberally gummed up with grounds and drippings and receiving only a casual rinsing under the hot water faucet and set up, without benefit of a thorough scrubbing with soap and water, and then scalded out afterward with clear water, is bound to take toll of the coffee. In addition to scrubbing the coffee pot regularly, many housewives also boil fresh water in it once a week, adding one or two teaspoonfuls of baking soda. The alkali action of the soda will thoroughly cleanse the coffee pot and make it sweet as well as thoroughly clean. Another requisite when making a delicious cup of coffee—be sure the coffee is fresh. And, when serving, be sure that it is steaming hot!

Fruit Recipe Given For Wedding Cake

Patience Required to Make Confection at Home.

The wedding cake is by tradition a rich, spicy fruit cake, towering tier upon tier, and surmounted by a miniature bride and bridegroom or a lacy wedding bell. It should be made well in advance of the wedding, in pans that graduate in size. It may be iced or plain.

The principal art needed to make a perfect wedding cake at home is patience. Each pan of the batter must be baked slowly for about three hours. The pans must be well greased and lined with greased paper. The recipe below will make 10 pounds of cake, and should be baked in four graduated 2-inch pans, the largest of which has a 12-inch diameter.

June Wedding Cake.

4½ cups sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon double-acting baking powder
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon mace
1 pound butter or other shortening
1 pound brown sugar
10 eggs, well beaten.
½ pound candied cherries
½ pound candied pineapple
1 pound dates, seeded and sliced
1 pound raisins
1 pound currants
½ pound citron, thinly sliced
½ pound candied orange and lemon peel
½ pound nut meats, chopped
1 cup honey
½ cup molasses
½ cup cider

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and spices, and sift together three times. Cream shortening thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, fruits, peel, nuts, honey, molasses and cider. Add flour gradually.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Violet Soap and Perfume Hold Spotlight in Cosmetics.

By Mignon.

(The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.)

IT WAS nearly a year ago that I told the head of the cosmetic department of one of the world's greatest stores that violet perfumes, toilet waters, face powders and what-not were coming back into fashion. He said "violet has been dead for years." I hope he has taken a walk along the streets filled with smart shops in the prominent cities of late and found out what has happened. Not only are violet perfumes back, but the shops are filled with lavender, purple, violet, plum color and every variety of the old-time favorite color. Violet IS back.

Some of the manufacturers saw this violet season approaching and brought out things quickly that would meet the demands.

One is a violet soap which is exquisite. It is a small cake, but it is a very hard soap, a very fine one, exquisitely perfumed and surprisingly lasting. Of course, the hardness of the soap has much to do with its lasting qualities.

Another manufacturer is trotting along with an old-time violet fragrance which so far as I can find out has never been criticized in any way, and it includes a perfume and a toilet water. Your grandmother probably used it but that doesn't take anything from its superiority.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column telephone The Washington Post, National 4200, Branch 323.

Co-Ed Studies Bar to Career, Women Told

Summer Study to Begin Today Includes World Court Problems.

THE WOMAN with an eye to a career should attend a woman's college rather than a co-educational institution, thinks Dr. Ellen Fitz Pendleton, retiring president of Wellesley College.

After 25 years of service at the college from which she was graduated, Dr. Pendleton is convinced co-educational schools offer women no opportunity for training in leadership equal to those of the colleges designed exclusively for women.

Her reasons follow:

1. In co-educational institutions women are second in importance to men in the classroom and on the campus and prepare themselves to take second place in life after college days are ended.
2. In co-educational institutions women do not have the opportunity to organize and lead all groups on the campus, such as they do in women's colleges.
3. In co-educational institutions men will hold the most important student offices.
4. Where there are men in the college, women do not get individual attention, either academically or personally, which the woman's college provides.
5. In the woman's institution, students have enough association with members of the opposite sex without having to turn over all leadership to men. "Here we have many men on the faculty and men are so constantly on the campus that the students are used to them," she said. "They do not create any stir, as they used to do years ago when women's colleges were more isolated."

Calavos Good Fare For Summer Snacks

Sandwiches of cold tongue or ham and sliced calavos, or cheese and calavos in thin slices, are attractive fare for present sandwich weather.

Serve with pickles of most any character or spread one slice of bread thinly with a sharp mustard dressing. Calavos blend well with any relish which meat prefers.

NEGLECT OF CONSTIPATION* IS A SERIOUS MATTER

Delicious Cereal Corrects This Condition in a Natural Way

Immediate attention to constipation* is important for two reasons. It causes discomfort, and may lead to headaches and loss of appetite. It also tends to slow you down.

When elimination continues to be faulty, over a period of time, your general resistance may be lowered. And a weakened body is less able to fight off the infections that abound in every crowded place.

The most common type of constipation is that caused by insufficient "bulk" in meals. In Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, you have a delicious source of effective "bulk."

Within the body, the "bulk" in ALL-BRAN absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass and gently cleanses the system. This tempting cereal also furnishes vitamin B and contains iron.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Serve as a cereal with milk or cream, or cook into tempting muffins, breads, etc. How much pleasanter to enjoy this natural laxative food instead of taking pills and drugs.

ALL-BRAN is guaranteed by the Kellogg Company. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

*Constipation due to insufficient "bulk"

Famed N. Y. Chef Stresses the '3 Rs'

Use of Onions, Butter, Spice in Quantity Urged.

"The three Rs of cooking happen to be three other letters—B, O and S, but they are just as important in the kitchen as readin', writin' and 'rithmetic are in the schoolroom. The kitchen letters stand for butter, onions and spices, and it is Gustave Halletz, internationally famous chef who presides over the aromatic kitchens of the Jack Dempsey restaurant in New York, who says so.

"Never be stingy with butter, onions or spices," he warns the American housewife, "because these are your three best allies. They impart flavor and aroma and richness, and that means they create appetite, good digestion and pleasure in eating."

Flower Accessories.

London (AP).—Fresh flower accessories are to be used extensively this season. Real flower ornaments matching them can be attached to summer hats.

Calavos, Grapefruit Salad Good in Summer

The classic salad combination of grapefruit and calavos in alternate slices is just as effective in warm weather menus as at any time of the year. Calavos belong in spring menu plans for their numerous vitamins and large mineral content. Garnish the calavo-grapefruit combination with two or three large, unstemmed strawberries rolled in powdered sugar.

Two-Toned Lingerie.

London (AP).—Two-toned lingerie sets are popular. Sky blue and deep periwinkle blue are a favorite combination.

Kidney Beans, Olives Ideal Summer Dish

Nutritional Value of This 'Tamale Pie' Will Fill Many Menu Needs.

IT IS a foresighted and clever cook who plans to have unusual main dish recipes in her summer luncheon and dinner scheme of things. Such dishes are also grand for the "kept hot" or reheated type of fare for picnics or any al fresco dining.

Ripe olive and bean casserole, a unique dish in this classification, is really an Americanized tamale pie, which, because of its nutritional value, will fill many menu needs. For jaded summer appetites which need a bit of appeasing, it is the ideal solution. You will find the men of the family will be particularly keen about it. When preparing this tamale pie or similar entrees, ripe olives are their best when prepared in large wedges or slices. For this purpose, remove the fruit in lengthwise slices from the seed with a small, sharp knife.

Ripe Olive and Bean Casserole.

Filling:
1 cup sliced ripe olives (large slices)
2 cups cooked or canned kidney beans
¼ cup finely cut dry onion
1 small button garlic, minced
¾ cup tomato sauce
¼ cup salad oil
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup grated soft, yellow American cheese
2 teaspoons chili powder
1 tablespoon flour
¼ cup water
Cornmeal batter:
2½ cups water
2 teaspoons salad oil
¾ teaspoon salt
2-3 cup yellow cornmeal
½ cup grated American cheese (quick-melting type)

Filling: Combine olives, beans, onion, garlic, tomato sauce, salad oil, salt and cheese, and bring to a boil, stirring to prevent scorching. Combine chili powder, flour and water, mix to a paste and stir into hot mixture. Remove from fire.

Cornmeal batter: Combine water, oil and salt and bring to a boil over direct flame. Stir cornmeal slowly into briskly boiling liquid. Place over boiling water and cook about ten minutes; cool slightly. Place a layer of cooked cornmeal in bottom and on sides of a 1½-quart size casserole or baking pan; add half of olive mixture, another layer of cornmeal, remainder of olive mixture and top with a layer of cornmeal; scatter ½ cup cheese over top. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) 15 minutes. Cool slightly before serving. Serves 4 to 6.

OLYMPUS SALAD MOLD.

1½ cups sliced ripe olives
1-3 cup cider vinegar
1-3 cup granulated sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1 teaspoon celery salt
1 tablespoon lemon juice
5 teaspoons granulated gelatin
1-3 cup water
2 eggs, beaten
½ cup mayonnaise
1-3 cup chopped sour pickle
2 cups flaked canned salmon (large flakes)
1 cup whipping cream
Lettuce

Combine vinegar, sugar, salt, mustard, celery salt and lemon juice, and bring to a boil, stirring to blend thoroughly. Add gelatin that has been moistened in cold water and melted over hot water, and stir until well blended. Pour over beaten eggs, stirring briskly to prevent eggs from curdling; cool, but do not set. Add mayonnaise, olives, pickle, salmon and stiffly-beaten cream, and blend. Pour into mold or pan and let set in icebox or cold place until firm. Stir once after mixture begins to set to keep ingredients evenly distributed. Invert onto serving plate garnished with lettuce, whole ripe olives, and wedges of lemon. Top salad may be decorated with sliced pimiento, mayonnaise, or other suitable color combination. Serves six to eight.

For a Snack—Cheese, Crackers and Wine

Spun aluminum and crystal comprise a smart and effective service for the very informal snack array, pictured above. As a delightful deviation from the more obvious frosted beverages and miniature sandwiches, or cake and ice cream, try cheese, crackers and wine the next time you entertain guests informally. This is particularly successful if there are men among those present.

Tasty Snacks Add New Zest To Jaded Days

Popular Hostess Trays of Winter Months Continue to Be Rage.

AMERICA has become very "snack-conscious." The popularity of snacks which pervaded the winter entertaining scheme has extended to summer designs for living, and these delicious tidbits are now being served in late afternoon, evening and sometimes in lieu of dinner if one is rushing to the theater or some other festivity.

The thoughtful hostess, if she wants to please her men guests, will serve snacks that are substantial, rather than something that, according to them, are just "too, too sweet." An assortment of cheese and crackers and a good wine is ideal for this purpose—generally liked and very easily prepared.

In the serving of snacks, smart and atractive service goes a long way, particularly in summer. There are numerous gadgets in Washington stores and shops, especially designed for the purpose; smart in themselves and adding expediency to the hospitality. Snacks should be as "lovely to look at" as they are appealing to the palate.

With a bit of ingenuity and artistry, the varied assortments of cheese, hors d'oeuvres, relishes and whatever else may be chosen for the fare, can be made most alluring in their presentation. The same is true of the beverages—frosted drinks should be "iced cold" and not just cold; and a sprig of mint, a slice of lemon or orange, a mint or maraschino cherry, can transform a very prosaic concoction into a glorified thirst quencher.

While there are certain rules which the hostess may wish to follow, such as serving a heavy or full bodied red wine with the stronger cheeses and a medium sweet white wine with the milder types, the rule of individual taste should really be a deciding factor in the selections. It is always a good plan to have a choice of several kinds—not only more satisfactory as far as the guests are concerned, but the mark of a thoughtful hostess.

For the tray, the following types of cheese are recommended: Roquefort, Edam, Liederkrantz, Camembert, American, Swiss and Old English. Ripe and green olives, stuffed celery, deviled eggs, radish roses and carrot straws, are other tidbits which add to the snack menue planning. For the wines, a good brand of domestic port, tokay, sauterne, reisling or burgundy, will prove acceptable.

Refrigerator Cake Recipes Sought in Post Food Contest

DO YOU HAVE a pet recipe for combining leftover cake, lady fingers, ginger snaps, vanilla wafers, graham cracker crumbs and the like with fruit, custards, chocolate or lemon fillings in refrigerator cakes?

There are hundreds of such delicious concoctions and they are as easily prepared as they are economical. Another interesting feature—they can be made one day and kept in their original state of deliciousness in the refrigerator, and served the next day.

Realizing that "refrigerator cakes" are a boon to the housewife in summer menu planning, The Post is conducting a contest for clever and unusual recipes in this classification. Now is the time to tell other good cooks about your discoveries and experiments with refrigerator cake concoctions. For the best recipe received a prize of $5 will be given; $3 for the second, and $1 for the next three. Be sure and send in your contributions to the contest in time to reach the office before noon, Saturday, June 20.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

A BURLY, atletic - looking man just doesn't do well in chiffons, no matter what. And he doesn't look well or fit comfortably in a too pretty bedroom, no matter how dainty his lady may be. That's always a problem in decorating a bedroom for husband and wife . . . to get it substantial enough for him and yet feminine enough to be becoming to her.

We saw a room the other day that did this very attractively, we thought. The walls were papered in a lovely pattern of yellow roses with green leaves on a soft gray ground. At the windows yellow taffeta draperies were used with glass bead fringe . . . these draperies were looped back at the sides over crystal tie backs. The carpet of the room was in gray slightly deeper than the gray in wallpaper but still quite a light shade. The furniture was mahogany with twin beds . . .on them were placed spreads of ivory taffeta with the tops quilted and the sides made with full ruffles with quilted bands around the bottom. A chaise longue was in the same green as the leaves in the wallpaper, and then, for accent, an easy chair was in a brown covering. The dressing table skirt was also made of ivory taffeta with the quilted band around the top and bottom. Yellow lamps and a green enamel toilet set finished off the dressing table prettily.

But most important of all from the point of view of the man's comfort was a high chest of drawers with a high mirror so that he could tie his tie and part his hair without any gymnastics. And that brown upholstered chair was man size, too, and pleased the man in this case very much indeed.

Send a stamp for Miss Boykin's bulletin, "Twelve Ideas for Making Your Bed Pretty."

Dried Fruits Add Flavor to Menu

It isn't necessary to be on a budget to contribute to mealtime pleasure by utilizing the many ways in which dried fruits fit into warm weather menus. Purees of these concentrates of flavor have many delicious springtime uses in sauces, fruit whips, chilled puddings and frozen desserts. They combine delectably with other fruits to produce the added bouquet of flavor which fruit combinations often bring out.

Force well cooked, tender, dried fruit through colander or sieve, first removing pits if prunes are used. Most recipes calling for dried fruit purees refer to the unsweetened puree, the needed sugar being added in exact proportion to the recipe. However, if puree is made from already sweetened fruit, the sugar specified in the recipe can be adjusted easily. One cup of dried fruit will yield approximately one cup of prepared puree.

Now Is the Time For Vegetables, Is Tip to Wives

Legumes, Plentiful on Market, Adapatble to Many Menus.

SUMMER is the time to concentrate on vegetables. These not only adapt themselves to many different methods of cookery, but, provide the necessary quota of vitamins and minerals. Numerous main dishes may be prepared entirely of vegetables, and contain adequate nourishment if the protein vegetables are included. The addition of milk and cheese, of course, add to the nutritive value of these meatless concoctions.

In the markets now especially recommended as seasonable are corn on the cob, lima beans, squash, tomatoes, string and wax beans, cabbage, cucumbers, onions, radishes. Lettuce, cauliflower, celery and spinach are also available, but due to the season, somewhat higher in price, than other vegetables.

Among the fruits in abundance are peaches and plums. Watermelons and canteloupes are as cheap as they are likely to be this season—and that is very cheap indeed, and the quality is excellent. Avocados and dates, although less expensive than in former years, still are high, from the viewpoint of most housewives.

In the realm of meats, veal is less expensive than usual this summer. The quality of lamb chops is very good. Friers and broilers are about the best buys in poultry lines—they are selling at 30 cents a pound and lower. Spring baking chickens are also coming into the markets and will be cheaper later in the year; fowls are selling at about 25 cents a pound.

South American Recipe for Stew Stresses Spices

EVERY home, every country has its own favorite kind of stew, and, whether featured on Paris menus or found in humble peasant kitchens, every stew should be a grand one. Regardless of its name or nationality, the stew makes the most of the delicious meat flavor, extending its flavor to both vegetables and gravy to make the whole meal enjoyed.

And, in addition to its flavor, it makes use of the less-tender cuts of meat, for, in the long, slow cooking that a stew is given any cut can be made tender. Beef neck, chuck or shank are frequently used for stew; they are full of flavor and economical as well.

As for the seasoning of the stew, this varies with its nationality. The The French, in their stew, known as ragout, use many herbs in small amounts in order to obtain the subtle flavors that they enjoy. Hungarians frequently add a bit of sour, such as sour cream, and plenty of paprika for seasoning, to their nationally famous goulash. The Spanish and Mexicans favor the highly spiced stews with plenty of cayenne pepper, curry powder, garlic and onions as the seasoning. And so it goes, around the world, stews with a slightly different flavor, but stews just the same!

Stews, if use is made of many different seasonings, have no end of variety. A beef stew with unusual but delicious seasoning is suggested below. It is a real South American kind of beef stew.

Comeback Staged By Sailor Hats

Paris (U.P.).—The sailor, more than any other hat shape, has had particular success this season.

It is seen in both rough and smooth straws, also in failles, taffetas and soft doeskin. Many sailors are trimmed in front with stiff veils which broaden the brim and shade the eyes. Others have simple ribbon bands tied in bows in front while feather and flower trimming is also used.

The beret is flatter, smaller and more shallow than it was last season. It has the appearance of a small round, squared or sometimes scalloped disc posed at an angle on a shallow skull cap. It tilts forward, sometimes straight over the forehead and sometimes at an angle over the right eye.

Both the heightened and the flat crown are shown. The high crown tapers to a flattened top and looks in shape like an inverted flower pot.

Poppy, Symbol of Sleep, Makes Attractive Design for Quilt

Pattern 5629.

Work in Applique Requires Very Little Effort; Color of Each Flower Can Be Varied in Patches.

By Alice Brooks.

WHAT MORE appropriate than the poppy—symbol of sleep—for a quilt. These, in applique, require precious little time for making. Two simple patches and a stem and your block is done. Use scraps, if you like, and vary each flower's color. Dark floss, outlining flowers and leaves, accents the design effectively.

In pattern 5629 you will find the Block Chart, an illustration for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post Household Arts Department, 259 West Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Tomatoes Supply 7 Vital Nutrients

Texan Completes Study of Vegetable's Food Value.

Food values of tomatoes were recently delineated in a study made by Dr. Jessie Whitacre, chief of the division of rural home economics of Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. Dr. Whitacre found "they contain in goodly amount (and therefore furnish to the body when one eats them) seven of the essential nutrients that are most likely to be lacking. These nutrients for which tomatoes are especially valued are caicium (lime), phosphorus, and iron and vitamins A, B, C and G.

Dr. Whitacre's report disclosed that in recent experiments "tomatoes canned in 1931 were just as rich in vitamin A in 1932, 1933, 1934 as when first canned."

To emphasize the importance placed on tomatoes in the diet, it was pointed out that the Texas home economics extension service recommends that the supply of home-canned vegetables for a family of five contain 125 quarts of tomatoes.

The Federal Bureau of Home Economics includes tomatoes (at least 2 pounds) in the list of foods that should surely be in a minimum-cost weekly food supply provided for a family of five on relief.

Graduates Told Rights of Man Are Paramount

Pollard, in Addressing N. U. Class, Urges Changes in Law to Meet Needs.

Rights of mankind must come before "so-called rights" of the States, John Garland Pollard, former Governor of Virginia, told National University graduates at their commencement exercises in Memorial Constitution Hall.

The former Governor, now chairman of the appeals board of the Veterans' Administration, warned the class against precedents, which, he said, some courts use "as devices to enable us to make up our minds without taking the trouble to think."

"If the people of this country are suffering from any great evil which can be ameliorated by governmental remedies, the power to apply those remedies must reside somewhere," the speaker declared.

"If the Federal Government has not the necessary powers under the Constitution and the States cannot adequately reach the evil because of their restricted territorial jurisdiction, or for any other reason, then the Constitution should be amended."

Modernization Urged.

There must be no "No Man's Land" in which the public enemies can operate with impunity, the former Governor pointed out. He urged moderinzation of the legal profession, which he charged, "has not even reached the horse and buggy stage, but is traveling a la ox cart."

The degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon Pollard "for distinguished services in the cause of good government and in the field of education."

Other doctorate degrees were awarded to David Colby Bond, Charlie Campbell McCall, John Elmer Nead, Leland C. Quaintance, Albert Franklin Sisson, Melvin L. Winson, all made doctors of juridical science; James Stuart Parker and Raymond Joyce Rosenberger, doctors of jurisprudence.

Degrees Presented.

Candidates for degrees were presented by Dean Charles Pergler, of the law school, and Eugene Carusi, of the school of economics and government.

Justice Charles S. Hatfield, of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, presided. Prizes and medals were awarded by Justice Jennings Bailey, of the District Supreme Court. Charles Maynard Brooks was valedictorian.

The list of graduates follows:

Woman Pushes Fight to Avert Death of Gooch

Oklahoma Official to Seek Audience With President on Special Train.

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, June 12.—Oklahoma's grandmother commissioner of charities headed a fight tonight to save from the gallows Arthur Gooch, first man condemned to die under the Federal Lindbergh kidnaping law.

Gooch is scheduled to mount the scaffold at Oklahoma Penitentiary before dawn June 19.

But the last-minute battle of Mrs. Mable Bassett, charities commissioner, was meeting difficulty.

She had planned to board the Presidential special train when President Roosevelt, who Monday declined Executive clemency, passes through Oklahoma on his return from the Texas Centennial at Dallas.

Today she learned the train will cross the State early in the morning, too early to expect Mr. Roosevelt to be up and about.

"I don't know whether it will be possible to see him," she said, "but we have wired both the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, asking for an audience."

Mrs. Bassett insisted she believed there still was hope that the President might grant a stay.

Petitions bearing 1,100 names of Oklahoma City and Paris, Tex., residents were dispatched to the President asking that he grant Gooch a stay.

Gooch, former Okmulgee, Okla., butcher boy, was convicted of the abduction of two Paris, Ill., peace officers and twice condemned to hang by Federal Judge Robert L. Williams.

The second sentence was passed after the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals at Denver upheld the sentence and the Supreme Court refused to review the case.

It will be the first legal hanging in Oklahoma in 27 years. State law provides death in the electric chair.

Foes Denounce New Coal Bill Fixing of Prices

Disregards Supreme Court Decision, Emery Says; House Acts Monday.

By the Associated Press.

With House action on the new Guffey-Vinson coal control bill set for Monday, the measure yesterday met opposition in testimony before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

Bituminous coal producers and a representative of the National Association of Manufacturers challenged the constitutionality of the bill, designed to replace the original Guffey coal act, invalidated by the Supreme Court.

Asserting the bill would provide "price-fixing in its most obnoxious form," James A. Emery, general counsel of the manufacturers association, told the committee "hasty enactment of superficial regulative legislation, profoundly affecting a great fuel industry * * *" would do more to retard recovery than anything else.

"The proposal does not meet but resists the Supreme Court opinion in both the decision invalidating the measure for which it is a substitute," Emery said, "as well as the decision invalidating the NIRA."

Price-fixing provisions of the original coal act were retained in the new bill, but the labor features, invalidated by the Supreme Court, were eliminated.

E. L. Greever, of Tazewell, Va., representing a committee of coal operators, opposed the bill on the ground it would create "confusion and uncertainty" and would "disorganize and obstruct interstate commerce."

A vice president of the Consolidation Coal Co., with mines in Maryland, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Kentucky, declared the proposed legislation would cause "greater unsettlement than this industry has yet experienced."

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, of the committee told reporters the hearing would be concluded tomorrow and expressed belief the committee would act on the measure by Monday.

Bill to Shorten Workers' Week Sped in France

Deputies Send 40-Hour Plan to Senate; Strikers Are Resuming Jobs.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 12.—The Chamber of Deputies sent a bill giving workers of France a 40-hour week to the Senate today, and Premier Leon Blum sought quick passage of his labor measures by the upper house in order to speed a settlement of paralyzing strikes.

A "back to work" movement throughout the nation seemed to be spreading faster than new strikes.

Demonstrating workers in Paris were orderly under the eyes of mobile guardsmen, who prevented mass demonstrations and arrested persons who refused to obey orders to 'keep moving" on the streets.

The Communist leader, Maurice Thorez, joined union officials in efforts to persuade strikers to accept accords, saying workers must 'learn how to end a strike the moment essential demands are met."

A 40-hour week was one of the principal demands of the strike movement, which at its peak had nearly 1,000,000 workers idle. It was passed by the Chamber, 386 to 175.

One of Five Bills.

The measure is one of five labor reform bills drafted by Blum's new leftist government to meet the demands of the workers and remove the industrial crisis. The Senate is expected to act on them next week.

Other measures, overwhelmingly approved by the chamber and sent to the Senate yesterday, provide annual vacations with pay, ratify the agreement between workers and employers for wage increases and for collective bargaining, cancel pay cuts of government employes and exempt war veterans from certain taxes.

Premier Blum refused demands that he oust "folded arm" strikers occupying factories and stores, but said he would take active measures if necessary to prevent the strikes from going beyond the government's control.

Roger Salengro, minister of the interior, announced 256,476 strikers continued to occupy places of work in the Paris region.

Spanish Shift Rumored.

Madrid, June 12 (AP).—Political and labor violence increased in Spain today to the accompaniment of rumors the government would be reorganized.

There were reports Socialists would form a new cabinet armed with plenary powers to bring to an end disorders sweeping the country since the leftist triumph in the February general elections.

Two persons were killed at Malaga and many wounded in renewed strike disturbances. Intermittent shooting took place throughout the day. At Salamanca a number of workers were injured, but censorship veiled details.

A general strike continued to tie up industry in a number of towns of Sevilla.

Van Zeeland to Try Again.

Brussels, June 12 (AP).—Former Premier Paul van Zeeland agreed today to try again to form a cabinet in the face of a threatened general business stoppage because of strikes.

More than 17,000 miners at Liege and Mons struck in sympathy with the walkout of 10,000 Antwerp dockworkers. Herstal Arms workers declared a stay-in strike. Yesterday 8,000 Antwerp diamond cutters quit and thousands of freight cars were tied up.

The strikers, taking a cue from their French colleagues, were demanding the 40-hour-week, increased wages and vacations with pay.

Man, Wife Found Near Death In Apartment Filled With Gas

A man and his wife, both 60, found unconscious side by side in their apartment at 1832 Columbia road northwest yesterday, were in critical condition at Gallinger Hospital last night.

Thomas J. Hodgen and his wife, Mrs. Dolly Hodgen, were discovered by a neighbor, Mary Fiol, who detected the odor of escaping gas and investigating found the couple lying on the floor.

A note found near the two and signed by both, told in effect that they had been "sweethearts all our lives," and had grown tired of living and had decided to take their "last sleep together."

After a Fire Rescue Squad tried for an hour to revive them, the man and woman were rushed to Emergency Hospital, and when efforts to revive them failed there, they were taken to Gallinger.

The couple had no relatives, so far as could be learned, and lived alone on a third-floor back-room apartment in sparsely furnished rooms. Hodgen was a laborer.

At Gallinger doctors tried again to revive Hodgen and his wife, but their attempts failed. Still the couple clung tenaciously to life despite their critical condition.

Police said the couple probably had lain unconscious for many hours before Miss Fiol found them.

Virginian Is Held In Hit-Run Death

Randolph Butler, 18, of Merrifield, Va., was arrested and charged with leaving the scene of an accident yesterday in connection with a hit-and-run accident in the early morning hours in which a Washington man received fatal inuries.

Robert M. Grooms, 27, colored, of 2710 N street northwest, was repairing a flat tire on a road near Merrifield when he was struck shortly after 1 a. m. The impact threw him 30 feet down an embankment. Carried to Georgetown Hospital by the Clarendon rescue squad, he died a few hours later from injuries.

Butler was arrested yesterday by Sheriff E. P. Kirby, of Fairfax County. Kirby said he admitted being in the accident. Bail was fixed at $2,000.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Washington Music Teachers Association, meeting at the Arts Club Friday night, celebrates its second anniversary and commemorates the 125th anniversary of the birth of Ferencz Liszt and the fiftieth anniversary of his death. Program presented by Marie von Unschuld, pianist; Ruby Smith Stahl, soprano; Willa Semple, accompanist, and Elena de Sayn, speaker.

Since its organization two years ago, the association of music teachers has made of its open meetings occasions for the enjoyment of interesting programs. Last evening's final session of the season was no exception to the rule, for the proceedings were a tribute to Ferencz Liszt, originator of the orchestral style of piano playing, inventor of the symphonic poem and deviser of the piano recital.

Attention was centered upon his creative talent and not upon the complexities of character which make him one of the most fascinating personalities among musicians. In her introductory remarks Mrs. Alice Burbage Hesselbach referred to the many facets of his brilliant individuality and to influence which he exerted upon his contemporaries.

Elena de Sayn read a paper on the relations between Liszt and Jeanne Elisabeth Carolyne d'Ivanonska, Princess von Sayn-Wittgenstein, the blonde, blue-eyed Polish woman, who was for many a year his Egeria. There seems to be little doubt that it is to her that the world owes the presence in musical literature of his larger and more important composition, for it was she who urged him to abandon his career as a virtuoso and to devote himself to the development of his creative faculty.

Marie von Unschuld, whose technical mastery of the keyboard meets the Lisztian demands, played the "Echo" etude from the set of Paganini transcriptions, the thirteenth "Magyar Rapszodia," and the first movement of the E flat major concerto, in which she was accompanied by a recording instrument controlled by a pedal of her invention.

Ruby Smith Stahl sang effectively one of the unjustly neglected songs, the fine setting of Heine's "Die Lorelei."

Robbery Suspect Held.

Steve Cassassa, 24, of the 2200 block of H street northwest, was arrested by headquarters detectives last night and charged with participating in the robbery of Jacob E. Specter, owner of a downtown liquor store, some time ago.

Cook Will Head Navy Air Unit; Succeeds King

New Chief Is Acquainted With Work of Bureau, Was Moffat's Aid.

Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, until reecntly in command of the aircraft carrier U. S. S. Lexington, yesterday relieved Rear Admiral Ernest J. King as head of the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics.

Admiral King will become aircraft commander of the base force aboard the flagship, U. S. S. Wright, now at San Diego, Calif.

A former assistant chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics under the late Rear Admiral William Moffat, killed in the Akron disaster, Admiral Cook is already familiar with the bureau's workings.

He started his naval career at 20 when he was appointed to the Naval Academy in 1901. During the World War he served as flag lieutenant and fleet signal officer on the staff of the commander in chief of the fleet on the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, earning a special letter of commendation from the department for his work.

He qualified as a naval aviator at Pensacola in 1928. After his training course he assumed command of the U. S. S. Langley, aircraft carrier. Two years later he was appointed to the staff of the commander of the aircraft squadrons of the battle fleet. In 1931 he became chief of staff of the aircraft commander of the battle force, two months later coming to Washington to be assistant chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics.

Three years older than Admiral Cook, Admiral King did patrol duty off the Atlantic Coast during the Spanish-American War.

During the World War he served as assistant chief of staff to Admiral Henry T. Mayo, commander in chief of the fleet, receiving the Navy Cross. Six years later he was given the Distinguished Service Cross for directing salvage operations of the submarine S-51, sunk off Block Island. He also directed salvage operations when the submarine S-4 sank off Provinctown, Mass., being awarded the Distinguished Service Medal, Gold Star.

In 1927 Admiral King qualified as a naval aviator and the following year was made commander of the aircraft squadrons of the scouting fleet. He became chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics in 1933 and was relieved at his own request to go to sea.

The Navy Department also announced yesterday that Admiral Joseph M. Reeves will be detached as commander in chief of the fleet on June 24 to come to Washington as a member of the general board.

Durbin Gets 11th Term As Chief of Magicians

The International Convention of Magicians ended at Batavia, N. Y., yesterday with the re-election of W. W. Durbin, registrar of the U. S. Treasury, as president. This will be his eleventh term. He now is in Chicago.

Other officers chosen included A. Harry Cecil, of Detroit, and Percy Abbott, of Colon, Mich., vice presidents.

High Point, N. C., will be the scene of next year's convention.

Seizes 2-Year-Old; Finds Policemen to His Liking.

Kenneth Kirby, 2 years old, of 306 Ninth street northeast, had the time of his life yesterday—he strayed away from home.

The youngster was playing blissfully in his front yard early yesterday when the desire to see the world beset him. Kenneth left the yard and 30 minutes later was found gazing in a show window at Eighth and H streets northwest by Ninth Precinct police.

He was taken to the Receiving Home to await his mother, Mrs. Maude Kirby, who called police an hour later. Kenneth told his mother he wanted to go back again soon to see the nice "peecmans."

50 Veterans Here Say Farewell To Home the Bonus Will Close

Communal Establishment Born in 1932 Has Given Shelter to 14,000; Dr. Queally, Founder, 'Bonus,' Pup-Mascot, at Party.

Payment of the bonus will mean closing of a veterans' home here and the razing of a landmark.

With the prospect of money in sight, the 50 veterans, from nearly every State, last night held a farewell party at the Washington Veterans Home, 2626 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, which will be officially closed Tuesday.

Since the winter of 1932 when a Washington minister on a tour of good will among the poor of the city stumbled on 150 World War veterans seeking food in trash cans in South Washington, the home has been in operation under a self-sustained form of community government.

But now that the bonus will be paid they are planning to leave town and are closing the home which has given food and shelter to more than 14,000 veterans since it has been in operation.

Dr. J. J. Queally, of the Transfiguration Episcopal Church, was there at the ceremonies last night when the 50 veterans and a few friends of the home sat on benches in the living room to joke and laugh and say good-by. Dr. Queally was the minister who found the veterans in South Washington that bleak winter day; he has been with them, helping them in their struggle against depression and joblessness ever since.

At the farewell last night was "Mother Steed." Her real name is Mrs. J. C. Steed and she served in a canteen overseas during the war, but the veterans at the home, whom she has helped, like to call her "Mother." She won their affection by cooking at times for them and helping them in many ways during the home's four-year life, and last night the veterans presented her with a flag "as token of our high esteem."

Dr. Queally made his farewell speech last night and with tears in his eyes told of the struggle the home has made to sustain itself without the aid of charity, without panhandling, without begging. He explained the operation of the home for the first time since its inception, how the veterans worked for one another, how each had tasks to perform, how each worked for the good of the group.

"The Government gave us the house," he said. "But that's all they gave us. We've worked for what we've gotten. When we came to this old house it was dusty and musty and the roof was full of holes. The floor that is now the floor of the sleeping quarters was a sea of mud. The first few nights the men slept on the half-frozen earth. But they cleaned it all out, they got beds and they made a furnace, and they all got jobs.

"Men have come and have gone from the home," he declared. "Some have gotten jobs and left us. Now we all are going, and the old home which has been our real 'home' is going to be razed."

As Dr. Queally made his farewell address, a dog lolled on the floor beneath his feet. His name is "Bonus" and he was rescued by one of the men from the canal nearby—a bedraggled bundle of no pedigree at all. When they move, he will be sent to a home in the country and cared for. All the men want the pup, so to save argument is was decided he be sent to the country.

Dr. Queally said there never had been trouble among any members of the home. He praised the committee of five elected from the group to enforce regulation and discipline.

"Mother Steed" also spoke and told the veterans how much she had enjoyed working among them, how she would miss them.

A few of the veterans sang ditties they learned in the trenches in France. The whole audience sang songs that were popular when the war raged abroad, like: "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary" and "There's a Silver Lining."

The men said it was like a canteen during the war, almost—this farewell party.

Pianist, 12, to Play.

Frances Gutelius Smith will present Joan Casterlin, 12-year-old pianist, in her first recital at 8 o'clock this evening at 1408 New Hampshire avenue. The young musician has written some 90 original poems, several of which will be read by Miss Smith.

Jews to Select World Parley Delegates Here

As a preliminary to the World Jewish Congress ,to be held in August at Geneva, more than 1,000 delegates from Jewish communities in 30 States are assembling at the Hotel Willard tonight for the first session of a two-day conference.

At the conference here 70 delegates will be elected to represent the United States at the World Jwish Congress.

Additional purposes of the conference are to discuss the deterioration of Jewish rights throughout the world and methods of obtaining collective security for the Jewish people.

The conference has been summoned by the American Jewish Congress, of which Dr. Stephen S. Wise, is president. Delegates have been elected at city conventions of more than 3,000 organizations with an approximate membership of 648,000. Represented also will be 24 national organizations.

Dr. Georg Bernhard, an exile from Nazi Germany, will be guest speaker at the opening session tonight. Dr. Bernhard will describe the conditions under which Jews live in Germany, the effect of Hitlerism on the Jewish status in countries outside Germany and the views of European Jewry on the action to be taken for their protection.

Louis Lipsky, honorary president of the Zionist Organization of America and vice president of the American Jewish Congress, will be another speaker on the program tonight.

U. S. Mint Is Reeling as Craze For Special Coins Grows Apace

America's 2-year-old coin craze, which has the Bureau of the Mint reeling, strengthened its foothold yesterday when the Fine Arts Commission announced approval of the Wisconsin centennial coin design and said it will take up next the Lynchburg (Va.), sesquicentennial coin design.

Half-dollars dedicated to one anniversary or another are rolling out of the San Francisco, Denver and Philadelphia mints in enoromus volume. The fad began in 1934, but, according to data gathered at the Treasury, it has not yet reached the production peak.

Coin dealers catering to numismatics seem to be the only ones showing any great enthusiasm for the fancy silver deluge. The reason, explained a Treasury official, is that they are doing a land-office business.

There have been numerous complaints that dealers bought special coins in job lots at 50 cents to $1 a coin, thereby gaining a corner on the market. Then they name their own price and the ardent collector who can't stand the thought of a blank in his album pays the exhorbitant fee asked.

A recent commemorative coin brought $100 a set. It consisted of three half-dollars identical in appearance, save that one was minted in Philadelphia, another in Denver and the third in San Francisco.

The Government bureaus can do nothing about it. When Congress authorizes a landing of the Swedes half dollar or a lynchburg half dollar or any other commermorative coins it provides that some private organization shall be the distributing agent. This agent receives the consignment at the mint for the payment of the face value and what is done with the coins thenceforward is no affair of Uncle Sam.

So far this year Congress has enacted and President Roosevelt has signed legislation to strike off half dollars celebrating the tercentenary of the landing of the Dutch on Long Island, the Cleveland centennial, the 250th anniversary of the founding of New Rochelle, N. Y., the tercentenary of the Swedes' landing in Delaware, the Wisconsin centennial, the Brideport, Conn., centennial and the Lynchbury sesquicentennial.

Already in circulation or nearing that stage are thousands of four-bit pieces glorifying Arkansas, Cincinnati, Columbia, S. C.; Daniel Boone, the Oregon Trail, Texas and San Diego.

But that's only scratching the surface. Bills are pending in Congress to accord like honors to the 100th anniversary of the arrival of Marcus and Narcissa Whitman in Walla Walla Valley (Washington) and the fiftieth anniversay of the founding of the Borough of Wilkinsburg, Pa.

Also the "outstanding public services" of William Henry Harrison, the tercentenary of the founding of York County, Me., and of Hartford, Conn., and Michigan's admission-into-the-Union centennial.

Also on the Congressional waiting list are coins commemorating the opening of theSan Francisco-Oakland bridge, thecentennial of the opening of the tri-State territory of east Texas, North Louisiana and south Arkansas by Capt. Henry Miller Shreve, the founding of the International Peace Garden in the Turtle Mountains of North Dakota and Manitoba, honoring the memory of the scientist, Charles P. Steinmetz, and marking the 160th anniversary of the arrival of Gen. Washington and his army at Morristown, N. J.

And fresh coin bills are being introduced daily.

Parley Today Maps Course Of Fund Plea

Appeal to Roosevelt Is Likely to Be Result of Conference.

Commissioners to See Thomas on Blanton House Impasse.

The District Commissioners will confer with Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, this morning regarding the next move to save the 1937 District supply bil.

A probable outcome of the parley will be a decision to make an appeal to President Roosevelt, upon his return from the Southwest, to take a hand in bringing House conferees into an attitude of compromise.

Fearing that the District will be placed on a bare subsistence basis next year and be deprived of some $7,000,000 in capital improvements, the commissioners are prepared to call at the White House either by themselves or in company with the Senate conferees.

Senator Thomas said he will take no further action until the House acts on the formal disagreement signed this week. Unless the House changes its adamant attitude early next week, he will introduce a continuing resolution.

So far the House managers, led by Representative Thomas L. Blanton, have not only refused to accept the $5,700,000 lump-sum payment recommended by the Budget Bureau and voted by the Senate, or even the $5,000,000 compromise figure suggested by Senator Thomas, but they now threaten to call up the Blanton resolution which would eliminate the Federal contribution entirely along with capital improvements next year.

The House managers also rejected a Senate proposal that a fiscal relations commission be set up to determine the lump-sum payment for 1938 and a formula for future Federal appropriations to the District.

Appeal of organized citizenry of the District for passage of the appropriation bill may be telegraphed to President Roosevelt, Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, said yesterday.

Showboat Cruise Set for Monday

A showboat cruise, financial proceeds of which will go into the fund for needy hotel men and their families and the Police Boys Club treasury, will be held Monday night by the Hotel Greeters of Washington.

According to plans announced yesterday, the Potomac steamer, City of Washington, will leave the Wilson Line wharf at 8:30 p. m. An entertainment program will begin an hour earlier, with a concert by the Police Boys Club Band on the steamer wharf, and will continue until the boat docks.

Arch McDonald, radio sports commentator, will be master of ceremonies. He will introduce Senorifa Carmen, Spanish dancer; Sid Cowan and Jack Minnovich, singers; the popular dancer known as "Taps;" the Royal Duo, the Boys Club Band, Park brothers and Lynn, Honey Davis and Eddy Whitesell, Maj. Brown's Harmonica Boys, Le Sieur's Orchestra and others.

Tickets are on sale at all hotels for $1.

Acacia Picnic Today.

The annual picnic of the Acacia Chapter, No. 28, of the Order of the Eastern Star, will be held today at the home of Associate Matron Elsie Nordquist in Merrifield, Va. Those attending will meet at 3 p. m. at the home of Associate Conductress Zola Fletcher, 1206 Shepherd street northwest.

Car Track Removal To Start Monday

Removal of the double street car tracks in Fourteenth street, between New York avenue and H street northwest, and realignment of the two tracks which are to remain, is to be begun Monday by the Capital Transit Co., it was announced yesterday.

The company recently completed a track connection between its Fourteenth street and Pensylvania avenue lines. It now is engaged in connecting the G street line, which has been a stub end, at Fifteenth street, with the Fifteenth street tracks.

Realignment of the Fourteenth street tracks will cost approximately $160,000, company officers estimated. The G street connection, they estimated, would cost $34,000 and will be completed within a fortnight.

350 New Members Is Goal of Ad Club

The Washington Advertising Club expects to enroll more than 350 new members by the end of July, J. A. Anderson, chairman of the membership committee, reported at a recent meeting of the board.

James Rotto, of the entertainment committee, submitted plans for three outings during the summer. The board approved the plans. Another jamboree will be held at a date to be announced later.

The board appropriated funds for the renewal of advertising lectures conducted by the club last winter. It was decided to conduct 12 lectures, two each month, starting in September.

After Norman Kal, president, had read a resume of the progress of the club, the board decided to continue meetings each Tuesday, with luncheon at the Willard Hotel, its headquarters.

Tried Driving Father's Car

John Mills, 4, jumped out of his father's auto yesterday when he started it rolling down the street. The car dropped down an embankment and overturned.

Diplomas Given To 49 Students At Abbot School

Largest Class in History of Institution; Walsh Is Speaker.

Forty-nine boys, the largest class in the ten-year history of the school, were graduated from Abbot Vocational School at exercises held at the school last night.

The boys have completed two-year courses in trades. Some have studied printing, others have specialized in electrical work, sheet metal work, woodwork or plumbing.

In an address to the graduates, Gerald A. Walsh, secretary of the Graphic Arts Association, advised them to continue studying their respective trades and to keep abreast of new developments.

Many men are idle, he said, because they have failed to adapt themselves to changing industrial methods. He told the boys to keep mentally alert and to read the trade journals of their crafts.

The diplomas were presented by John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union. Honors were awarded by W. F. Smith, principal of the school. Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, president of the Board of Education, presided.

The valedictory address was delivered by Alfred Vasco while another graduate, John Haggerty, gave a talk on "Continuing an Education."

Those completing their work in the various courses are:

Auto mechanics—Wilton B. Duley, Eugene T. Hayes.

Electrical—William J. Klein, Howard Hixson, Clarence Spitzer, Eugenio Estrella, Lawren W. Burroughs, Calvin R. Pollin, James J. Haggerty, Raleigh F. Harmon, Frederick M. Herrmann, Robert C. Kendrick, Russell T. Knott, Joseph R. Offutt, Charles W. Reuss, Walter T. Snead, John A. Thomas, William G. Thompson, Charles C. Weaver, Joseph Schwartz.

Sheet metal work—Roland L. Heath, James P. Carey, Marion L. Wood, Lincoln L. Sharp, Wilbur V. Thompson, Peter P. Balinovic.

Painting and decorating—Edward J. Carroll, Jesse W. Evans.

Plumbing—James Calomeris, William E. Hyde, James E. Laisnel, William P. Marks, Aubrey W. Blake, Carl S. Farmer, Charles J. Saslimbne.

Printing—James R. Moffitt, Alfred P. Vasco, Chester B. Whetzel, Floyd M. White, James O. Barger.

Woodwork—Frank H. Collins, James Everett Flynn, Edgar Claude Lowe, Warren Mears, John Hunt, Howard Orndorff, Jack Rullman.

Post graduate certificates were awarded to Edgar C. Lowe, James Calomeris, Frank H. Collins, Alfred Santilli, Eugene T. Hays, Horace Phillips and John F. Rest.

Boy, 4, 'Drives' Auto; Almost Loses His Life

Lad Leaps to Safety as Car Rolls Down Hill, Over Embankment.

A 4-year-old boy, who thought he was big enough to drive daddy's car, narrowly escaped death yesterday when he tried it.

John Mills, son of the Rev. J. Raymond Mills, minister of religious education and young people's work of the National City Christian Church, probably owes his life to his presence of mind. He leaped to safety just before his father's car, which he had started rolling down Northampton street in front of his home, jumped the curb, dropped over a 10-foot embankment and rolled over on its top.

John rushed into the house, 3206 Northampton street northwest, and cried out to his father:

"Daddy, the car's going down the hill!"

He was a little sheepish about the performance, because his father had forbidden him to touch the car, which had been parked in the street with no one in it. The boy refused to say how he had started it. He admitted, however, to having turned the wheels away from the curb—no easy task for a boy of his age.

He had seen his father drive and thought he could do it himself, the boy explained.

Charles Glover Wins Award at St. Marks

The Founder's Medal of St. Mark's School, Southboro, Mass., the institution's highest award, yesterday was presented to Charles Carroll Glover 3d, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., and grandson of the late president of the Riggs National Bank.

Because of an infantile paralysis epidemic, graduation exercises planned for yesterday were postponed. Diplomas and prizes were sent the recipients by mail.

The 3 R's

Engage City Bluecoats Who Found Texts.

Broad-shouldered policemen yesterday paused and bent intently over text books they had all but forgotten since their school days.

In and out of the Traffic Bureau they went, pausing and looking at maps and pictures of distant places and things.

Then there were the propositions in plane geometry, and the rules governing prepositions and verbs, and a Latin text, in which Caesar said Gaul, like a triple street intersection, was divided into three parts.

The books, ranging from elementary composition to the writings of the noble Romans, were found on the street by Policeman D. R. A. Connors, of the bureau.

There are nine of them. The owner may have them by calling at headquarters, but meanwhile the bluecoats are going back to the three "R's," and even a little further.

Court Square Landscaping Is Approved

Commission Also Passes Plan for Tuberculosis Health Camp.

Underground Garage Is Recommended for District Building.

Plans for landscaping the proposed Police Court Building in Judiciary Square were approved by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday.

The plans, as submitted by Nathan C. Wyeth, municipal architect, were indorsed except for minor details, which the Commissioners said they will study with the architect later.

The Police Court building, for which $1,000,000 is sought in the pending District supply bill, will be the first of a group of municipal buildings to be erected in the square.

The commission yesterday also approved plans for the tuberculosis health camp at Bald Eagle Hill, and plans for landscaping around the new Federal Reserve Board building, now being erected at Twentieth street and Constitution avenue.

Reviewing the Treasury's proposal to transform the vacant lot, now used for parking cars, south of the District Building to a park, the commission decided that other accommodations for parking the cars now kept there must be provided for. The commission recommended an underground garage with a capacity of at least 500 autos.

The G. A. R.'s request for a $3,000,000 appropriation to build a memorial at Fort Stevens, Fourteenth street and Georgia avenue, also was considered, and the commission voted to recommend the memorial, which is to be an amphitheater, only if Congress acquires more ground at the site.

A survey of the Fort Stevens grounds shows that the site is not spacious enough to hold both the amphitheater and the fort. The commission will recommend the memorial project only if Congress includes an additional appropriation for more land adjacent to the fort.

A report made by John J. Nolen, jr., informed the commission that the Government already owns considerable property along the right-of-way of the proposed Washington-Baltimore parkway. Nolen cited stretches of land on the Resettlement Administration's property near Berwyn, Md., and the Agriculture Department farms at Beltsville, Md., over which the parkway would run.

The commission voted to give further study to the program to coordinate future land purchases for new schools and recreational purposes.

Herbert P. Galliher, 17, Wins Yale Scholarship

Herbert Parrish Galliher, 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Galliher, 201 Cedar avenue, Takoma Park, Md., has been named as the successful candidate for the Yale University regional scholarship for the South Atlantic States.

A student of Asheville Preparatory School, Asheville, N. C., for the last four years, Galliher not only headed the graduating class, but held the highest average in the school of 170 boys. Before going to Asheville, he attended Paul Junior High School and the Takoma Park (Md.) Elementary School.

Scholarship Trials Set.

Competitive examinations for a four-year scholarship to Holy Cross Academy will be held at the academy on Wednesday, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Frederick W. Seibold, chairman of the committee on arrangements. This announcement comes as a correction of a release by the committee which had set the date for the examination as today.

'Fury' Is Play Of Grim Power At the Palace

Acted by Excellent Cast; Other Programs Are of Wide Variety.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"FURY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Norman Krasna, adapted to the screen by Bartlett Cormack and Fritz Lang, featuring Spencer Tracy and Sylvia Sidney, with Walter Abel, Bruce Cabot, Edward Ellis, Walter Brennan, Frank Albertson, George Walcott, Arthur Stone, Morgan Wallace, Edwin Maxwell, Howard Hickman, Jonathan Hale, Leila Bennett, Esther Dale and Helen Flint. Directed by Fritz Lang. Reviewed Friday morning.

Utilizing the savage workings of mob psychology and their grim consequences in the lives of many people as the basis of a relentless attack upon the indefensible violences of lynch law, Norman Krasna, in "Fury," has conceived and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer produced a vivid and realistic drama that takes its place along with "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," "Public Enemy" and perhaps one or two other films of like character as a powerful instrument of social justice and a potent source of gripping entertainment.

BELL.

The story moves with swift directness to draw its pitiless indictment of the fallibilities of circumstantial evidence, a community's willingness to commit mass perjury to protect the good name its acts have destroyed and opportunist public officials' subordination of duty to considerations of political expediency. It employs as the living symbols of the practitioners and the victims of a vicious system the simple folk of a typical small American town. It casts into their midst a hard-working young man who has skimped for a year to save money enough to marry the girl he loves—a school teacher, also struggling to lay something by for the household fund. For no reason at all he is taken into custody as a suspect in a kidnaping case.

Had Ransom Money.

A $5 ransom bill is found in his possession and upon this flimsy foundation is built up a structure of imaginary evidence that results in the burning down of the jail in which he is confined a prisoner. So far as anyone knows, Joe Wilson perished in the flames, a victim of hysterical lynch law.

But Joe Wilson escaped and by remaining in hiding remains dead in the eyes of the world and the law while he plots an exquisite revenge upon those who led the mob that "killed" him. Twenty-two indictments for murder are returned against the ringleaders. All have ironclad alibis—until their guilt is definitely established by a form of evidence new to American courts.

It is upon this situation that the climax and denouement of the play are predicated. It would be unfair to future audiences to disclose in minute detail the manner in which the involved circumstance of Wilson's survival brings the drama to a logical and romantic close. It is perhaps enough to record that whatever it may lose in melodramatic tensity it gains in spiritual and psychological soundness and integrity.

Closely Knit Story.

The development of the story has been nurtured with fine skill and effectiveness by Director Fritz Lang who at frequent intervals has illuminated the script with eloquent touches of interpretative byplay and photographic expressiveness. His notion of dissolving the gossiping village women into a coop of cackling hens is as expository as a thousand feet of action. His use of the fade-in and double exposure also is helpful without at any time being overdone.

Co-authorship of the working script with Bartlett Cormack, an expert at this sort of thing, necessarily gave Director Lang a complete grasp of his every dramatic objective. His play, as a result, sets off a succession of scenes of explosive forcefulness—especially after the action moves into the court room.

The two pivotal roles are played without compromise, or any great effort to achieve either comic or romantic relief from the play's deadly seriousness, by Spencer Tracy, as the supposed victim of mob violence, and Sylvia Sidney, in the role of the girl he was on his way to wed. Opposing counsel are sharply drawn by Walter Abel, the district attorney, and Jonathan Hale, for the defense.

Support and Supplementaries.

Others who add to the strength of a judiciously chosen cast include Edward Ellis, as the browbeaten sheriff; Bruce Cabot, one of the mob leaders; Edwin Maxwell, a political corruptionist; Walter Brennan, Frank Albertson and George Walcott.

It is doubtful if either Mr. Tracy or Miss Sidney ever has contributed anything more substantially worth while to the screen than in this picture. They make it a document of authentic usefulness and power.

For the lighter elements of entertainment, I commend the excellent selection of the new bill's contrasting supplementary features. "Aquatic Artistry" is a diving reel, executed by Harold "Dutch" Smith and described by the invisible, but vocal, Mr. Pete Smith in his best comic vein. "The Old Mill Pond," in Technicolor, is a musical cartoon comedy that affords amazingly vivid caricatures of many of the theater's foremost sepia serenaders, along with a collection of their most effective tunes. One of the best of its kind, this.

The Metrotone News, assembled too soon to include the pyrotechnical highlights of the Republican National Convention, although early convention scenes are shown, is the final auxiliary of a feature that is perfectly catalogued by its title.

Earle

"SONS O' GUNS." Warner Brothers' picturization of the musical comedy by Fred Thompson and Jack Donahue, with screen play by Jerry Wald and Julius J. Epstein, starring Joe E. Brown, supported by Joan Blondell, Beverly Roberts, Eric Blore, Winifred Shaw, Craig Reynolds, Joseph King and Robert Barrat. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. Music and lyrics by Harry Warren and Al Dubin. Musical numbers staged by Bobby Connolly. Reviewed Friday morning by W. A. Whitney.

After sitting through a lusty screen comedy and listening to a top-ranking and, there can be but one answer to that question so eagerly awaited by yesterday morning's capacity audience at the Earle Theater. "Is everybody happy?" asked Ted Lewis, and a thunderous outburst of applause bespoke the catholic approbation of the multitude.

Here is close to the perfect bill for unmitigated entertainment—Joe E. Brown on the screen in "Sons o' Guns," and on the stage Mr. Lewis and his "Rhythm Rhapsody Revue." Light and tuneful throughout, with every moment of the time filled with enjoyment to drive Dull Care far away, this program is an ace for those who like to laugh loud, long and often, those who like a lilting melody, played with brilliant novelty, and, those who like to relax and be amused.

With a picture starring the cavern-mouthed Mr. Brown, certain things are expected, and in "Sons o' Guns" all those things are realized, and in a story of considerably greater import than those in which the comedian recently has been seen. The story of a Liberty Bond-selling actor, who inadvertantly finds himself attached to the Army when he endeavors to elude a professional snarer of hearts, furnishes Mr. Brown more than the essentials for a howling comedy. How he single-handedly captured a machine-gun nest and a whole German regiment—because he, and they, were not mad at anything—and how he wins the affection of a French bar-maid are other developments in this laugh-packed drama which Mr. Brown handles expertly in his own inimitable way.

Has Three Leading Women.

During the course of the action, Mr. Brown impersonates an English captain and a German general, two of the choichest bits illuminating his notable career.

Three women play opposite Mr. Brown: Joan Blondell, as the French bar-maid; Winifred Shaw, as the siren, and Beverly Roberts, as the erstwhile fiancee. In their respective roles they are fine, with Shaw doing no singing and Miss Blondell not so flippant as usual but just as effective.

Good old Eris Blore continues his superb valet interpretations and, later, turns into an amazingly hard-boiled sergeant who, when the officers are not looking, cannot entirely forget his former occupation. Others in the company, all of whom are creditably cast, include Robert Barrat, Craig Reynolds, Frank Mitchell, Hans Joby, Otto Fries, Joseph King, G. P. Huntley, jr., Dave Worth, Michael Mark, Bert Roach and Mischa Auer.

Two amusing and tuneful ditties are included, commentaries anent "What a War" and what a soldier can and cannot do on "A Buck and a Quarter a Day!"

Ted Lewis Wows 'Em!

On the stage—Ted Lewis and his "Rhythm Rhapsody Revue." With the silver-lined topper, the clarinet and the cane, Mr. Lewis, formally presented by lovely Audrey Sieber, leads his orchestra of 19 and eight associated artists through a lively program of vocal and instrumental numbers with interludes of effective dancing.

Mr. Lewis is no less than 85 per cent of the show, his nonchalance, his pleasant clowning, his peculiar recitative type of rendering a song combine to give him the center of the stage at all times. Not that his associates are not of high quality, they definitely are, and with the one and only Ted Lewis in person, a pleasing revue is raised almost to the point of tabloid extravaganza.

The dancing of the bill is furnished by Edna Strong and Nascha, each in solo, in varied routines. Charlie "Snowball" Whittier adds his imitation of Jimmie Durante, and the Hi-Hatters contribute a clever dance number. Further vocalizings are presented by the three Radio Aces.

It would be useless to recount all the band numbers, but every last one of them is worth listening to and played as only this organization can play them.

Augmented Auxiliaries.

Supplementary screen attractions at the reviewed performance included "Dummy Ache," a comedy, with Edgar Kennedy and Florence Lake; "Here's Howe," a Joe Polooka comedy, with Robert Norton, Beverly Payton and Shemp Howard; "Bridge Ahoy," a Popeye cartoon; "Romane In the Air," a musical, with Winifrid Shaw and Phil Regan, and the Paramount News.

Some of these subjects may be omitted from later programs, as the opening show was prolonged somewhat because of an unexpected delay in the band's arrival.

Love at First Sight on the Levee

The chance meeting between Magnolia and the river gambler, Ravenal, is one of the romantic incidents in the opening sequences of Universal's new picturization of Edna Ferber's novel of the Mississippi, "Show Boat," now in its fourth and, presumably, final week, on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. Irene Dunne, who has achieved one of her most notable successes in this subject, and Allan Jones here are pictured at the moment they fell in love and so set in motion the absorbing developments with which the film play deals so picturesquely and tunefully.

Loew's Fox

"FORGOTTEN FACES." Paramount picturization of a story by Richard Washburn Child, adapted to the screen by Marguerite Roberts, Robert Yost and Brian Marlow, starring Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael, supported by James Burke, Arthur Hohl, Robert Cummings, Jane Rhodes and Robert Gleckler. Directed by E. A. Dupont. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Dorothea Lewis.

Just two weeks ago, Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael occupied this screen as ever-faithful lovers in "Till We Meet Again." This week there is practically no limit to their hatred for each other.

"Forgotten Faces" turns out to be much the poorer of their two teamings. It is a drab, fawdry, thoroughly unpleasant concoction, made up of an unfaithful wife, a husband who murders the "other man" and a daughter who has to be protected from her mother. Not very nice.

Harry Ashton, gambler who believes that heliotrope brings him luck, loses his luck when his wife Cleo, betrays him with a rival gambler. He kills the rival, and succeeds in getting his baby daughter to friends before he is arrested and sentenced to life imprisonment. The baby is adopted by a wealthy family. Harry knows where she is, but Cleo doesn't. Seventeen years of prison for Harry and poverty for Cleo pass until the latter, suspecting that the daughter might make blackmail easy and profitable for her, starts out to find her. Harry obtains a parole, only on his promise not to "set a finger on his wife," and he starts out to keep her from finding the daughter.

Play Holds Interest.

The manner in which he does it is a strange combination of ingenutiy, helitrope and absolutely fake situations, but it does hold the interest. We still think Cleo a little dumb in going into such a very dark house and following a strange butler up a dark stairs into a dark room, but maybe she was desperate. Anyhow, he doesn't set a finger on her.

In addition to the rather synthetic hold that the play establishes for a time on audience curiosity, the most noteworthy thing about the affair is the excellent performance of Gertrude Michael, as Cleo. It is the sort of part that Bette Davis has had so much fun and success with lately, that of a thoroughly bad and second-rate woman, and Miss Michael plays it beautifully, perhaps a little more subtly than Miss Davis.

Herbert Marshall does what he can with one of those "oh-the-pain-of-it" roles, suffering and ageing in prison and out. His lack of heroics even in moments of nobility is always so welcome.

Support Is Competent.

James Burke as Johnny and Arthur Hohl as Hi-Jack Eddie help, but Robert Cummings playing the role of the daughter's fiance is the silliest, sickliest youngster we've come across in many moons. Daughter, in the hands of Jane Rhodes, doesn't matter much, either.

The real entertainment feature of the week is Yasha Bunchuk and his 60-piece symphony orchestra, held over by popular demand, a demand that speaks much for Washington's good taste.

Maestro Bunchuk leads his men through sluch favorites as "Valse Triste," "March Slav" and "Caprice Espagnole," in rousing fashion. We suggest a popular demand now that they stay all summer.

Herb Scores Again.

Herb Williams is again with us on the stage portion of the bill, or perhaps we should say "still" with us, for Herb may be "At Home Abroad" or wander along the Erie Canawl, but he is always the same Herb on F street. Not one syllable nor one inflection in his time-honored act has been altered. Many of the audience, loved him as much as we did the "first time," and it is still a unique act and Herb still is the sole occupant in his own particular niche in the theater and his public's hilarious affection.

Washingtonian Talbert Haslett also plays a repeat performance this week, doing excellently with his tenor baritone voice on "That's Why Darkies Were Born" and "What's the Name of that Song."

We shudder when an act is announced as "Men About Town" and Gold and Bernie are no exception; but the Three DeLong Sisters, who open the bill, are very good athletes, indeed.

The newsreel, with glimpses of the beginnings of the Cleveland convention, and a Charley Chase comedy complete the program.

Metropolitan

"THE LAW IN HER HANDS." First National picturization of a story by George Bricker, adapted to the screen by Mr. Bricker and Luci Ward, featuring Glenda Farrell, Margaret Lindsay, Lyle Talbot and Warren Hull, with Eddie Acuff, Dick Purcell, Al Shean, Joseph Crehan, Matty Fain, Addison Richards, Milt Kibbee and Mabel Colcord. Directed by William Clemens. Reviewed Friday evening by Sally Stroud.

This bill is not a record-beater, but it is one of the most genially enjoyable presentations offered theater-goers who have tired of hot pavements. Besides the feature, there is a cleverly staged Dave Apollon short, a Joe Palooka comedy and a newsreel including shots of the recent trumpeting of the elephant at Cleveland.

The feature picture is all about how two attractive girl attorneys become involved with a gangster who operates as the head of a benevolent protective association. The assistant district attorney is enamored of the senior partner of the feminine duo, who refuses to marry him until she has proven her worth as a lawyer. Telling her "the law is full of tricks," he attempts to dissuade her from practicing. Outwitting and outsmarting him, the girl attains success as the retainer of the notorious gentleman gangster. But she applies for her own disbarment papers eventually, feeling "a woman's place is in the home."

Miss Lindsay Aids Role.

Not very original, nor very exciting, but Margaret Lindsay, in fetching gowns, wearing a determined expression, makes the senior partner fairly believable. Glenda Farrell, who leans toward smartly tailored suits, plays comedy foil. Eddie Acuff nobly suffers amidst swathing bandages; he is a process server; "the best east of Times Square." Warren Hull, with slate-gray eyes and an engaging manner, may start some new heart-flutterings as the assistant district attorney. Lyle Talbot is the gangster; not quite sinister enough to speak his lines convincingly.

Should you see the picture, perhaps you will agree that the young man who whispered "Shaddup!" to his pal during the gangster's trial would have been a better choice for the part.

A new high in screen fashions is reached by Orry-Kelly in his designing of the spiral-winding hat worn by Miss Lindsay in one of her tense scenes. It quite ruined the dramatic intent of the bit. But that white fur wrap! And that black suit with the dippy white collar! Stylists please copy.

Two Odd Characters.

Two of the oddest comedy characters to appear in many a moon are (1) the Chinaman in the Apollon short who is a "Heel-Beely," an Irishman, etc., and (2) the husky, attractive, young pug in the Palooka comedy who turns in a neat job of pantomime shadow boxing to the tune of snappy remarks by the "Knobby" of the piece.

And imagine Dave Apollon as a Southern colonel . . . As he says, "From the south of Russia . . ."

P. S. Did you ever note the resemblance between the profiles of Ginger Rogers and Glenda Farrell?

Belasco

"THE GUARDSMAN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Ferenc Molnar's play, adapted to the screen by Ernest Vajda, starring Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, supported by Roland Young, Maud Eburne, ZaSu Pitts and Herman Bing. Directed by Sidney Franklin.

"THE PLOW THAT BROKE THE PLAINS." Resettlement Administration's picturization of a story by Pare Lorentz. Reviewed second week by Dorothea Lewis.

If the Guardsman set up summer headquarters on Fifteenth street apposite Lafayette Park, we would be over to see him (or it) at least every other week. A second week is just a beginning.

Here is one movie where names do mean something. Glance up in the fine print and note "Play by Molnar." "Adaptation by Vajda." "Acting (and real acting) by Lunt, Fontanne, Young and Company." After that, if you have any questions about the merit of the film, go to see it and find out for yourself just how much exhilarating fun you can have in an hour and a half of looking and listening to the best there is of all theatrical departments.

The story is too well known by now to need retelling. There is an actor and his wife, an actress; and the husband is jealous and pretends to be a Guardsman who makes love to the wife; and the wife falls in love with the Guardsman, and the only question is "Is the wife pretending or not?"

The companion picture, "The Plow That Broke the Plains," deserves a second, third and fourth week of its own, for in its documentary way, without actors, except sun and wind and wheat and plows, it is vastly important to all America, and in its photography and stirring musical accompaniment, it is exciting.

Columbia

"SMALL TOWN GIRL." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Ben Ames Williams, with screen play by John Lee Mahin and Edith Fitzgerald, co-starring Janet Gaynor and Robert Taylor, supported by Binnie Barns, Lewis Stone, Andy Devine, Elizabeth Patterson, Frank Craven, James Stewart, Douglas Fowley, Isabel Jewell, Charles Grapewin, Nella Walker, Robert Greig, Edgar Kennedy and William Fung. Directed by William A. Wellman. Reviewed (second week, return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

Catching the public fancy as few pictures playing the F street front recently have done, "Small Town Girl" started yesterday its fourth downtown week, making the score two and two for Loew's Palace and Columbia theaters.

Authored by a very popular writer and peopled with players of wide appeal, the picture reveals a light, yet sufficiently real, story of marriage and subsequent love. With Janet Gaynor and Robert Taylor in the principal parts, supported by Lewis Stone, Elizabeth Patterson, Edgar Kennedy, Frank Craven, and many others of comparable ability, "Small Town Girl" is fine fare for this late vernal season.

For further interest to theater-goers, there has been included on the program "Rural Mexico," a south-of-the-Rio Grande travelogue in Technicolor, narrated by James A. Fitzpatrick; "The Brain Busters," a comedy with Vince Barnett and Billy Gilbert, and a new release of the Metrotone News.

RKO-Keith's

"SHOW BOAT." Universal picturization of the operetta by Oscar Hammerstein 2d, based on the novel by Edna Ferber, starring Irene Dunne, with Allan Jones, Charles Winninger, Paul Robeson, Helen Morgan, Helen Westley, Donald Cook, Queenie Smith, Francis X. Mahoney, Charles Middleton, Sammy White, Arthur Hohl, J. Farrell MacDonald, Patricia Barry, Marilyn Knowlden, Sunnie O'Dea, Mae Beatty, Clarence Muse and Stanley Fields. Music by Jerome Kern. Screen play and lyrics by Oscar Hammerstein 2d. Directed by James Whale.

Fulfilling every prophecy that it would take rank among the foremost of the cinema's music-dramas, Universal's new picturization of Edna Ferber's exciting romance of the Mississippi, "Show Boat," launches itself confidently into a fourth consecutive week of audience acclaim at RKO-Keith's.

There are many qualities of excellence in this newest version of a work that has been novel, stage spectacle and twice motion picture which might be credited with the film's overwhelming popularity, but it is perhaps the well-nigh perfect combination of engrossing story, melodious Jerome Kern score, incomparable cast and all-around productional superiority that accounts for its undisputed preeminence.

In the role of Magnolia, Irene Dunne, assuming again a part she played with distinction on the boards, offers the most diversified performance she ever has brought to the screen, and the most amusingly enlivened. Her voice is at its best in the Jerome Kern songs and to her usual accomplishments she has added a keen gift of comedy and a bit of dancing that is devastating.

Miss Dunne, however, is only one of many who contribute to the balanced merit of this production. The character delineations by Charles Winninger, Helen Westley, Helen Morgan, Sammy White, Queenie Smith, Allan Jones, as Ravenal, the gambler, and scores more are memorable, and Paul Robeson's singing of "Ol' Man River" never will be forgotten.

It is significant of the completeness of the entertainment afforded by "Show Boat" that a brief issue of the Pathe News is its only supplementary.

The Federal Diary

Underwood & Underwood.

Mrs. Clara Sentel, a chemist in the paint laboratory of the Bureau of Standards, guaging the quality of paint by a newly approved checkerboard method.

By Betty Read.

The National Federation of Federal Employes regards the Republican platform plank pledging the party to the merit system, irrespective of party affiliations, as "encouraging"—especially in view of the fact that the plank is pretty much the one their president offered to the party solons.

Now that the Cleveland convention is past history, Luther C. Steward, the N. F. F. E. president, has his eyes on the Democrats who will assemble in Philadelphia on June 23, where he will urge them to take a similar stand on the question which his organization feels is of the utmost importance to the thousands of Goverment employes all over the country.

The federation is a little doubtful that the Democrats will take as firm a party stand for the merit system as have their political enemies and they are hopeful the Democratic convention will do more than point to recent legislation calling for the merit system or simply pass the issue over with a blanket and colorless indorsement.

"The Republican platform now is more definite in its support of the merit system than it has ever been before," said Gertrude M. McNally, the federation secretary, but the greatest impetus has come from the Presidential nominee himself.

Landon View Encouraging.

"When Landon telegraphed the convention as he did about the merit system, the whole question was made of far greater importance than it had previously been, for he focused national attention upon the matter.

"If enough people—those in prominent positions as well as the average voter—demanded the merit system, it wouldn't be long before we had it throughout the entire Government service," she said.

Gov. Landon wired the delegates to the convention that he felt every position in the Administration service below the rank of assistant secretaries of major departments and agencies, and the entire Postoffice Department, should be included within the merit system.

Landon, Miss McNally pointed out, is the first Presidential candidate to comment on the merit system so emphatically at such a time.

"The merit system is plainly to be made a campaign issue by the Republicans," she said.

Favorable action on the La Follettee-O'Mahoney bill, a comprehensive measure to extend the civil service laws, is expected shortly by the federation, she said.

"While we do not agree with all the provisions of the bill, it is a big step toward a better system," was her comment.

To Address Colorado Meet.

Mae Schnurr, assistant to the commissioner and chief of the public relations division of the Bureau of Reclamation, will be one of the honor guests at the annual convention of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers when they meet later in the month at Estes Park, Colo.

Miss Schnurr will represent the Interior Department at the convention and has been asked to address the delegates on Federal work in agricultural engineering.

She joined the Bureau 12 years ago, and has been in the Interior Department for 20 years.

The three-day convention opens on June 22, and Miss Schnurr leaves Washington late next week.

She was made an honorary member of the association a couple of years ago in recognition of the work she has done with the group in helping them organize and promote their projects.

"This is an unusual profession," she said. "Some people might call an agricultural engineer a scientific farmer, except that he is an adviser to farmers and not an operator. He is an expert on the relation of chemistry and crops, and the association boasts that not one of their members is out of a job."

WPA Lodge Joins Protest.

WPA Lodge 139 of the American Federation of Government Employes has joined the fast-accumulating protests of other units against the executive committee of the Central Labor Union for its announcement of its intention to interpret its constitution and that of the American Federation of Labor to exclude all A. F. G. E. lodges from direct representation.

This action was taken last night when WPA Lodge unanimously passed a resolution to this effect. The resolution called for the lodge to instruct its delegates to the Central Labor Union to vote against this and other proposals which restrict the established right of any local union to direct representation in the Central Labor Union.

Resettlement Lodge 206 of the A. F. G. E. is planning a big night next Saturday in celebration of its first anniversary, when a banquet will be held in one of the down-town restaurants.

The lodge's grievance committee reported last night that it had successfully negotiated with Administration officers on overtime and observance of the stated dismissal policy of the Administration granting two weeks' notice and accrued leave. A few infringements of these standards had been brought to the attention of the committee but adjustment was made, restoring dismissed employes to the pay roll where necessary.

The Treasury Department's woman softball team played its first game of the season yesterday on the field near the Reflecting Pool. They competed against the team from the Government Printing Office and their only regret was that their uniforms did not arrive in time for the game.

Breezin' Along.

New York, June 12.

Outside the Shubert executive offices there is a sign reading "Sam and Lee Shubert" . . . Sam has been dead for 20 years, but sentiment retains his billing . . . Legitimate theaters on their billboards, feature indorsements from Percy Hammond, who is dead . . . On Eighth avenue there is a big billboard shouting the originality and merits of the Casino de Paree, heedless of the fact that this expensive place folded up a long time ago . . . The "House of Morgan" sign is still in place, though Helen Morgan quit the place which Harry Kannen built for her, forcing him to shut it down . . . The Congress Restaurant sign says "Lavish Floor Sh——," which is unconscious humor, for creditors sh-shushed this place . . . On West Fifty-fourth, a marquee bills the names of the performers at the Palladium, which flopped . . . Ditto Gus Edwards' Show-window . . . The sign is still there . . . The other day city officials dug up a marker on Third avenue that read: "Four Miles to City Hall," and sent it to the city museum . . . It was the only sign in New York that was on the level, so they tore it down.

"Relatives of Old Folks Raid Homes for Aged" is one of the more amusing yarns in the Bawl Street Journal, annual parody edition prepared by Wall Streeters, and now at hand . . . This is a fanciful story of what happened with the imaginary passage of the Townsend old-age pension bill . . . The reporter describes thousands of relatives storming the homes and dragging their old folks back home with them . . . One old lady refuses to go back home with her insistent relatives . . . She complains bitterly that they will put her in a safety deposit box and clip a $200 coupon off her every month.

"Yukon Pioneers Stake Claims in Vast Empire State Wastes" is an hilarious jibe at Landlord Al Smith . . . J. Edgar Hoover solves the Wall Street Lipstick Case . . . Hoover's G-Men find that the currency smudged by lipstick resulted from female investors who kissed their money good-by before handing it over to the brokers . . . Pithy Perthenalitieth" is a human interview with Herbert Hoover: "Outside there was glorious greenbacked sunshine, and the greenbacked voices of greenback birds. Mr. Hoover, as is his custom, ignored the 'birds'" . . . Irreverent and witty, this Bawl Street Journal, a safety valve for the street of high finance that leads to the river at one end and a graveyard at the other.

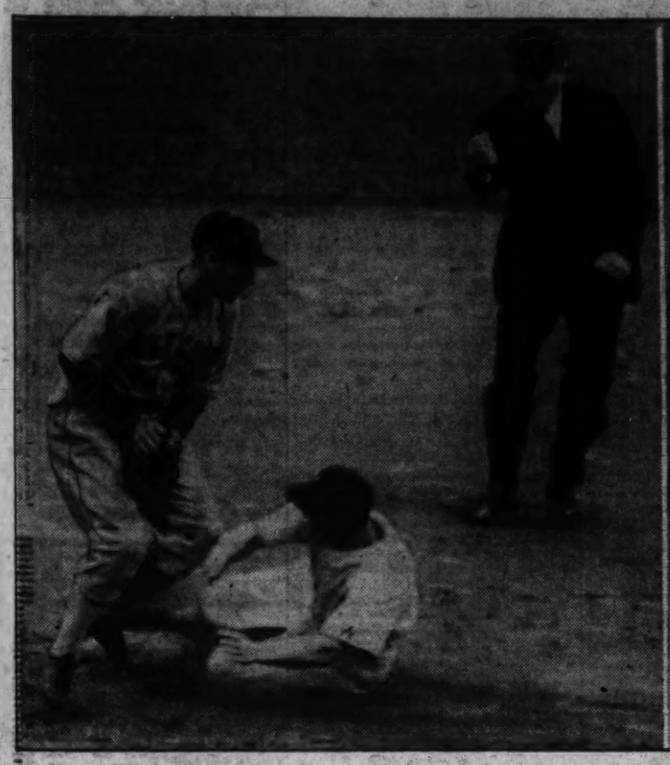
Three Scenes From Jake Powell's Private War With Chicago White Sox at Griffith Stadium



Powell out at second, breaks up a double play in the opening inning by the simple method of grabbing Shortstop Jackie Hayes' foot which he is seen about to clutch.

Powell staggers before going down from the effects of a blow on the neck from a fast ball pitched by Ted Lyons in the second inning after the Sox resolved to "get" the centerfielder.

Powell and First Baseman Bonura (No. 3) advance upon each other in the fifth after Bonura accused Powell of attempting to knock a ball from his mitt. Umpire Basil separated 'em.

Manero's Rally Ties for Lead In Tourney

Sudden Reversal of Form Paces Field in Brock Open Golf Play.

By the Associated Press.

Fonthill, Ontario, June 12.—Tony Manero, of Greensboro, N. C., who has been playing a very ordinary brand of golf since he won the United States open title last week, made a sudden about face today to tie for the lead at the end of 36 holes of the General Brock Open tournament.

Breaking his string of mediocre rounds here and at Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., Tony shot almost perfect golf to fire a par 70 at his rivals in the second round and with a total of 145 shared first place with Craig Wood, the blonde bomber from New York, and Zell Eaton, young Oklahoma City pro.

Despite somewhat better weather than they had for the opening round yesterday, United States and Canadian pros all failed again to better par figures for the Lookout Point course. Wood and Rod Munday, of Santa Rosa, Calif., who led with 70s yesterday, got a 75 and a sloppy 78, to trail the leaders by 3 strokes.

A stroke off the pace came Byron Nelson, young Ridgewood (N. J.) pro, who has been a consistent tournament winner this spring. He added a 72, the day's second best score, to a 74, for a 146 total.

Trailing by 2 strokes at 147 were a quartet of dark horses—Ralph Guldhal, of St. Louis; Paul Jones, of Whittier, Calif.; Stan Hore, of Ottawa, and Bill Kerr, of Toronto.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Yep, yer right about that—we newspapermen certainly meet a lot of interesting people. Take Joe Kuhel for example. Remarkable fellow that Kuhel. He's a card—you can't figure him out. You'd never think it, but he's full of fight—off the ball field, 'S funny how some people are, that way.

We guys in the newspaper business certainly get to know a lot of people, all right. Sometimes we don't get to really know 'em so quick, but we have a way with us.

POVICH.

As I was saying, there's Kuhel for example. Now you take Joe (take him quick), who'd a-thought that the guy was all full of vim and vigor and itchin' to wrap his dukes around somebody's schnozzle. Certainly not the Joe Kuhel we've been watching out there on the ball field now for nigh onto seven years. Not good, old mild-mannered Joe who wouldn't hurt anybody, not even himself—or even strain himself for that matter.

But you never can tell about those guys. When they get mad, you'd better watch out—you 124-pounders. Because there's no holdin' Joe when he gets mad. He got mad at a lot of us baseball writers the other day and broke down a couple of benches tryin' to lay one of his big hams across our physigs.

Joe was sore. Good old Joe was really sore. One of us guys said he made an error when he didn't think he made an error and that was enough to make Joe mad. A rugged individualist, that Kuhel, no kidding. Those other players in the locker room were around there giving Jimmie DeShong the glad hand for that two-hit game he pitched, but Kuhel wasn't, no, sir.

Kuhel was mightily concerned about that error we gave him. Even in the flush of a glorious shut-out victory, Kuhel apparently didn't give a damn about DeShong's swell performance, or the ball game the Nats won. No, sir, what was eating Kuhel was that Kuhel had been given an error on a disputable play, and that was a heluva note. They can't do that to Joe Kuhel and get away with it, even if everything did end happily, 2 to 0, in favor of the Nats.

As I was saying, he's a rugged individualist. He's the kind of a guy that I remember on the Washington Ball Club a few years ago. The kind of a guy who, after Washington had taken a 14-to-1 beating at Detroit, came down to dinner with a smile. It was kinda noticeable, so I asked him why the evident satisfaction in the light of that awful licking the team took.

"Well, I got my two hits, didn't I?" came the answer, and I knew the guy better than I ever knew him before.

This Kuhel is an interesting character, all right. Never a dull moment when he's sore. But of all the guys on the Washington Ball Club who, at various times, have found themselves willing to take a crack at we baseball writers, severally or collectively, it seems to me that this Kuhel had the least excuse. That's one of the things, perhaps, that makes him one of those interesting people.

Why, the guy is an ingrate. For two years we had been surprised at our own decency in laying off Kuhel. For two seasons—1934 and 1935—the fellow was a shoemaker out there on the ball field, both around first base and with the bat, but his uncomplimentary writeups, if laid end to end, wouldn't cover a postage stamp.

Most every other ball player on the team caught it from the press

Seeking Fight, Kuhel Draws $100 Fine

Nats' First Baseman Ired, Threatens Povich, McCann and Stan.

The threat of Joe Kuhel, Nats' first baseman, to take punches at three Washington baseball writers, yesterday cost him a $100 fine levied by Clark C. Griffith, president of the Washington Club.

Griffith summoned the entire Washington team to a meeting before the game with the White Sox, pointed out that the attempted assault was unprovoked and warned all players that any further such incidents would cost 'em "plenty more."

Kuhel created a scene in the Nats' locker room following Thursday's game with the White Sox in which he had been charged with an error by Bob Considine, of the Herald, the official scorer.

Advancing upon Dick McCann, diminutive baseball writer of the Daily News, the big first baseman shouted his contempt of all sports writers in general and drew back his fist to strike McCann, who was seated.

Restrained with difficulty by Manager Bucky Harris who leaped from his locker and wrestled with Kuhel, the first baseman turned upon Francis Stan, baseball writer of the Evening Star, and again drew back his fist.

Pacified and shooed out of the locker room by Harris, Kuhel encountered Sherley Povich, sports editor of The Post, in the parking lot adjacent to the stadium, and attempted to enter Povich's car after again inveighing against sports writers generally.

Griffith, advised that on one previous occasion this season that one of his ball players had taken a punch at a newspaperman travelling with the team, took immediate action and pledged protection to the writers with stiff fines and suspensions, if necessary.

The play which enraged Kuhel occurred on a ball hit by Radcliffe of the White Sox. Radcliffe was ruled safe at first base and Kuhel was charged with an error when it appeared that Umpire Moriarty signaled that the first baseman had taken his foot off the bag. After a conference with Moriarty in which the umpire declared Radcliffe reached the base simultaneously with the ball, the official scoring was reversed to give Radcliffe a hit on the play.

D.C. Men Reach Mid-Atlantic Semifinals

Yoder, Burnett, Win Over Brownell, Caldwell at Baltimore.

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Five Farms Course, Md., June 12. Levi Yoder, of Kenwood, and Volney Burnett, of Indian Spring, today survived the first and second-round matches in the Middle Atlantic golf championship, and will carry the banner of the Nation's Capital into the semifinals tomorrow morning.

Playing in top form, Yeder eliminated blonde little Bobby Brownell, of Manor, 2 and 1 in the morning, and came back with a one-over-par performance in the afternoon to dust Ernie Caldwell, of Hillendale, 1933 champion, 3 and 2.

Burnett, who released some of his finest golf here a few weeks ago to win the Baltimore Country Club invitation tournament, had to travel to the eighteenth green before defeating R. W. Gill, of the host club, one up, but in the afternoon he rolled to a comparatively easy victory over Fred Savage, of Elkridge, 5 and 4.

The other semifinalists are Morton McCarthy, the 230-pound defending title holder from Norfolk, and Spencer Overton, of Rolling Road, hope of the Mounmental City.

Yoder to Meet Overton.

McCarthy, who had only a dismal 77 to show for his qualifying efforts yesterday, was back in the groove today, and put away Ed Lucas, of Baltimore Country Club, 5 and 3, and Don McPhail, of the same club, 4 and 2. For the 31 holes the champion was only 3 over par. He needed par in for a 71 against McPhail this afternoon.

The bespectacled Overton, who won the medal with a 71, eliminated two Washingtonians—Maury Fitzgerald, of Kenwood, 4 and 2, and Billy Dettweiler, of Congressional, 5 and 3.

Tomorrow morning Yoder will engage Overton at 10 o'clock, and five minutes later Burnett will take on McCarthy. Chances of an all-District finals for the afternoon are exceedingly bright inasmuch as both Yoder and Burnett played sound, sure-fire golf in their over matches today.

Burnett hopes to gain revenge for the defeat McCarthy dished out to him in the first round of the National Amateur at Cleveland last year.

Caldwell never had the lead on Yoder, the District golfer went two

Newsom Gives 5 Hits As Nats Top Sox, 6-0

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Coincident with a series of private battles between Outfielder Jake Powell and assorted members of the White Sox, the Nats won another ball game yesterday.

Big Buck Newsom emerged from the game with a 6-0, five-hit victory to show for his pitching efforts, the Nats emerged with a clear claim to fourth place, the White Sox collected their second successive shutout defeat and Powell collected a pain in the neck.

The inning-by-inning account of the Powell-White Sox encounter:

First inning—Powell singled to left and is out at second when Piet tosses Lewis' grounder to Shortstop Jackie Hayes. Attempting to break up a double play, Powell grabs Hayes' foot and succeeds in making the throw late. Chicago infielders protest to Umpire Kolls who sees nothing wrong. But Hayes is heard to say "We'll get him."

Second inning—Powell at bat. They get Powell. Pitcher Ted Lyons throws a suspicious-looking pitch high and inside and it hits Powell in the back of the neck. Powell staggers, goes to one knee, gets up, falls again, gets up and limps to first base, ruefully rubbing his sore neck.

Brawl Is Prevented.

Fifth inning—Powell at bat. Powell lays down a sacrifice bunt and is out at first on Lyons' throw to Bonura, but not without a struggle. Powell lashes out with his left arm in what appears to be a suspicious-looking attempt to bat the ball out of Bonura's mit and Bonura gets mad. Bonura raises a warning finger at Powell and Powell advances to inquire whether Bonura wants to make something out of it. Bonura does and they stand chin to chin as a beautiful brawl simmers, but Umpire Basil shoos Powell back to the dugout.

The Nats and White Sox had carried bad blood into the game from the outset. Especially peeved was Powell against Second Baseman Tony Piet who on the Nats' last visit to Chicago removed Cliff Bolton from the line-up for three weeks with a vicious charge into home plate. But anybody in a Chi-

Yankees Down Detroit, Add To Lead

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 12.—In their second straight battle of extra-base blows, the Yankees clubbed the Detroit Tigers, 9 to 6, today, to stretch their American League lead to three games over the idle Boston Red Sox.

Charley Ruffing, chalking up his seventh win against five losses for the Yanks, gave out only six hits, but half of them were for extra bases, including homers by Al Simmons and Bill Rogell.

Germany Tops Irish in Net Cup Play

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 12.—Germany virtually assured itself a berth in the finals of the European zone Davis Cup tennis competition today when it swept the opening two matches of its semifinal round tie with Ireland.

Baron Gottfried von Cramm, one of Europe's greatest players, opened the series with an easy 6—1, 6—2, 6—3 victory over George Lyttleton Rogers. Henner Henkel completed the rout with a 6—1, 8—6, 6—2 victory over T. G. McVeach.

Doubles will be played tomorrow with today's singles pairings reversed on Sunday. Germany needs only one more victory to advance into the final round against the winner of the Austria-Yugoslavia series.

Winner of the European zone—Germany is favored—will meet Austria, North American zone winner, for the right to challenge England, the cup defender.

Ali Baba Loses to Dave Levin on Foul Tactcs

Newark, N. J., June 12 (U.P.).—The world's heavyweight wrestling title tonight was claimed by Dave Levin, of Jamaica, N. Y., who was awarded the referee's decision over Ali Baba, champion from Detroit, on a foul.

At the 20-minute mark in their bout at Meadowbrook Field tonight Ali raised himself up on the top ropes and kicked Levin unconscious. He was taken to City Hospital.

Trailing, 2-1, U. S. Needs 3 Of 4 Matches To Keep Cup

Kay Stammers, British Star, Defeats Helen Jacobs, 12–10, 6–1.

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, England, June 12.—America's Wightman Cup tennis girls set themselves a terrific task in defense of the 14-year-old international trophy today as they lost both opening singles matches and salvaged only the doubles to trail England, 2 to 1.

To prevent the cup returning to England after five years, the quartet of Helen Jacobs, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, Mrs. John Van Ryn and Caroline Babcock faced the necessity of winning three of the remaining four matches tomorrow.

In the face of impressive victories by the left-handed Kay Stammers, 12—10, 6—1, over Miss Jacobs, and Dorothy Round, former Wimbledon champion, 6—3, 6—4, over Mrs. Fabyan, it looked like almost asking too much, but Miss Jacobs, the team captain, wasn't ready to concede anything.

"After watching Caroline and 'Midge' (Mrs. Van Ryn) save that doubles match I feel like we might do almost anything tomorrow," said Miss Jacobs.

Doubles Team Rallies.

At that, the thrilling comeback of the second American doubles team, after it trailed 0-3 in the final set, was enough to inspire any team. Miss Babcock and Mrs. Van Ryn rallied to beat Nancy Lyle and Evelyn Dearman, 6—2, 1—6, 6—3.

Miss Babcock, her black hair matching the deep gloom over the center court, as she and her partner fought courageously to stave off a rout, emerged the American heroine of the day. The British pair, never previously beaten in cup competition, wilted under the fury of the Californian's play in the last six games.

The defeat of Miss Jacobs, the four-time American champion, could be charged almost equally to Miss Stammers' sizzling southpaw shots and a chilling rain which interrupted play for half an hour at the end of the twenty-first game of the first set—the longest in 14 years of cup play.

It was Miss Jacobs' misfortune to serve first when play finally was resumed. Not permitted to take any practice shots, she promptly proceeded to deal a double-fault which paved the way for the loss of the game and the set.

The Fabyan-Round match was contrastingly dull. Mrs. Fabyan, a brilliant volleyer, surprised onlookers by trying to outsteady the machine-like Miss Round from the baseline.

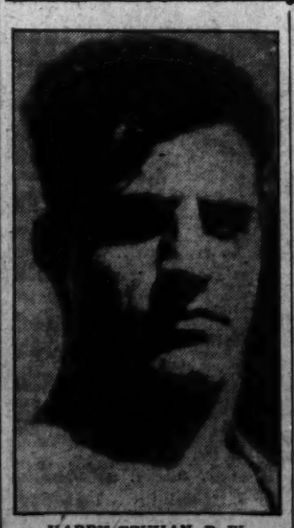
Handsome Harry Transformed Into a Hairless Horror



HARRY EZIKIAN, B. W. (before wrestling).

Way back about 1922 a portion of the United States fleet steamed into the harbor at Smyrna, which was in the process of being burnt by the Turks.

A wiry, but handsome kid answering to the name of Harry Ezikian, who was somewhat of an Armenian refugee or starving Armenian, became very much entranced by the uniforms of Uncle Samuel's gobs. Wherever you found a gob, there you found Harry, and vice versa.

Before long there sprang up a great attachment between the fleet and little Harry. He adopted the fleet—and the fleet adopted him as a mascot. He was taken back to the States and immediately set about getting his citizenship papers.

Harry wanted his papers not for the purpose of setting up in business, but for a bigger and better purpose. He wanted to join the Navy. Immediately he had been officially accepted as a citizen, he joined the Navy—and peace and contentment dominated his soul.

Navy food and Navy care soon caused him to blossom into a very big fellow. The additional weight on his wiry frame soon made him a prodigiously strong person. He developed into a weight-lifting

Love Lost Wins Charles Town Feature; Double Returns $115

Banana Pays $24 Mutuel In Second

Black Sweep Worth $21 in First; Feature Returns $16.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 12.—Love Lost, another of those mysterious horses shipped here from Cuba, exhibited a lot of class in winning the Bunker Hill purse, the day's feature race. Ridden by Jockey G. Terhune, who has hardly been able to get out of his own way here for several days, Love Lost was a decisive last in the opening sirteentn. However, when pay off time arrived, there was a $16.40 mutuel awaiting those with the proper piece of pasteboard.

Love Lost, a 4-year-old filly with the mud running ability of her sire, Bud Lerner, defeated the favored Mazyniata by a half length. Four lengths farther back came Canteret. My Sis broke down after a furlong and was pulled up. The crowd backed Mazyniata as if the race had already been run. It was another of the popular Palumbo mounts and the little Italian-American rode a hard, but futile race. Love Lost gained a world of ground by hugging the pole entering the stretch.

The daily doublers in the crowd of 4,000 saw a $115.20 figure hoisted on the combination of Dixie Bee and Banana.

Black Sweep Wins First.

Bounding out of No. 1 stall gate, Black Sweep was never headed in the first race. The son of Sweep By, ridden by Jockey Pikor, shook off Dress Lightly after a half and then had to be ridden out to stave off the closing rushes of Counsellor Billy and Haymulus. The latter might have been the winner had not Black Sweep swung over in his path in the stretch. Black Sweep was overlooked in the betting and paid a $21.40 mutuel.

"Yes, we didn't have no bananas"—that's what the majority of the fans here were singing after the second race. A frisky filly named Banana galloped through the mud to triumph over Bright Girl and pay a $24 mutuel.

Dixie Bee, with Jockey W. Hilley up, made the Palumbo bettors frown in the third race. He broke Dixie Bee on top and she toyed with Bromide, Palumbo's mount, which was second in the field of five. Dixie Bee was a hot second choice at a $5.80 mutuel.

Star Turn, a paddock tip and making his first start of the year, bounced off with the fourth race, named the Point of Rocks, in honor of the nearby Maryland town. Star Turn was capably ridden by W. Hilly and it was the gelding's maiden victory. The winner paid $10.80 after his odds dwindled steadily.

Jockey Lou Pikor made it a saddle "triple" for the day by riding the last two winners, Egeon and Dearzin, both for Owner R. C. Utz.

Jockey Palumbo suffered a shut-out for the day.

BLACK SWEEP assumed command at once, shook off DRESS LIGHTLY swinging for the stretch to open a long lead, but had to be shaken up and just lasted. COUNSELLOR BILLY, outrun to the far turn, came through on the rail and hung slightly at the end. HAYMULUS, forwardly placed from the start, was blocked by winner in stretch run and finished gamely. WRACKESS closed some ground in the late stages. MISS JOYOUS had early speed. DRESS LIGHTLY dwelt slightly at the break, was rushed into contention, but stopped when whipped.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:05½. Off at 3:07. Winner, D. F. Wageley's ch. f. (3), by Bracadale or Timemaker—Urbana. Trained by H. W. Wageley. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:24 3-5.

AMBDEL	(Palumbo)	110	7	7	7	7	7	7	4.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BANANA, $24.00, $8.20, $4.20; BRIGHT GIRL, $4.60, $3.40; GEE SHARP, $4.00.

BANANA, rushed into contention in the opening furlong, pressed the pace of RUBANS PET to the stretch, assumed command and was shaken up to hold BRIGHT GIRL safe. The latter, probably the best, was forwardly placed from the beginning, but had to be taken up on the swing for the stretch and closed gamely. GEE SHARP, first away, dropped out of it and came again to show a good effort. RUBANS PET set the pace and tired under hustling tactics. MARSE LIN went evenly. The others were outrun.

THIRD RACE—About 5 furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:34½. Off at 3:38½. Winner, Mrs. E. Brining's br. m. (5), by Carlaris—Honey Pot. Trained by E. Brining. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:05 2-5.

GOLD TOKEN	(Pikor)	108	3	4	4^{1}	5	5	5.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DIXIE BEE, $5.80, $2.80, $2.60; BROMIDE, $2.40, $2.60; ADA CRUZ, $4.00.

DIXIE BEE, quickest to begin, opened a long lead going to the far turn, saved ground thereafter and was being taken in hand through the stretch. BROMIDE followed the pace all the way and was second best. ADA CRUZ showed a good effort, but could not threaten. LITTLE HURD and GOLD TOKEN were outrun.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $115.20.

FOURTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400. The Point of Rocks. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:08. Off at 4:10. Winner, George & Crandel's blk. g. (4), by Prince of Wales—Melting Star. Trained by A. Gibson. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:53.

VENNIE H.	(Terhune)	111	4	7	7	7	7	36.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR TURN, $10.80, $5.00, $3.40; CLEAR KNIGHT, $4.40, $2.80; SCUDDER, $3.60.

STAR TURN took the lead at the break, was rated along when displaced by CLEAR KNIGHT approaching the first turn, rallied when placed to drive and was going away at the end. CLEAR KNIGHT, off in a tangle, was rushed to the front on the inside, could not resist the winner, but closed gamely. SCUDDER could not threaten at any stage. SILVER ARCH went well. The others were not factors.

FIFTH RACE—About 5 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. The Bunker Hill. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:38. Off at 4:38½. Winner, A. C. Yzquierdo's ch. f. (4), by Bud Lerner—Decree. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:04 3-5.

GOLDEN DOT	(Shanks)	112	1	5	$4^{1½}$	5	5	21.40
MY SIS	(Pikor)	109	3	4	Broke down			6.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LOVE LOST, $16.40, $7.40, $4.00; MAZYNIATA, $3.60, $2.60; CANTERET, $2.40.

LOVE LOST, allowed to settle into best stride, came through a gap on the rail entering the stretch and withstood punishment to hold MAZYNIATA safe in the final stages. CANTERET missed her footing at the start, was rushed to the pace, but faltered in the final furlong. TWENTY THREE could not keep up. GOLDEN DOT was outrun. MY SIS broke down after a furlong.

SIXTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. The Inwood. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:04. Off at 5:04½. Winner, R. C. Utz's ch. m. (4), by Archaic—Queen of the Sea. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:23 2-5.

BIG TONEY	(Shanks)	120	4	4	4^{1}	4½	5	5	9.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EGEON, $5.40, $3.40, $2.60; NO MISTAKE, $6.20, $3.40; RED LABEL, $3.00.

EGEON saved ground when outrun going to the backstretch, came up with a rush along the rail and rallied under punishment after being headed by RED LABEL midway of the stretch. NO MISTAKE, close up during the first eighth, dropped back and then came again under whipping and just missed. RED LABEL, shuffled to last going into the far turn, saved ground entering the stretch, but hung after gaining the lead. LARRY M. set a good pace, but faltered. BIG TONEY raced very wide all the way and can do better.

SEVENTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:30½. Off at 5:32. Winner, R. C. Utz's b. g. (5), by Cudgel—Dearinez. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:32 3-5.

THUNDERLEE	(Wisner)	115½	5	7	7	Pulled up			44.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DEARZIN, $4.20, $2.80, $2.40; DONEE, $3.20, $2.60; JACK LOW, $3.00.

DEARZIN, steadied along while within striking distance of the leaders, moved up on the outside to take command entering the stretch and, under a drive, held sway to the end. DONEE was forced to race on the outside of DEARZIN, was carried slightly wide and came with excellent courage at the end. JACK LOW was hard urged running with FALMOUTH BELLE and closed willingly. SIEMPRE closed some ground in the late stages. FALMOUTH BELLE quit after setting the pace.

At the Post...

Dear Al: Charles Town, June 12.

The fact that this track has seven races some days and eight races on other days is now firmly impressed in the mind of one Washington turf fan. He visited the track Tuesday and had an exceptionally good day. He combined celebrating with winning and had a good bet on the seventh race. He decided to send it all back on the eighth race. While he drank his umpteenth bottle of beer he did not notice that the crowd was thinning out or that the special train was sending out its warning whistle. When he discovered that there was no eighth race for the day, he decided to walk down to the train. The train had left. So our hero had to find transportation to Washington. He finally made connections on a milk truck, but he got back so late that he missed the train on the way to the track the next day. This was not Clocker Mike.

BILL.

First race—Small Change, with Sammy Palumbo to do the riding, seems auspiciously placed here. Oakhurst has early speed and would be dangerous. June G. and Radial hold some chance.

Second race—Energetic Lady, making her first start for the Bonds, should find this field to her liking. Roquepine gets in light and and is on the improve. Royal Folly, recent winner, has a fighting chance.

Third race—I'm going to disregard the horses below the eight due to start here. I prefer Topsie H. in the field. Thistle Flit may have needed that last. Rock Spray for the show end.

Fourth race—Lady Penny showed to advantage at Hagerstown and should take care of this sort of company. Dun Mist and White Sweets are dangerous. All Forgiven is said to be speedy and may take it all.

Fifth race—Dr. Jillson, despite top weight, gets the call here. He needs only to make one of his flying starts to score. Red Riot and Miss Symphony for the place and show awards.

Sixth race—I'll take Palumbo in this race. He will ride either Miss Tiptoe or Whiskora. Dearzin and Canteret hold some chance.

Seventh race—Brad has had his rest and may be ready to show a real race. Pauline H. likes the route. Barney Sexton for the show.

Eighth race—Bav ran an improved race last out and may be the winner here. I'm going to string along. McDonald H. and Donate for the second and third money.

Best bet—Dr. Jillson.

1—Small Change, Parade On, June G.
2—Gay Lass, Energetic Lady, Skyride.
3—Topsy H., Rockspray, Aufoin.
4—Lady Penny, White Sweets, Dunmist.

Pirates Down Giants, Take 6th in Row

New Yorkers Lose Fourth Straight, 3 to 2; Shulte Brubaker Heroes.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, June 12.—The Pirates chalked up their sixth straight victory today, nosing out the New York Giants, 3 to 2, in the last half of the ninth inning.

The loss for the Giants was the fourth straight and snapped Carl Hubbell's winning streak of five. The win kept the Pirates within a few percentage points of the second place Chicago Cubs, who defeated the Boston Bees.

Fred Schulte, who had four hits, and Bill Brubaker were heroes, the former singling the winning run across with two out in the ninth, after Brubaker had scored Paul Waner with the tying tally in the eighth.

Mrs. Meckley to Defend Md. Golf Title Against Mrs. Walper

Local Rivals Play Today For Title

Mrs. Meckley and Mrs. Walker Victors in Thrilling Play.

Victims are Mrs. Hurst and Mrs. Bell; Champion Is Favorite.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Suburban Country Club, Pikesville, Md., June 12.—For the second consecutive year, two Washington women will meet in the finals of the Maryland State golf championship.

Tomorrow at 2 p. m. Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, defending titleholder, will face Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood, with the champion favored to repeat.

Mrs. Meckley, who has had nine days of competitive golf in the last two weeks, had a narrow escape from defeat today.

By 1 up she won from Mrs. M. Louise Bell, unattached Baltimore golfer, former Middle Atlantic champion, after making a courageous and thrilling finish.

Tight Battle.

Mrs. Walper, whose husband is a professional instructor at a Bethesda driving range, also had a tight battle eliminating Mrs. W. B. Hurst, jr., of Elkridge, 2 and 1.

The strain of too much tournament golf almost told on the medalist, Mrs. Meckley. One up at the turn, Mrs. Meckley dropped the tenth when Mrs. Bell sank a 15-footer for a par 4, took the eleventh and the thirteenth to become 2 up.

Then Mrs. Meckley dropped three holes in a row—the fourteenth, where she dubbed her third; the fifteenth, where she missed her approach, losing to par golf, and the sixteenth, a short one, where she three-putted.

The gallery, made up of Baltimoreans, was just about ready to count the champion out after she overshot the seventeenth, a 147-yarder, and Mrs. Bell played a beautiful tee shot 30 feet past the pin.

Fine Recovery.

Standing in deep rough back of the green, Mrs. Meckley anchored her second 3 inches from the pin. This obviously rattled Mrs. Bell, who partially stymied herself on her approach putt, and hit the champion's ball on her try for a 3½, losing the hole.

The match even, Mrs. Meckley played two grand shots to the eighteenth, while Mrs. Bell, short in 2, made a poor approach. Mrs. Meckley won the hole with a par 4 to a 5. Both scored 83s.

Mrs. Walper needed par in for an 84 when she closed out Mrs. Hurst on the seventeenth green.

Mrs. Walper dropped the first two holes to 3s, but won three of the next seven holes to reach the turn all even. She lost the eleventh, won the twelfth and fourteenth and put over the killing blow with a 4 on the sixteenth.

Baltimore, June 12.—Baltimore City athletes again bested the cream of the State's scholastic track and field stars and with a total of 59 points ran away with the twenty-second annual State Olympiad yesterday at the City Stadium. Baltimore County, in second place, won the Sun Trophy for the highest county school total.

Prince George and Montgomery counties were well accounted for, finishing in sixth and ninth places, respectively. The Prince George lads were holding down third place until the last four events, in which they were scoreless and pushed down to sixth.

Promptly at 2 p. m., prominent city and P. A. L. officials, headed by the Maryland Training School Band and followed by over 1,000 athletes, marched around the expansive field and after an address by Thomas C. Ferguson eulogizing the late Dr. Burdick, originator of the State field meet, the events were under way.

Only one existing State record was broken in the 36 events, but that one staved off the bid of Gene Ochsenreiter, of Rockville High School, for victory in the 880-yard run, and forced the Montgomery County star to accept second place, despite a record-equaling performance. Mason Chronister, of Baltimore City, broke the record standing since 1924, when he ran the distance in 2 minutes 2 4-5 seconds.

Mizell Brothers.

The Mizell brothers, of Kensington, accounted for five of Montgomery's points, Fred placing second in the junior running broad jump and Russell third in the 60-yard dash. Rockville's relay team ran fourth in the 1640 senior relay in competition for the Junior Chamber of Commerce trophy. Baltimore City won the permanent cup.

Jimmy Henderson, of Blair, making his third State appearance, placed third in the 440-yard run, after running third in his heat. His exceptional time of 52 seconds, however, was better than the winning times in the other heats.

The little fellows dodge ball team started the Prince George athletes off to their strongest bid in recent years, placing second to Frederick County, losing 13 to 10, and accounting for 6 points in one of the only two morning events. Charlie Betchtold won the 95-pound class hop, step and jump, scoring the only victory of the day for the local athletes. Jimmy McGregor, in the broad jump, and Nat Mostow in the shot, were the only senior scorers for the county.

Mt. Vernon M. E.'s Team Takes Lead

Mount Vernon M. E. Church went into first place in the Washington Church League of the Post Sandlot Association yesterday by nosing out Metropolitan Baptist, 8 to 7. Homers by Fletcher and Pizza won the ball game for Mount Vernon, which won its third victory in four starts, staving off a ninth-inning rally by the Baptists which netted two runs.

Newsom Gives Chisox 5 Hits To Win, 6-0

Powell Worsted in Feud With Sox; Griffs Now Near 3d Place.

cago uniform was fair game for Powell, evidently.

Newsom's five-hit triumph, following hard on Jimmy DeShong's two-hit victory over the White Sox on Thursday served to move the Nats to within whispering distance of third place. Only a single percentage point now separates Washington from the third place berth held by Cleveland which idled yesterday.

To Red Kress and Ossie Bluege, Bashful Buck is indebted for the consummation of his shut-out dreams. This pair of veterans, roaming far and wide over the infield, came up with four double plays that extricated Newsom from every threat of the White Sox to score.

The Nats didn't tarry long with Ancient Ted Lyons. Powell began proceedings in the first inning with the first of the Nats' 12 hits and with one out Cecil Travis rapped a double to right that scored him. The 1-to-0 score leaped to 3 to 0 when Johnny Stone whanged his fourth home run of the season over the rightfield wall.

It was 4 to 0 after the figth, when Newsom himself contributed the first of his two singles and eventually scored on Buddy Lewis' single to center, and it was 6 to 0 after the seventh, when Newsom again led off with a single. It was the first of four successive hits against Lyons. Powell followed with a single to center, Lewis beat out a bunt to Dykes, and Travis slammed a single to left.

Newsom turned back a White Sox threat in the first inning after Radcliffe led off the game with a single, to left. He was wiped out at home when he tried to score from third on Bonura's grounder to Lewis.

In five of the first seven innings the first batter to face Newsom reached base, but in four of those innings Kress and Bluege collaborated on ground balls to convert 'em into sensational double plays that should have discouraged the Sox, even if they didn't.

McColl Succeeds Milan at 'Nouga

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 12 (AP).—Physically unable to carry on as manager of the Chattanooga Lookouts, the veteran Clyde Milan today yielded the reins and will return to his Clarksville, Tex., home to recuperate from a stomach ailment.

In announcing that Milan, former manager of the Washington Senators was unable to continue as pilot, President Joe Engel said Alex McColl, veteran pitcher, would be placed in charge of the club.

Milan's retirement is only temporary, it was stated. He expects to return to the club late in June or early in July. McColl is slated to make his debut as a manager tonight when he leads the Lookouts against Little Rock in the opener of a four-game series.

champion, of all things, and from that it was but a short step to wrestling.

From the Navy, Harry went into the movies. He played the part of a gorilla in the Charles Laughton horror masterpiece, "Island of Lost Souls." He also played a tough guy in "Rackety-Rax." Then came the debut in the ranks of professional wrestling.

Becoming a professional wrestler was not as easy as it sounds. First of all they made Harry grow a gruesome mustache. That was bad enough, but they then shaved off his curly locks. This completed the picture of a big, bad wrestler, but those who pull the strings on the mat racket were not satisfied.

They changed Harry Ezikian, the Armenian who, as a lad had fled from the Turks, into Ali Baba, the Terrible Turk! As such, Ezikian has won fame and fortune and a leg on the heavyweight wrestling title. All at the expense of his hair, his beauty—and his nationality.

What price glory?

Commissioners Win on Lacy's One-Hit Effort

The D. C. Commissioners tightened their hold on second place in the U. S. Government League of the Post Sandlot Association yesterday as Pitcher Art Lacy turned back Department of Treasury with one hit to win a 10-3 victory.

The Commissioners pounded three Treasury pitchers for a dozen hits, including a home run by Buscher in the fourth inning with one on. The only hit off Lacy was a double by Lem Owen in the sixth inning.

D. C., Norfolk Teams Reach Net Finals

Local Squad Scores, 8-0, Over Baltimore in Hotchkiss Play.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., June 12.—Washington and Norfolk swept into the finals of the Hotchkiss Cup Tennis series here today with the loss of only one match. Washington scored an 8-0 victory over Baltimore, defending champion. Norfolk defeated Richmond, 8-1, Miller of the visitors, defeating Hughes for the only triumph of defeated teams today.

Washington was seen as a heavy favorite to defeat Norfolk tomorrow for the cup. They won in straight sets over Baltimore, only one match going to deuce, Willis' 7—5, 6—0 victory over Hebner. Norfolk had to fight all the way to eliminate Richmond, but pulled out in each case except when Miller opened the afternoon by defeating Hughes, 7—5, 6—3. Baltimore has won the cup eight times and Washington, seven.

Washington-Baltimore.

Singles—Dooley Mitchell defeated Howard, 6—3, 6—2; Hugh Lynch defeated Rawls, 6—2, 6—4; Tony Latona defeated Magee, 6—4, 6—0; Tom Markey defeated Page, 6—0, 6—0; Rickey Willis defeated Hebner, 7—5, 6—0; Lieut. S. R. Robinson defeated Jacobsen, 6—2, 6—3.

Doubles—Markey and Mitchell defeated Howard and Rawls, 6—3, 6—4; Lynch and Mitchell defeated Magee and Jacobsen, 6—0, 8—6; Robinson and Rutley defeated Roberts and Wilson, 6—0, 6—3.

Norfolk-Richmond.

Singles—Miller (R.) defeated Hughes, 7—5, 6—3; Johns defeated Sloan, 8—6, 6—2; Seidel defeated Sydnor, 6—3, 6—2; Peake defeated Spicer, 7—5, 6—2; Meneses defeated Valentine, 2—6, 6—4, 6—3; Butler defeated English, 6—4, 6—8, 6—2.

Doubles—Penzold and Hughes defeated Miller and Sloan, 6—4, 5—7, 6—0; Peake and Butler defeated English and Sydnor, 6—1, 6—2; Riday and Jordan defeated Spicer and Valentine, 6—3, default in second.

Pitt, Riegel Lose In Virginia Golf

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., June 12.—Washington's hope for a champion in the Country Club of Virginia invitation tournament was shattered today when George Morgan, jr., turned on a burst of brilliant sub-par golf that subdued Harry Pitt in the quarter-finals, 6 and 5.

In the feature match of the day, Jack Munger, of Dallas, defeated Bobby Riegel, Richmond, Southern amateur champion, 4 and 2, to enter the finals. Riegel defeated Ed Gravely, Richmond youngster, 4 and 3, and Munger eliminated Richmond Gray in earlier rounds.

Munger will meet Clark Lea, Richmond high school boy, who defeated John Read, 1 up, and Morgan to enter the finals.

Nat'l Savings Tops Hamilton Nine, 12-1

National Savings took undisputed possession of first place in the Bankers League of the Post Sandlot Association yesterday by trouncing Hamilton Bank, 12 to 1, as Hibbs was giving National Metropolitan a 9-6 defeat. Savings was tied with the Metros prior to yesterday. The former has now won nine games in ten starts and National Metropolitan has won eight in ten starts.

Western High School to Lose 25 Star Athletes by Graduation

By John R. Vosburgh.

Western High's athletic loss by graduation next week appears to be more or less clear gain for the sports future of several eminent institutions of higher learning.

A total of 25 athletes of the Big Red will be bidding adieu Wednesday to the Georgetown school. And simultaneously such halls of knowledge as Dartmouth, West Point, Georgetown, Maryland, Princeton, et al may possibly be congratulating themselves that some of these young men will matriculate at their respective institutions, later to carry the school's colors to intercollegiate glory.

Incidentally, none of Western's teams will be exactly crippled by the sheepskin ceremony this year. Football will suffer the most with nine regulars getting their diplomas, but Coach Dan Ahearn has about that number of experienced men all set to step into action.

Basketball loses only two first-stringers and baseball only four, thereby making Western the favorite to win the diamond crown again next year.

Several of the Western graduates are virtually labeled as certain college stars of the future. Capt. Bill Shelton, of the football team, a fighting lineman, is going to Dartmouth in the fall and it will be no surprise if he is wearing a Big Green first-string uniform by the time he is a sophomore.

Johnny Hatch, brilliant Western quarterback, is going to season himself a bit more by going to prep school before entering West Point.

Bill Edmonston, Western's three-sport star and All-High leading hitter, is reported to have a scholarship to Maryland safely stowed away and Ed Lloyd, All-High tackle is lined up just as assuredly for Georgetown.

Herb Frawley, Western halfback, like Hatch, is going to prep for West Point while Brud Saum, elusive halfback, is headed for Maryland. Paul Borden, Western end, and basketball and baseball regular, is tentatively headed for Devitt Prep, also for further seasoning.

Harry Wells of the basketball team is tentatively headed for Gorge Washington, but his scholarly teammate, Dick May, is going to Andover Academey to prepare for Princeton.

Of the baseball players, first baseman, Henry Doyle is all set to go to Harvard to take up medicine and substitute Rafael Cabrera will go back to his native Cuba to study law at the University of Havana.

Billy Shea, twice winner of The Post Interscholastic Golf Trophy, is reported to be all lined up by Georgetown, and Gene Owens, tennis star, will prep for Princeton. Ben Stiller is thinking of prepping for West Point, while Elwood Berkeley, another golfer, leans toward Dartmouth.

Jim Willis, of the track team will go to V. M. I., but Leaton Kushman, all-high pitcher, is not exactly sure of his next step.

The graduating athletes:

Welsh Is Victor In New England Net Play Upset

West Hartford, Conn., June 12 (U.P.).—Bernard (Barney) Welsh, of Rockville, Md., a newcomer to big-time tennis, scored a startling upset in the semifinals of the New England tennis tournament today by eliminating J. Gilbert Hall, of Orange, N. J., 6—1, 6—2.

Welsh will meet William Reese, of Atlanta, in the finals of the tournament tomorrow. Reese gained the final round by defeating Frank Rericha, of the University of North Carolina, 6—2, 6—4.

Welsh engineered his upset with convincing dispatch. Holder of the National Public Parks championship, the West Virginia championship, the District of Columbia championship and the Pennsylvania State title, Welsh proceeded to completely outclass the New Jersey veteran, who was the fourteenth ranking player of the country last year.

Govt. Swim League To Stage Carnival

The popularity of swimming as a competitive sport which has recently swept through the Government bureaus has finally culminated in the formation of an interdepartmental water polo and swimming league. Four big meets will be held during the summer for Government swimmers.

The opening carnival was slated for July 9. The next event is tentatively slated for July 29, another for August 20 and a fourth for September 10. All of the Federal departments and a number of lesser divisions will be represented by teams.

SaraMoore, City Titlist, Loses In Net Play

Edith Clarke Wins, 6—3, 4—6, 6—3, to Go Into Final Round.

Stubborn Sara Moore relinquished her City of Washington women's tennis championship yesterday at the Edgemoor Club with a reluctance which caused Miss Edith Clarke, the No. 1 seeded favorite, the utmost inconvenience. In order to get into the final round, Miss Clarke had to battle her persistent rival to scores of 6—3, 4—6, 6—3, before justifying her seeded position.

Miss Clarke will meet either Mary Cootes, of Alexandria, or Mrs. Margaret Robinson in the finals tomorrow at 11 a. m. In what should prove an embattled semifinal, Miss Cootes and Mrs. Robinson will collide today at 2 p. m.

Miss Cootes was given unexpected difficulty in the first set of her quarter-final match with Mary Ryan, but finally pulled through to win, 7—5, 6—1.

The Clarke-Moore encounter found Miss Moore, the defending champion, displaying one of the most courageous battles of her hard-fought tennis career. The match started with the players breaking even in the first six games as games went against service.

The crucial point of the match came with Miss Clarke leading, 4—3, and 30-all, when she forced Miss Moore into two successive errors to take the game and then run out the match.

As some indication of the quality of the match, 12 of the 28 games went to deuce, the fourth game of the first set being deuced ten times before Miss Moore won it.

Miss Ryan led Miss Cootes 4—3 as they resumed play after Thursday's postponement. She went to a lead of 5—3 over the ranking player of the District, but Miss Cootes suddenly rallied strongly to take a love game and then deuce the set after a hard-fought game in which Miss Ryan had set point. In the last two games of the set, Miss Ryan scored but two points.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

at various times, but somehow, we felt kindly with Kuhel. He had been a great ball player in 1933 when he helped Washington to the pennant with his .323 average. And that broken leg of his was holding his back in '34 and '35, so we didn't want to be too hard on the fellow. We felt kinda nice about the way we were treating him.

But do you think the guy ever took time out to voice a syllable of appreciation? Hell, no. Not Joe Kuhel. But that was all right, too. The shock of any such utterance would probably have been fatal to this department anyway. We learn not to expect that from the little tin athletes.

Anyway, as I said, we laid off Kuhel for two years when he was an anchor about the necks of Managers Joe Cronin and Bucky Harris. You can't very well get in the first division with a first baseman who hits .262. But not a crack was made against Kuhel. What I want to know is, though, who made that crack about letting sleeping dogs lie.

Olympic Hopefuls in Meet Today

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, June 12 (AP).—The first all-star preview of Uncle Sam's olympic hopefuls, featuring free admission and a return mile race for the celebrated "big three," Glenn Cunningham, Gene Venzke and Bill Bonthron, takes place at Princeton's Palmer stadium late tomorrow afternoon.

The occasion is Princeton's third annual invitation track and field meet. It marks the first time on record an athletic attraction of its caliber, barring crew races, has arbitrarily been conducted on a non-profit basis, but it is apparently going to be a huge success, even without the customary gate receipts.

Upward of 45,000 tickets have been distributed on a service-charge basis of 15 cents each. This is only 5,000 short of the stadium's capacity. The remainder will be available on a first-come-first-served basis tomorrow.

The rewards for this noble gesture in discarding a potential "gate" of at least $40,000 may be forthcoming in stellar performances. Seven events, starting at 4 p. m. (Eastern Standard time) will bring together a hand-picked group of champions and record-smashers from East and West, North and South.

The renewal of the Cunningham-Bonthron-Venzke rivalry is the headliner, but the trio is unlikely, for several reasons, to menace the mile mark of 4:06.7 set two years ago by Cunningham at Princeton. Primarily, they have their eyes on the final Olympic trials, still a month off. Bonthron, short of competition, isn't likely to challenge either Glenn or Gene.

To prevent any chance of a fiasco, such as marked Cunningham's victory in the last and slowest mile ever run on the big time, the management has named two added starters in Manhattan's Bill Ray and Detroit's Bill Daly.

The 440-yard run should be the big thriller. It brings together, for the first time, Eddie O'Brien, of Syracuse, and Ray Ellinwood, Chicago sophomore, both are undefeated this year, but they will be strongly challenged by Jimmy Luvalle, U. C. L. A. star, who turned in a sensational time trial yesterday. O'Brien started his winning streak in this event last June, beating Luvalle, among others.

Cost of Living Lifted in May By Food, Rents

Average Is 18.3% Above Low but 14.5% Under 1929.

New York, June 12.—The cost of living of wage earners oin the United States again advanced, rising 0.4 per cent from April to May, according to the National Industrial Conference Board. The rise was due to substantial increases in food prices and rents. Clothing prices, coal prices, and the cost of sundries, on the other hand, declined. Living costs in May of this year were 2.1 per cent higher than in May of last year, 18.3 per cent higher than in April, 1933, the low point during the depression, but 14.5 per cent lower than in May, 1929.

Rents rose 1.6 per cent from April to May, bringing them 10.8 per cent above their level of May, 1935, 23.0 per cent above that of January, 1934, the low point, but still 16.3 per cent below that of May, 1929.

Clothing prices as a whole declined 0.3 per cent from April to May, women's clothing prices fell off 0.7 per cent, and men's clothing prices, 0.1 per cent. Clothing prices in May of this year were 1.9 per cent lower than in May of last year and 25.1 per cent lower than in May, 1929, but 21.3 per cent higher than in April, 1933.

Coal prices decreased seasonally, 3.4 per cent from April to May, but they were 2.6 per cent higher than in May, 1935. Since May, 1929, they have declined 6.8 per cent.

The cost of sundries declined slightly, 0.1 per cent, from April to May because of a small decrease in the prices of housefurnishings. The cost of sundries, however, was 1.2 per cent higher than a year ago, and 4.8 per cent higher than in April, 1936, but 4.8 per cent lower than in May, 1929.

The purchasing value of the dollar was 118.2 cents in May, 1936, as compared with 118.6 cents in April, 1936, 120.6 cents in May, 1935, and 100 cents in 1923.

B. & O. Promotes Petri To Be Chief Engineer.

Baltimore, June 12.—P. Petri, for the past ten years engineer, maintenance of way, of the eastern lines of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, has been appointed chief engineer of maintenance of the entire system, succeeding the late Earl Stimson.

The appointment is effective at once and is announced by C. W. Galloway, vice president of operations and maintenance. Mr. Petri entered the Baltimore & Ohio's employ as an assistant engineer in the construction department at Cincinnati, Ohio, August 4, 1899.

Auto Production Maintains Level

Detroit, July 12 (AP).—Cram's Reports, Inc., estimated output of the motor car factories this week at 100,415 cars and trucks, compared with 101,752 last week and 82,788 in the corresponding week a year ago.

Ward's Reports placed production for the current week at 98,560 units compared with 98,106 in the previous week. Ward's placed assemblies of the General Motors group at 44,198 against 43,823 last week; the Chrysler group at 23,475 against 22,975, and Ford at 18,760 compared with 20,124.

Am. Tel. & Tel. Denies Group Controls Stock

No Holder Owns as Much as 1 Per Cent, Executive Says.

New York, June 12.—Arthur W. Page, vice president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., replied yesterday to a statement made before the Federal Communications Commission that 5 per cent of the stockholders held one-half the company's stock by reasserting the company's contention that it was owned by many persons, none of whom has control.

The statement concerning the holdings of 5 per cent of the company's stockholders was made on Wednesday by Dr. N. R. Danielian in the commission's inquiry into the A. T. & T.

"The A. T. & T. has stated many times," said Mr. Page, "that it is a publicly owned company in that its stock is widely distributed and that no one owner owns as much as 1 per cent of its stock.

"The testimony of the Federal Communications Commission's investigator yesterday that 5 per cent of the stockholders own 50 per cent of the stock has apparently been interpreted as questioning the truth of the company's statement. That fact is that the 5 per cent represents 32,500 stockholders holding on the average about 280 shares each.

"The balance of the stock is owned by some 617,500 persons. The fundamental fact remains that the company is a publicly owned institution, that its stock is widely distributed through 650,000 holders and that it is not controlled by any small group of people."

Stocks Recede After Early Advance as Profit-Taking Follows Convention; Wheat Lower.

New York, June 12.—With the good news out at the Republican convention the speculative markets opened higher and active and then gave way to profit taking, the first weakness for several days. Closing prices were mostly slightly lower. Turnover was again around 1,000,000 shares. September wheat shelved off ⅜ of a cent to 85½ cents a bushel.

In the first quarter of an hour the markets advanced in active trading. In view of the recent tendency to slow openings the spurt may be attributed to satisfaction with the Landon nomination, the Republican platform, and a hope for their success. However, the markets realize that the fight will be a hard one, and speculators rarely let their judgment on probabilities suffer from too much outside influence. It is too early in the campaign for the stock market to make a prediction. Its current firmness probably is based partly on the business position independent of politics, partly on the hope of overthrowing the New Deal and partly on the supposition that even with success for the present Administration it will require some time yet for the piper to be paid.

Gold Promise Liked.

Most men in the financial district found the Republican platform, with the Landon additions and reservations, acceptable. The speculative element which frankly hopes for a dose of inflation were not dismayed by the tone of the set of principles adopted by the anti-New Dealers. With the possible exception of an ultra-orthodox sect member here and there, the monetary platform was found satisfactory. It contained the all-important declaration on the gold standard as something good and desirable in itself, but it held out no promise of a violent upset in the position in case of Republican victory which a straight promise of immediate return to gold might have done.

The platform in Wall Street's opinion goes as far on the gold standard as it is prudent at this time to go. The feeling prevails that it wouldn't do to tie our own hands while the currencies of other great trading countries are flexible, however desirable from a domestic standpoint a prompt return to gold might be. Just the same, with a sound money man in the White House world stabilization of currencies at an early date would be probable.

Ending Uncertainty.

One of the most important parts of the platform, thought many in the financial district, was the declaration that "We will restore to the Congress the authority lodged with it by the Constitution to coin money and regulate the value thereof by repealing all the laws delegating this authority to the Executive." That settles the question of the daily fear of devaluation, subjection of our monetary system to the passing fancies of this or that traveling economist who chances to catch the Executive eye, and removes it from the changing whims of politicians, governed by the rise and fall of commodity prices.

As the platform says, sound money rests on a balanced budget, and it is the high and wide spending that constitutes the chief menace of the New Dealers. On the record and expressed intention of the New Deal opposition with regard to spending rests the hope of pulling the country out of the economic fire before it is too late.

Sterling Strong.

Recent trends were accentuated in the foreign exchange market. The ominous strike situation in France and quick passage by the French Chamber of a bill providing for a 40 hour week caused renewed weakness in francs, the London-Paris cross rate going close to last week's low at 76.42 francs to the pound. This pushed sterling in the local market above $5.03. Francs for spot delivery were unchanged at the gold point, supported there by further large engagements of metal. Since April 24 France has lost to this country almost $300,000,000 of its gold reserves.

In stocks a dozen issues made up more than a quarter of the trading. Among the new active stocks were E. G. Budd, United Corporation, Socony - Vacuum, Commonwealth, Consolidated Edison, Columbia Gas, Allied Stores, General Motors and Radio. Aside from the favored stocks and the utilities minus signs in the price-change column were in the majority toward the close of trading, in spite of the firm tone at the beginning.

Stock Movements.

Telephone quoted ex dividend, lost a point. Engineers Public Service preferred shares sold at new high prices. Chrysler and General Motors were inclined to weaken. Santa Fe was firm, but other rails were lthargic. In the food group Corn Products went through some profit taking. The squeeze in the potato market is helping the stock, for C. P. is a competitor of potato starch. Minor recessions were recorded in the small orders. Oils were weak. Standard dropped in the last hour. Indiana declined.

Steels, tobaccos and metals softened. Liquors turned steadier. Bon Ami A shares had a hard time. A drop of 4 points to a new low price was followed by advertised bids and offers with the offering price under the last sale, and then a fresh drop of 3 points. B. I. T. and B. Q. T. shares worked higher on hints of increased fares under unification.

Underwood dropped 2 points, selling ex rights.

Reparations.

Investors in Dow Chemical who happened to see an Interstate Commerce Commission order issued yesterday directing repayment of overcharges on freight shipments of the company must have imagined a windfall. There were 270 items to be paid on or before July 23 by 44 railroads, but the total involved is only $18,850, or about 2 cents a share, plus interest at 6 per cent from the dates of payment of the original charges.

Reserve Notes.

Only two Federal Reserve Banks now are using Government securities as part of the collateral for notes. They are the banks of Atlanta and Kansas City. The latter has reduced to $2,000,000 the amount of Government obligations so pledged, and probably will have all its notes entirely backed by gold certificates in a week or so. The Atlanta bank, more deficient in gold than other regional institutions, is still pledging $35,000,000 of Government obligations and probably will have to continue to use them.

Freight Traffic 10½ Per Cent Above Year Ago

Revenue Loadings for Week of June 6 Total 695,-845 Cars.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended June 6 totaled 695,845 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 66,133 cars, or 10.5 per cent, above the corresponding week in 1935, and 79,077 cars, or 12.8 per cent, above the corresponding week in 1934. Loading of revenue freight for the week of June 6 was an increase of 48,986 cars, or 7.6 per cent, above the preceding week, which included a holiday.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 289,531 cars, an increase of 26,647 cars above the preceding week, 57,106 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 47,146 cars above the corresponding week in 1934.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 165,065 cars, an increase of 20,077 cars above the preceding week, 8,174 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 2,080 cars above the same week in 1934.

Coal loading amounted to 102,549 cars, a decrease of 11,473 cars below the preceding week, and 38,470 cars below the corresponding week in 1935. It was, however, an increase of 633 cars above the same week in 1934.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 31,690 cars, an increase of 1,956 cars abov the preceding week, 7,176 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 862 cars above the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended June 6 totaled 20,055 cars, an increase of 1,688 cars above the preceding week this year, and 1,802 cars above the same week in 1935.

Livestock Gains.

Livestock loading amounted to 11,802 cars, an increase of 1,459 cars above the preceding week, and 891 cars above the same week in 1935, but a decrease of 3,327 cars below the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, loading of livestock for the week ended June 6 totaled 8,788 cars, an increase of 1,342 cars above the preseding week this year and 924 cars above the same week in 1935.

Forest products loading totaled 34,762 cars, an increase of 3,607 cars above the preceding week, 8,943 cars above the same week in 1935, and 10,161 cars above the same week in 1934.

Ore loading amounted to 52,137 cars, an increase of 7,482 cars above the preceding week, 19,39 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 20,137 cars above the corresponding week in 1934.

Coke loading amounted to 8,309 cars, a decrease of 769 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 2,574 cars above the same week in 1935, and 1,385 cars above the same week in 1934.

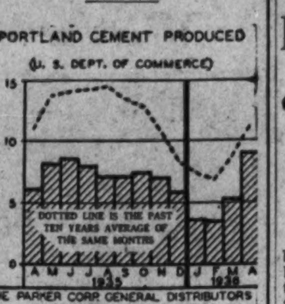
All districts reported increases in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight, compared with the corresponding week in 1935, except the Pocohontas. All districts reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

First Federal Votes 1½ Per Cent Dividend

The First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Alexandria has grown almost 1500 per cent in assets since it began active business about six months ago, C. T. Nicholson, executive officer, told the association's board of directors at their June meeting. The board declared a semi-annual dividend of one and one-half per cent, as of June 30, payable to shareholders on or about July 6.

Officers of the association are Wallace N. Lindsey, president; Charles T. Nicholson, vice president and executive officer; Albert A. Smoot, secretary, and John G. Graham, treasurer. The other directors include: M. H. Burchell, Dr. M. D. Delaney, Charles A. Keefer, John J. Kiger, Beverly C. May, Eugene J. Olmi, Alan B. Procise, and Henry P. Thomas.

Cement Production Gains 40% in Year



Boston, Mass., June 12.—Production of Portland cement in April was the largest for any April since 1931, and exceeded a year ago by 40 per cent. One-quarter more cement was produced in the first four months of this year than in the same 1935 months. A further favorable development is that shipments are exceeding production by a good margin,, thus reducing stocks.

Canadian Rains Depress Wheat

Chicago, June 12 (AP).—Lower prices for wheat resulted late today from good rains in parts of Alberta Province, Canada, together with prospective showers both in Manitoba and Saskatchewan. Upturns that wheat values scored earlier were more than wiped out despite news of a dust storm in North Dakota.

Sloan Opposes Laws to Rule Dividend Policy

Control Would Be Serious Blow to Business, Says General Motors Head.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 12.—American business would be seriously harmed by any laws which sought to control the dividend policies of industrial enterprise, Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president of General Motors Corporation, declared today in a letter to the company's stockholders.

Sloan's views were given in a communication accompanying the corporation's quarterly dividend checks, which included the regular quarterly disbursement of 50 cents and an extra payment of 75 cents.

The company, he said, acknowledges the desirability of "permitting the profits of business, in whatever form it may be organized, to flow into active channels of commerce to the maximum possible degree," but at the same time I oppose determination of stockholders' returns by legislative processes.

"To define by law what is desirable is practically impossible," Sloan asserted. "Law must be specific, and the many varied and unusual circumstances which constantly arise, in dealing with such problems can be evaluated intelligently only on an individual basis with all the facts available, and even then only by those familiar with the conditions, both current and prospective."

Sloan's remarks were apparently inspired by the pending revenue bill, with its provisions for taxes on undistributed profits, although his letter did not directly refer to the bill.

"The rise of American business," he said, "has been characterized by modest beginnings, developing through the process of evolution into important enterprises, largely through the employment of accumulated profits by aggressive and intelligent management. To interfere with such a logical and sound evolution would be little short of a catastrophe."

Petroleum Register Largest Since 1917

New York, June 12.—The seventeenth annual edition of the Petroleum Register has just been issued. The new edition is the largest since 1917. It contains approximately 900 pages with information on 23,000 oil companies.

There are 25 sections covering every branch of the petroleum industry. It includes a complete list of oil refiners, crude oil producers, compounders and grease manufacturers, gasoline manufacturers, pipe line companies and marketers and jobbers and also contains a comprehensive statistical section.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 12.—The stock market closed firm today, operators being encouraged by recent favorable dividend announcements. Transatlantic shares, industrials, oils and home rails moved higher and kaffirs were strong on Cape Town and local buying. Mexican Eagle oil issues advanced sharply following the dividend announcement.

Paris—Prices closed generally firm in the bourse although some sections, including coal and industrials, moved irregularly. International shares held firm and French issues strengthened on the government's announced measures to maintain order in strike districts.

Liverpool—Wheat futures closed about one penny higher on continental and American buying and reports of insufficient rains in Australia. Cotton closed quiet. Bombay buying and scattered speculative support on the strong statistical position met profit-taking.

Dried Fruits Steady.

New York, June 12 (AP).—Dried fruits steady, unchanged.

Tobacco Markets.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., June 12.—Maryland—The figures this week are receipts, 600 hogsheads; sales, 1,791 hogsheads. The actual new offerings this week were about 1,500 hogsheads, and most of which were sold, but the sales included some 500 hogsheads of old crop. Prices for new crop were higher than before excepting for the best grade, which remained at 40 cents.

Ohio—Nothing doing.

Maryland—Due to dry weather, particularly in St. Marys, Charles and lower Prince Georges counties, where very little tobacco has been transplanted, it is estimated that only about 15 per cent of the intended crop is now in the field.

Maryland firm leaf—Nondescript, 3@4; common, 4@10; medium, 10@25; good to fine, red, 25@40.

Seconds—Common, 3@7; medium, 7@12; good to fine, 12@25.

Ohio—Fine and fine cured, common to medium, 4@8; good to fine, 8@18; spangled, common to medium, 7@20; good to fine, yellow, 20@45.

N.B.—Unsound and badly mixed packages from 2@3 lower.

†Officially listed on application by the corporation.

Other securities are admitted to dealings as "unlisted" on application of a regular member and approval by the listing committee and the board of governors.

Rates of dividends in the foregoing table are annual disbursements based on the last quarterly or semi-annual declaration. Unless otherwise noted, special or extra dividends are not included.

First Lady Lauds Spirit of Women

Dallas, Tex., June 12 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt lauded the awakened sense of responsibility of American women in a short address here today.

Women are conservers of the Nation and are faced with a new era in which wasteful methods must be eliminated, warfare between classes discorded and a spirit of co-operation developed, she said.

"We must learn how to work together. Instead of individualism there must be co-operation," the First Lady declared.

"As we look pack, in years to come, on the depression, there will be several factors for which we will be grateful. First, we will be glad it was as severe as it was. In other depressions we went on until we reached the bottom. In this one the human values were too great; too many were involved. We could not go to the bottom because we would not have been able to come up again."

Mad Felon Blamed In Iowan's Murder

Council Bluffs, Iowa, June 12 (AP). Sheriff Joe Perry said tonight he believed Lawrence De Vol, escaped Minnesota felon, and his companions were responsible for the slaying last night of Henry Plummer, 38, filling station attendant.

Plummer was kidnaped from his station and taken into the country where he was shot four times.

Police said the men who invaded the filling station took $18 from the cash register, stole seven gallons of gas and then ripped off the license plates from a car parked nearby.

Sheriff Perry's theory that De Vol was involved was strengthened by the story of Delbert Dorman, hamburger stand employe, who said a man he served yesterday resembled pictures of Al (Scarface) Saroko. He escaped last Sunday from the Minnesota Asylum for the Criminally Insane with De Vol.

Several hours after the body of Plummer was found, officers reported finding near Shenandoah, Iowa, a car stolen Tuesday at Sioux Rapids, Iowa.

Britain Agrees To Soviet Fleet Size of Japan's

Russia Renounces Exemption Demands in Trade on New 2-Power Pact.

By the United Press.

London, June 12.—Great Britain tonight agreed to a provision in the proposed Anglo-Soviet naval treaty allowing Russia to match Japan's fleet in the Pacific.

Despite provisions for mutual exchange of information on building programs, the treaty will permit Russia complete secrecy regarding her Far Eastern fleet. This means that Russia will be bound to inform Britain only of her program for building warships to be stationed in European waters.

Secrecy will apply to all Russian warships operating in the Pacific and craft to be built for the Soviet Far Eastern fleet.

In return for this concession, Russia agreed to renounce demands that her Asiatic fleet be exempted from the tonnage and gunnage limits fixed by the March 25 Anglo-United States-French treaty.

This compromise agreement was reached at a short meeting of British and Russian naval experts at the foreign office.

However, if Russia learns that Japan is constructing outsize warships exceeding the limits of the March 25 treaty, of which the island empire is not a signatory, Russia, without notifying Britain, may immediately build warships to match the Japanese craft.

Unless Japan starts a race of super-ships, Russia's Far Eastern fleet will be kept within the qualitative treaty limits agreed to by the United States, Britain and France.

Moscow will be obliged to inform London of her annual building programs only in connection with her Baltic and Black Sea fleets.

This provision may imply British recognition of Soviet Russia's defense requirements in view of Japan's Far Eastern policy.

The compromise agreement will be one of the most important provisions in the impending bi-lateral treaty, the drafting of which will require several more weeks.

Other technical points will be discussed when negotiations are resumed next Wednesday.

Nanking Forces Heading South; War Imminent

Leaders of Both Northern and Canton Soldiers Admit Threat.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, June 10.—Big detachments of the Nanking (Central) government army marched southward today and were believed dangerously close to troops of the militant Canton (South China) government.

Conservative leaders in both Nanking and Canton reluctantly admitted they believed hostilities were imminent.

(Both Honkong and Canton dispatches said southern troops, which advanced into Hunan Province—of the Central government — were withdrawing. Nanking fliers dropped pamphlets warning against further advances, these reports said. War-like tension was said to have receded.)

A Nanking spokesman said his government still hoped to effect a settlement of issues leading to the hostile Canton gestures. He added significantly:

"But the national government is fully prepared for emergencies."

While Nanking is undoubtedly striving to avoid civil war, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek is not overlooking preparedness.

Changhsa, capital of Hunan—which adjoins the Canton province of Kwangtung—is becoming a Nanking mobilization center. Large troop movements are going on in the central Yangtze Valley, all heading for Changsha.

Still other detachments have left Changsha for the south and are believed nearing the Southerners.

Nanking apparently is relying heavily upon its air force to shatter the Southern threat if hostilities begin. Several squadrons of American-built bombers and pursuit craft are in Changsha.

Unconfirmed reports said Nanking fliers already had swept over the Canton lines, dropping handbills urging the Southern troops to refuse to oppose Nanking.

The Southerners also are credited with having a formidable air force.

As the Southern threat develops Chinese sources said they were growing more convinced it was a Japanese-inspired effort to embarrass and weaken Nanking, with Canton playing the leading opposition role under Japanese direction.
